Sorority Dance.

The festive season for the school set was ushered in Friday night in a most brilliant way, with a beautifully arranged dancing party given in the Eagles hall, by the Theta Sigma Phi.

A color scheme of red and black made the appointments for this affair decidedly smart and very unusual. As the guests entered the ballroom, two tiny pages in striking costumes, carrying out this color scheme, presented them with red programs, from which were suspended black tassels and pencils.

The myriads of lights were covered with red blossoms, and from the ceiling black streamers were attached to hoops of red.

A nine-piece orchestra, with twin pianos, furnished music for a long program of dances, and after the intermission a novel favor dance was introduced. For this four prizes were awarded; bougainvillee for the two girls and cigarette cases for the men.

The "Santa Sack" Game

By GERTRUDE WALTON.

Before my children were old enough to question about the existence of Santa Claus, whenever we saw a picture of the jolly old man we called him Sunny or Smiling Santa, because he looked jolly. And he looked happy because he was good and kind to everyone. So when the children quarreled or pouted we would try to have them smile and look jolly like Santa.

Then we played the game, "Santa Sack," which meant that if they allowed each other or their playmates to play with their toys, or gave them apples or goodies, they were playing Santa Claus. Because Santa was unselfish and divided whatever he had from his sack. Sometimes, when playmates came, I would say, "You'll want to play Santa Sack," and away they would skip to distribute their toys like Santa. And they delighted to play and be called Santa when they ran errands or smiled or did something kind.

Santa was a make believe creature as characters in poems which we read to them, as "The Raggedy Man," "Children's Hour," "Jack Sprat," "Hawthorn." Anyone who gave a gift was a Santa and whenever Santa Claus distributed gifts in a public place they were delighted that someone was playing Santa as they played "bear, doctor, teacher." Anyone who is unselfish, kind and cheerful is to them a Santa to someone else. Then as they grew older the Santa Sack was woven into a lesson that each of us has something to give to another all the time through the year in smiles, kind words, etc. For the real "Santa" gave so much from his sack of treasures, in Bethlehem long ago!

An Ounce of Prevention. It is a wise thing to save all worn white materials, cut them into pieces 10 inches square and have a clean pile of them in the linen closet, where any member of the family who has a cold may procure them instead of using their regular handkerchiefs. They can be burned when soiled, and in this sanitary manner help the cold from spreading through the family.

A Novel Thought. One way of insuring a neat bathroom by having all the washcloths hung up so they may be dried out and stay sweet is to buy some small ivory rings and sew one of these firmly to one corner of each cloth. They are easy to find and no one will find it a trouble to hang theirs up to dry.

Navy Poplin Contrasts With French Blue Velvet for Chic.

By CORRINE LOWE. New York. — (Special Correspondence.)—Thanks to the clemency of the weather, the frock of poplin, serge or poplin has enjoyed a great deal of publicity this autumn. Worn without wrap of any sort except the inevitable fur scarf, this type of frock has been seen lately almost as constantly as during the spring months. Indeed, more and more we have come to regard the navy frock of one of these fabrics as the most indispensable factor in mid-season dressing. And, of course, the coldest of winter weather cannot rob the garment of dress of this character shows a touch of red in panel linings, girdle, cuffs, and neck line. Black in the form of braid or of ribbon is another favored concomitant. Here, however, the contrast is effected by making the puffed lower section of the sleeve of French blue velvet. The buttons carry out this suggestion by a blue enamel on steel foundation. A side ornament at the corsage is of the same composition.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Golden will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Kelly and Mrs. M. E. Morse of Lincoln, mother of Mrs. Golden.

Turpentine.

A few drops in the suds on wash day will loosen the dirt and whiten the clothes.

A few drops in the water when watering plants will make the leaves green and fresh looking.

A few drops in the bottom of trunks, chests and drawers will scare away the most valiant moth.

Delicate colors in washing materials will not fade if they are soaked in luke-warm water, to which a few drops of turpentine have been added, before the are put in sudsy water.

Breaking in New Shoes.

New shoes will feel lots more comfortable if the insides are thoroughly dusted with talcum powder.

Problems That Perplex

The Girl Who's in Doubt. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am 19 and in love with a man of 24. He is also in love with me. However, my parents and intimate friends believe we are incompatible. They say he is inferior to me in education, appearance, social and financial standing. I have been forbidden to see him, and though two months have elapsed since the last time I have seen him, I keep thinking of him.

Would it be fair to let this young fellow drift out of my life? On the other hand, would it be fair to cause my parents so much suffering, for if I were to marry him it would have to be without their consent. M. M.

Education, appearance, social and financial standing might not make a real barrier between you and the man you love. But the doubt you unconsciously express of his character is a serious thing. Don't marry a man as long as you doubt his ability to make something of his life. If he loves you in a strong, sturdy, noble way, he will make good and prove to your people that in spite of his handicaps he is every inch a man. A year or two would do much to prove his real merit and to solve your problem. But do not marry in haste.

Puzzled E. B.: If the boy you met in the city asked his friend to call on you, why shouldn't you be courteous to him? However, I would ask him to call before going out with him.

Flowers for the Wedding. Dear Miss Fairfax: As I am to be married soon, there is a little dispute as to who is to supply the bridesmaids with flowers. I say that they have to buy their own, whereas they insist that the bride is supposed to buy some for them. A BRIDE-TO-BE.

The groom generally supplies the bride and her attendant with flowers. This is a charming courtesy which most men are glad to pay.

Just Change It a Bit.

If the calendar is very pretty, and you do not wish to part with it, paste a bit of sandpaper over the calendar pad and use it as a match scratcher.

When Renovating Fur. Use the blade of a safety razor for the cutting. Cut on the wrong side, not quite through, and then pull apart.

THE OLD BRIDGE

On the old, old bridge with its crumbling stones, All covered with lichens, red and gray, Two lovers were talking in sweet, low tones, And we were they!

As he leaned to breathe in her inclining ear The love that he vowed would never die, He called her his darling, his dove most dear, And he was I!

She covered her face from the pale moonlight With her trembling hands, but her eyes looked through, And listened and listened with long delight, And she was you!

On the old, old bridge where the lichens rust Two lovers are learning the same old lore, He tells his love, and she looks her trust, But we—no more!
