NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Compiled from Telegrams of Accompanying Dates. . Medicines Monday, April 5. ABOUT 12:30 on the morning of the 4th the Chicago express train collided with the Pacific express train on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, near Tyrone, Iowa. Both engines and several cars were demolshed. H. L. Miller, conductor; C. M. Pickle, fireman, and W. A. Gardner, express messenger, were instantly killed, and several other rain employes were injured, some fatally. Several passengers were reported slightly vounded. The accident is said to have been caused by the telegraph operator at Tyrone neglecting his instructions to hold and Lippitt. the Chicago-bound train until the other train had passed that point.

The Wonders Discovered by the Micro-

A "magnifying glass" used to be regarded as a mere toy to please and amuse children and youth, and with little, if any, farther practical purpose. Anyone can prepare objects for inspection, and they are everywhere. In the summer time every drop of stag-nant ditch water teams with life. The wing, eye, or foot of a fly is a subject for a world of study. A human hair assumes the proportions of a crowbar; the horns of a caterpillar become as large as a walking-cane, and armed with barbs like a fish-hook; in fact, there is no end to the great variety of objects, and they exist all around us. But our purpose at this time was more particularly to speak of a few of the revelations of the microscope, some of which are quite recent. Mr. Nobert, of Pomerania, has ruled a series of lines on glass which have attracted much attenare nineteen of these bands of lines, the coarsest of which are separated by the petal of a flower," with an upward tend-11,000th part of an English inch. These statements might be multiplied almost indefinitely, but they are sufficient to show that we are surrounded by wonders, of which we could have no conception whatever without the aid of the microscope. "The very dust on which we tread was cace alive," and if we examine it as closely as we may today we shall find that much of it is living yet, and that, living or dead, it is wonderful and beautiful beyond description.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.
