"PERSEVERANCE CONQUERS."

There was a meeting of the Executive Committee of the State Government, held at the residence of the Governor, on the 14th inst. The meeting was held in the afternoon, and was attended by the Governor, the Secretary, and the members of the Executive Committee. The subject of the meeting was the proposed amendment to the Constitution, which would give the State Government the power to issue bonds for the purpose of raising money to pay the interest on the State debt. The Governor expressed his opposition to the amendment, and stated that he would not sign it. The Executive Committee then adjourned.

The second statement of Theodore Tilton was published in the New York Tribune on the 14th inst. The statement is a long and detailed account of the events which led to the publication of the "Tilton Papers." Tilton states that he was induced to publish the papers by a man named "A," who offered him a large sum of money if he would do so. Tilton refused the offer, but "A" threatened to expose him if he did not comply. Tilton then published the papers, and "A" immediately disappeared.

The Executive Committee of the Merchants' Exchange has also telegraphed the Board of the 16th Ward, and has requested that they should be allowed to hold a meeting in the ward. The Board has refused the request, and has stated that it is not the business of the Board to hold meetings in the ward. The Executive Committee has then threatened to bring a suit against the Board, and has stated that it will do so if the Board does not change its decision.

Immediately upon the receipt of the President's proclamation the bank and insurance agents held a meeting and forwarded a dispatch to the President, calling upon him to recognize and guarantee the Government of the United States. A riot occurred in the Ninth Ward about midnight, but it was quickly subdued, and at last accounts there were no further disturbances.

On the evening of the 14th Acting-Gov. Penn sent to the President a dispatch announcing the deposition of the Kellogg Government, and declaring that the party he represented were sincerely loyal to the United States, and were ready to support the Government of the United States. The Acting-Gov. also announced that he would issue a proclamation to the people, and that he would call upon them to support the Government of the United States.

The Associated Press dispatches from New Orleans on the 16th furnish the following intelligence: The city is in a state of quietude, and there was a very general resumption of business, with no gatherings of people or evidences of excitement. A telegram had been sent to President Grant, signed by the Acting-Gov. of Louisiana, and by the members of the Executive Committee of the Merchants' Exchange, in which they requested that they should be allowed to hold a meeting in the ward.

What are we to think of this evidence of civil strife in from the Washington Chronicle? "If thievery in journalism were punishable with death we should be the sole surviving journalist of this unhappy country."

A riot in Dubuque slipped up-stairs into a house where a party was being held, and got into a room where the tables were stored, which he proceeded to devour. The Telegraph says the riot was chased until he was captured.

The theory of a subterranean river connecting the waters of New Lake Superior and Lake Ontario is revived. It is regarded as absolutely necessary to account for the presence of salines and herding in the New Orleans and Florida States. As a very pretty girl asked a young man on the Maine Railroad the other morning if the vacant seat by his side was engaged, he replied: "No, miss, it is not. I am not engaged. I am only a poor fellow who has been waiting for a vacant seat for some time."

The cards were served. Sam lit a cigar and started for the hotel. If he had waited he would have seen the tallest man in the room. He was a tall, thin man, with a long nose, and a very large head. He was wearing a top hat, and a long coat. He was looking at the cards, and was very much interested in them.

There was but one hand at the table that can win that pot, gentlemen! It is about big enough? I will see you, Colonel!

Two more lights and a call brought the game to a focus. Perseverance stood up, and looked at the cards. He was a tall, thin man, with a long nose, and a very large head. He was wearing a top hat, and a long coat. He was looking at the cards, and was very much interested in them.
