

Infant Gasping for Life Saved by Cooled Milk

Mother Cries With Thankfulness as Visiting Nurse Does Good With The Omaha Bee Fund.

Little Veronica, only a few months old, lay on the miserable bed in her wretched home on the South Side, fairly gasping for life. The Visiting Nurse talks to the baby's worried mother. The father is dead. The nurse called up a certain number. "And hurry it up," she said after her conversation.

A short time later, after the nurse had done numerous things for the baby and the mother, she had arrived with the big bottle of cool, pure milk. How the baby drank! How the poor mother cried with thankfulness! How the baby went peacefully to sleep with a contented sigh!

Such work The Omaha Bee's fund for supplying milk to the babies of the very poor is doing every day. It is in great need of contributions. Will you help some poor Veronica? Mail or bring what you can to The Omaha Bee office and it will be thankfully acknowledged.

"Little Mothers" Show How to Care for Babies

Practical demonstrations in the correct care of babies were given by nine "little mothers," between the ages of 10 and 13, at an institute for public health nurses given yesterday in the city hall by Miss Charlotte Townsend, superintendent of school nurses.

The girls know more about proper care of infants than their mothers in many instances, said Miss Grace Jardine, from whom the girls received training in summer classes at Mason and Long schools.

Proper manner of bathing a baby, healthful clothing for summer wear and correct diet were demonstrated and discussed by the "little mothers." "Pacifiers" and soothing syrups were condemned by the girls, who not only care for their own small brothers and sisters, but educate their neighbors to the same standards.

Miss Townsend entertained the girls at luncheon in her rooms following the demonstration.

Bryden Claim Against Baum Estate Refused

The $570 claim of William Bryden against the $2,000,000 J. E. Baum estate was refused by County Judge Crawford. Attempts of Bryden's attorneys to have the case continued were overruled. The plaintiff's claim was for services he alleged he performed in connection with the accounting of the estate's books.

Mother of Mrs. James Corbett Succumbs at Home Here

Mrs. James S. Taylor, 68, 1909 Cuming street, mother-in-law of James J. Corbett, former champion prizefighter, died at 1 yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Corbett was at her bedside.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES MORE TALES OF CUFFY BEAR BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER XVII Busy Mrs. Bear.

Cuffy Bear's mother was a very busy person. She took the best of care of her children. She saw that they had plenty of sleep and plenty of good food. Getting the family's meals was no easy task, for they were great eaters. Mrs. Bear sometimes complained that their meals

It took her a long time to get enough for dinner. She took so much time she hadn't much left for keeping her home neat. It seemed as if her children were always hungry.

Mrs. Bear said that Cuffy and Silkie got their big appetites from their father. Certainly Mr. Bear could stow away a huge amount of this, that and the other and still want more.

In the spring he frequently grumbled about what he called "poor pickings." By that he meant that food was scarce in the woods. Later, when the berries were ripe in the pasture, and the apples in Farmer Green's orchard, Mr. Bear had little to complain of. Besides, if he didn't fancy fruit, there were mice and

"That which" asked Mr. Bear. "That potpourri" his wife repeated. "Oh—er—yes," he stammered. He looked very, very uncomfortable. Cuffy Bear pricked up his ears. That was a new word. "What does that mean, Pa?" he inquired.

Mr. Bear said he couldn't stop to explain. He simply had to hurry away on important business. "If you have any questions to ask, ask them of your mother," he said. Then he shuttled off.

"What does it mean, Ma?" Cuffy demanded.

"A mixture!" she replied. "And I'm surprised that your father didn't know it!"

"He ate it, anyhow," Cuffy observed.

"Yes. There's nothing the matter with your father's appetite," she said with a sigh. "It's no wonder I'm the busiest person in the neighborhood."

Powers Succeeds King as Air Field Manager

James T. King, removed as manager of the Omaha air mail field, will be succeeded by Frank Powers of Washington, D. C., former manager of the Minneapolis field, who will arrive today to assume his duties. A. K. Dunphy, superintendent of the central division, announced. No other changes in personnel have been made as a result of charges filed by pilots and mechanics. Central division service has been practically 100 per cent perfect the last 80 days, Dunphy stated.

Two Boys Missing

Norman Novak, 10, 714 Hickory street, and Bob Milacek, 13, 5130 Nicholas street, disappeared after being sent on errands Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Emma Whitesel, mother of Norman, told police she is certain her son was kidnaped. Bob Milacek is said to have been seen entering an auto at Fifty-second and Spencer streets at the invitation of a motorist.
