

New Way to Reach Argonaut Mine Prisoners Found

120-Foot Stope Discovered Above 3,600-Foot Level Where Penetration to Men May Be Speeded.

Jackson, Cal., Sept. 11.—(By A. P.)—Discovery last night of a 120-foot stope above the 3,600-foot level of the Kennedy mine may bring rescue workers directly to the final barrier of rock on this level and may cut down by several days the time required to batter through to the Argonaut mine, where 47 men have been entombed by fire since two weeks ago last midnight. It was announced today by V. C. Garbarini, superintendent of the Argonaut. Garbarini is exploring the stope and said he would be able to determine today whether the stope was open, or whether it was safe for rescue work. He expressed the opinion, however, that it not only was open but feasible to use. If this stope is used instead of the 3,600-foot level, it means that approximately 100 feet of rock will have to be drilled instead of 75, but the entombed men would be reached several days sooner, it is thought. In addition to finding the stope, rescue workers came upon an open raise between the 3,600 and 3,700-foot levels. Muck, rocks and timbering now may be dumped into this raise instead of being hauled back several hundred feet in wheelbarrows, and officials asserted that this would greatly reduce the work. Clarence F. Jarvis of the state board of control has arrived here as Governor William D. Stephens' representative to conduct a full investigation of the Argonaut disaster. Air conditions in the Argonaut shaft as shown by samples taken in the Muldoon shaft of the Argonaut mine, show almost 6 per cent of carbon dioxide and less than one-half of 1 per cent of the deadly carbon monoxide gas. The fan at the top of the Muldoon shaft is pulling out 30,000 cubic feet of air a minute and the air carries stinging odors. Gas analysis reports tend to show that the fire in the Argonaut virtually has burned out. It is believed by company and state officials that the fire has spread to the bottom of the shaft, due to the falling burning timbers.

Light Frost at Valentine Sunday Is Reported Here

Light frost at Valentine—the first of the coming season—was reported Sunday to the local weather bureau. The lowest recorded in Omaha since the heat wave broke Friday was 50 at 6 yesterday morning, and at the same hour Sunday. King Ak-Sar-Ben has taken out weather insurance to protect the evening shows of his annual festival at Ak-Sar-Ben field against more than one-tenth of an inch of rainfall. M. V. Robins, meteorologist, yesterday loaned the bureau's rain gauge to Sanson until after the festival.

Novel Irrigation Method to Be Inspected by Omabans

A novel method of irrigating semi-fertile land near Lexington, Neb., by soaking the ground six feet deep once a year with water from the Platte river, is to be inspected by members of the agricultural committee of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce Wednesday. Among those who will leave Omaha at 4:30 afternoon for Lexington are Carl Gray and J. W. Holdrege.

Nebraska Medicine School Alumni Here for Reunion

More Than 115 Out-of-Town Physicians Expected—Program Includes Clinic Lectures and Ward Walks.

Homecoming of "grads" from many distant points features the 13th annual reunion of University of Nebraska medical alumni. A five-day session opened yesterday at Hotel Fontenelle. Dr. Frederick Phillips, '98, second vice president and the only woman officer, is expected to arrive today from Seattle, Wash. More than 115 out-of-town physicians are expected, according to the president, Dr. Edward L. Rohlf of Waterloo, Ia. The reunion programs are professional in their nature and include clinic lectures and ward walks in the University and Methodist hospitals each morning.

Round Table Held

Following the opening luncheon at the Fontenelle yesterday, Dr. John J. Fossler and Dr. Clyde Roeder led a round table on "The Specialist and the General Practitioner." A general clinic was scheduled for last night at the University hospital dispensary. A smoker tonight at the Fontenelle; adjournment for Ak-Sar-Ben harness race Wednesday afternoon, class reunions in the evening; and a dinner dance at the Field club Thursday night are included in the social program. Committee in Charge. The medical college of the University of Nebraska was established by affiliation of the old Omaha Medical college about 20 years ago. Doctors George B. Potter, Clyde Moore, George Pratt, Lynn Hall, Sanford Gifford, Louis Hanisch and Ernest Johnson are the committee on arrangements. Mesdames William N. Anderson, Pratt, E. W. Niehaus, W. A. Cassidy and S. K. Gifford are in charge of entertainment of women visitors.

Nebraska Will Take Part in Legion Essay Contest

That Nebraska will take an active part in the national essay contest for school children to whom prizes are offered by the American Legion on the subject of how the legion can best serve the community, state and nation, was assured by John M. Matzer, state superintendent of public instruction, who said that his department had sent out thousands of circulars to the public school principals, city and county superintendents and others in the state urging wide participation by Nebraska school children, and containing a statement of the conditions of the contest. All manuscript must be in the hands of county superintendents by October 6, Mr. Matzer said.

Heavy Criminal Docket Is Called at Nebraska City

Nebraska City, Neb., Sept. 11.—(Special.)—The September term of district court opens here Tuesday with the largest criminal docket for many years. The case of George Flessner of Burr, charged with the murder of Joshua Howard of that village, will begin on Tuesday. There are several other criminal cases, chief among them being that of Dr. M. A. Carriger, physician, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. D. E. Dewey, following an alleged criminal operation. The husband of the dead woman is also held on a similar charge.

Progressives Fill Out Party Ticket

Formal Filing Made With State by State Central Committee.

James L. Beebe and W. H. Green, chairman and secretary, respectively, of the progressive party state central committee, sent to Lincoln yesterday a formal filing of various members of the party to fill vacancies on the progressive ticket. The action was authorized by the committee. Principal of the vacancies filled was Rev. James L. Beebe of Omaha in place of Arthur G. Wray of York, Mr. Wray having announced his intention of supporting R. B. Howell, the republican nominee. Harry C. Parmenter of Yutan was named for governor in accordance with action of the recent Grand Island convention. Other nominations by the committee were: For attorney general, J. M. Paul of Harvard; for railway commissioner, Clyde J. Fernandes of Omaha; for state treasurer, Edward Shugrone of Bartley; for land commissioner, Mary H. Astell of North Platte. In each case the primary winner was disqualified because he also sought the democratic nomination to accept it in case he tried to win both and lost the major preference.

Barrows Files Claim for $935.61 Salary

Lincoln, Sept. 11.—(Special.)—Claim for $935.61 as pay for the time he served as acting governor, to be deducted from Governor S. R. McKelvie's salary of $7,500 a year, was filed with the state auditor today by Lieutenant Governor Pitham A. Barrows. Remuneration for 39 days, excluding 10 Sundays, during the years 1921-22, at a rate of $23.99 a day, is asked in the claim. Including Sundays, the governor's pay is $20,821.33 a year. The claim states that Barrows' service was performed on notice from the governor's office at times when the governor was out of the state and that Barrows never assumed the executive's duties except upon the latter's request. At the state finance department it was learned that the governor had drawn his full salary for the period covered by Mr. Barrows' claim. State Auditor George W. Marsh will refer the claim to the attorney general before taking any action. Strike Posters Missing: Battle of Letters Rages. A battle of letters is on between Harvey Thomas, deputy United States marshal, and strike leaders in Long Pine, Neb., and the return of some window cards, confiscated by Jerry O'Connor, special deputy, on strike duty. After O'Connor removed the strike placards from Long Pine windows and sent them on to Omaha he was instructed that he overstepped his authority. Strike leaders demanded the return of the posters or $10 in cash. Uncle Sam has no fund for the return of the $10. And no one knows where the posters are. Hence the avalanche of correspondence, according to Thomas.
