THE SCHOOLS.
 On last Saturday evening was a merited success. We have never seen Fitzgerald Hall so full since we have lived here. Prof. Wightman deserves great credit for the arrangement of the programme which gave us such pleasure. The teachers also, who drilled the scholars, first gave us great attention to their duties, and have shown an aptitude in making wise selections to fill the different places that might well be imitated by the politicians and people of this country when selecting public officials, committee men and persons to fill other important positions of trust.

THE EXHIBITION.
 was held in Fitzgerald Hall, which was filled to overflowing, not less than 600 persons, adults and children, being present. After some very pleasant recitations by scholars a great and glorious pyramid of beautiful young misses appeared as the curtain rolled up. From the base of the apex, as high as the stage would admit of, 26 feet, a galaxy of smiling, innocent and beautiful girl faces greeted the admiring audience.

THE SCHOOLS.
 burst upon us. A very happy dialogue in which the abundance of the ordinary modes of judging the qualifications of a teacher was most happily shown up. One young lady (imperfectly) insisted on the poor blushing, modest dame of a school teacher, who was an applicant, having a thorough knowledge of Latin being her husband's cousin Dr. Livingston thought that asine qua non to every good education.

 It was very well executed throughout. The speaking of the Declaration of Independence was particularly appropriate at this time and was particularly well done, every last taking up his part here and there, wherever he might be in the audience, at just the right time and place, and as their clear, honest young voices rang out the great and solemn truths, enunciated in that wonderful piece of composition, we feel that they are being properly prepared to take part in the real drama of life in a few years and that they will enlist heart and soul under the banner of truth, liberty and equality.

 We were very much pleased in the bright and elegant manner in which the scholars who came before the audience acted their parts. It is the hardest thing in the world generally to get children to "speak up" as it is called, here they did, from little Miss French to the largest scholar there. Somebody deserves great credit for their drilling, and they themselves deserve the approbation of parents, teachers and audience for diligence in committing their parts and obedience to instructions in speaking them.

 It is the duty and right of a newspaper to some extent to criticize, correct and award praise or blame. An over dose of either does no good. Pious adulation or indiscriminate blame never encourage to better efforts or check wrong doing. We express our honest opinion above on the well doing of those who acted and who acted in commendation of the disorderly conduct of many in the room and some of those on the stage when their parts were over.

THE SCHOOLS.
 The room was so noisy that many of the best points in all the pieces were lost by the greater part of the audience. Cannot the young people see that they destroyed the effect of their own exertions, or that of their brothers and sisters whom they came to see and hear by keeping up such a noise and chatter. All public speakers, be they children or grown up, should have a full audience and to have them hear what
