HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

December should mark radical changes in our diet, it now being the mission of our food to "keep out the cold" as well as to nourish the body. Good soups and good meats are now of first importance-indeed, are synonymous with good sense, begging the pardon of our vegetarian friends. Purees (of meat foundation) and all the strong, rich soups-to be avoided at other seasons-are strictly in midwinter order. In winter meat becomes the pivotal point of our diet. The fear of yellow fever among the people has almost entirely obscured the danger from diphtheria, tuberculosis and typhoid fever and other infectious diseases which confront us at all times and during all seasons. The danger from a case of diphtheria in New York at any season of the year is far greater than the danger from a case of yellow fever in the same place; still, persons who would shun a street where a case of yellow fever existed would deliberately enter the apartment of a person suffering from diphtheria. A serious outbreak of typhoid fever creates but little consternation, and the presence in our midst of innumerable cases of tuberculosis, a disease which is responsible for an incredible number of deaths, is looked upon with indifference by the public, says the North American Review. The misconception in regard to the danger from this class of diseases often renders the efforts of health offic als ineffectual. The Italians consider a large nose desirable and beautiful. Recently there have been two competitions in which noses have played the leading part. One at Padua was held by the students, and prizes of pocket handkerchiefs and snuff-boxes were awarded for "noses the most pronounced and respectable." At Milan a more important competition was held, the competitors numbering thirty-six. The first prize, a gold medal, was won by a Venetian, whose nose was found to be "of formidable proportions, long, well pronounced, aggressive, trenchant like a knife blade." The second prize, an enameled medal, went to the man who owned a nose "domineering, assuming, with nostrils wide and cavernous." The third medal went to a man whose nose was "refined and symmetrical," while the last two medals to were awarded for a nose "without pretension, ingenuous, but solid and well-planted," and another "considerable, regular and worthy of respect."

AS FROM THE GRAVE.

Washand and Wife Who Belleved Each Other Dead for 19 Years, Reunited. A New York dressmaker and a skipper, who for ten years has been sailing between New York and Liverpool, are the central figures in a strange romance that ended this week at Charlotte, N. C., which was their original home. In 1880 Frank Andrews, of all waiting for her, she was quite per-Charlotte, decided to remove to Texas, as his physician had recommended a change of climate. His friend, William Cross, decided to go with him in search of fortune. Cross' wife was in delicate health and could not accompany him. Cross spent several years in Texas, keeping in constant correspondence with his wife. Finally he decided to try his luck on the Pacific coast. He went to San Francisco and adopted a seafaring life. He joined the crew of a tramp schooner, carrying freight to various ports in the Pacific ocean. When he left San Francisco news carre from his wife that she was so ill that he could hardly hope to reach her beside before she died. When his vessel passed out of the Golden Gate he thought he would never see his wife again, and the last tie that bound him to his North Carolina home was broken. The ship was bound on a voyage half way around the world. In the China Sea the vessel was caught in a typhoon and wrecked. Only a few of the crew were saved. For two days they float ed in a little of u boat, until a Russian steamer, Lound for a Siberian port, rescued them. The Russian ship put in at Vladivostock and the shipwrecked sailors were left there. Finally Cross came to New York and se oured employment in the transatlantic service. He had not written to his North Carolina friends, nor had he heard from them since he left San Francisco twelve years before. A few weeks ago Cross was seized with a longing to visit his old home. Andrews, his companion in Texas, had returned to Charlotte, and Cross wrote to him, and learned to his astonishment that his wife was still alive, but could not ascertain where she wa then living. Cross went to Charlott at once and tried to find trace of her The local newspapers contained ac counts of Cross' visit there. Mrs. Cross had recovered from the illness that brought her to death's door. She read an account of the loss of the ship on which her husband sailed "with all on board," and had mourned him as dead. In 1892 she secured a position as dressmaker in this city, and has been living here ever since, little dreaming that her husband was sailing into port at frequent intervals. The Charlotte papers were frequently sent

LETTERS SENT TO NOTED MEN

Those curious personages who de light in prying into unexpected subjects and classifying the results in learned form have been very busy recently with the letters received by prominent people. The president of the French republic, for instance, is said to receive daily 700 letters, and these are made up as follows: Begging letters, 250; pelitions on political affairs, 150; petitions from criminals, 100: complaints against various functionaries, also 100; anonymous letters containing insults, 80, and threats of assassination, 20.

The daily post bag at Marlborough house, London, too, contains some extraordinary letters. By one post there arrived the following: A request for a loan of $5,000 to enable student of entomology to start for Africa; a petition from a poor old lady to provide a dowry for her daughter, who was about to be married; a pressing letter from a French inventor of a new diving dress, begging the Prince of Wales to don it and dive into the Seine when he next visited Paris, and a calm request for money to redeem a workman's

Of course few of these curious missives ever reach the Prince of Wales, for his experienced secretaries sift the correspondence with care and knowledge. Every day there are scores of letters connected with the public ceremonies in which the prince takes a part, for every item is submitted for approval. Then there are the thousand and one social invitations requiring a reply, and unnumbered appeals for money in aid of charities. The private letters for the prince are very numerous, for his relatives keep him in touch with all interesting them. His sister, the Empress Frederick, is a charming letter writer, and corresponds with the prince regularly.

SOCIABLE MONKEYS AS GUESTS An Odd Honeymoon Spent Amid Weird Surroundings. From the Weekly Telegraph:

gentleman who was married in India a short time ago had a somewhat peculiar experience during his honeymoon. He took his newly-acquired bride away to a house situated on the Nebudda river to spend the opening month of their married life, and the company that met them at their first breakfast was not quite the kind a bride expects to welcome her. The meal in question was laid on a veranda overlooking the river, and no sooner did the servants begin to place the crockery on the table than a large number of monkeys began to assemble from all directions, and noiselessly took their places on the veranda. Naturally, when the husband called to his wife, who was dressing, that breakfast was ready, and they were turbed more especially as she expected they were going to be alone. Imagine her surprise when she came down to find all the available space around the table occupied by monkeys, who sat as grave and silent as possible During the breakfast biscuits were thrown to the animals, and these, of course, gave rise to a struggle, which resulted in a great deal of noise. No sooner, however, was each biscuit gone than the monkeys returned to their places and sat as quiet as if nothing had happened. As soon as the couple got up from the breakfast table the monkeys, evidently recognizing that there was nothing more to be had, all rose, and gravely marched down the steps from the veranda.

Tongues of theCat Family. The tongues of the cat family are covered with recurving spines. In the common domestic cat these are small but sufficiently well developed to give the tongue a feeling of roughness. But in the lion and tiger the spines are strong enough to enable the animal to tear away the skin of a man's hand merely by licking it.

Overdressed Youngsters. It is foolishness to make the coats of young children of heavy material. Children must be kept warm, but weight does not always mean warmth, and a child should not feel its ciothes a burden. Many a little tot comes in from what ought to have been a refreshing walk weary and well high exhausted, because of the weight of the coat it has worn. A layer of wadding between the material and its lining gives warmth without adding much to the weight of a pretty coat, and velvet, satin, poplin, cashmere, camel's hair, Bedford cord and other soft coatings are much improved in appearance by using it.

They were cordially welcomed by many old friends, and will begin life anew in the town where they grew up as children.
