

"Oh! Cast that Shadow from Thy Brow!"
You can't do it if you have liver complaint or dyspepsia. The darkened countenance tells the story of inward commotion and woe. Clear your stomach, strengthen your digestion, regulate your liver, tone your nerves, and then away goes the shadow from your brow, and you are happy because you are well. Mrs. M. J. Alston, of Littleton, N. C., says: "I recommend Brown's Iron Bitters to the nervous and debilitated. It greatly benefited me." Sarah Bernhardt is not strong, but she is still able to cast a shadow.

The Features of a Rogue
A practical detective can frequently discern at a glance that a man is a rogue. The stamp of dishonesty on his features, or his anxiety on being observed, tells the story. A remarkable illustration of this fact was narrated by the Boston correspondent of the Hingham Journal a year or two ago. The detective was Constable Derastus Clapp, the successor of "Old Red," a famous roguemaster of Boston half a century ago, who was for forty years the terror of evil-doers in and about the New England metropolis.

Clapp was a shrewd man and a most excellent judge of human nature. He could tell a rogue as far off as he could a black man, and he never made mistakes. His "come along with me" was imperative and admitted of no argument.

An instance of his readiness in reading character occurred one morning in the upper criminal court. A case of considerable interest was being tried, and the gallery was crowded with spectators.

Two or three reporters were sitting near the door, when Clapp, stooping over, whispered,—

"Don't all look at once, but please observe that nice-looking man with the white cravat, in the front middle seat of the gallery."

We looked. "Now," says Clapp, "I'll bet that'll can set that man traveling out of the court-house on the double-quick in less than five minutes, nor will I leave the room or send him any message."

While we were wondering how the feat was to be accomplished, the veteran quietly beckoned to officer Tallant, and taking a pair of handcuffs from his pocket, directed that officer's attention to the party in the gallery, and apparently gave him some directions.

Tallant opened the door and stepped into the entry, and at the same instant the man with the white cravat bolted like lightning through the crowd to the door and disappeared.

"Gentleman," remarked Clapp, "I never saw that man before in my life. It illustrates the scriptural saying, 'The wicked flee when no man pursueth.'"

North Carolina Minerals.

A North Carolina farmer of Cabarrus county suddenly found himself rich the other day, when he was offered $50 a bushel for 2,000 bushels of a sand and gravel mound on his farm. The dirt was more profitable at that price than any farm product he could raise on his land, but he was as sharp as old Farmer Rogers, the North Carolina farmer of "Esmeralda," and didn't take it. The gravel mound is as full of wealth as the dirt pile of Dickens' golden dustman, and the latest improved machinery is to be put in to work a gold mine. The discovery came about in this way: The farmer knew the mound, and knew of an old hole near it which had been filled up by the drift of years. He wished to make a dry, gravelly front yard for his house, and hauled some cart-loads of the mound and spread it before his door. The rains washed it, and he found among the gravel a nugget of gold that weighed an ounce. This opened his eyes. Then he scraped up the gravel and it "panned out" $225 in rough pickings. Then he took a bushel of the mound, ground it to powder in a mortar and it yielded $125, which showed his good sense in not taking $50 a bushel for it. Then the oldest inhabitant of Cabarrus, high on to a hundred, suddenly recollected a story told him, when he was a boy, by his grandfather, about an Englishman who lived in Raleigh before the Revolutionary times, digging a pit, finding a pile of gold and going home to coin it. The pit was on this very Cabarrus farm and the mound was made from the diggings. The lucky Englishman worked the mine in the rough, took out the biggest yellow chunks and left the smaller nuggets and rich dirt for the farmer, and the name of this sudden millionaire is Bob Hall. He will work the mine for all it is worth, and would not take for the Englishman's leavings as many ten-dollar gold pieces as would pave every inch of his farm.

Maiden Effort of a Texas Orator.
"In my deestric, Mr. President and elder members, where a few moons ago the Indian lover wooed his dusky mate, and the wild fox dug his hole unskared, peace and smiling plenty reign supreme, and the honest sweat of the toiler, wrung from the brow of labor by the horny hand of thrift, irrigates the soil, about all the irrigation we get in the course of the Almighty's twelve months. In that deestric, Mr. President, the champing iron horse of monopoly rushes red-eyed through the fairest fields and daily climbs fences and piles of last year's mesquite roots to kill the long horn the farmer has left, the kindly beast, Mr. President, which has been the daily companion of his wife and daughters, the mighty bed-fellow of the blue sow in the front yard, and which he gathered by his thrift and diligence from the passing herd of the Kansas drover. And when he uses the company for $500 and gets $1 and cents, who is to blame him if at the next election he votes frequently for the man who, in these halls have resounded to the eloquence of the Seventeenth legislature, will protect him in his rights and secure him a large slice of other people's. Forty years ago would the pampered minion of a northern tyrant thus have spurred the just rights of our citizens? Not much. The ready rifle would have rung out and he would have felt the absurdity of fooling with the soldiers of the blood-stained field of San Jacinto and the heroes of the Alamo." [Rapturous applause.]—Texas Siftings.

"Mothers Should Note This."
Under this caption an old physician writes to a Cincinnati Medical Journal, that in view of the fact that people living at a distance from cities are frequently obliged to resort to cough mixtures already put up for use, they should provide themselves with only such remedies as are known to be free from opiates, poisons and narcotics; thus avoiding not only danger, but even fatal results. He recommends the recently discovered Red Star Cough Cure which analyses and tests by various Boards of Health proved to be purely vegetable as well as prompt, effective and entirely harmless.

Rare Coins.
King Frederick William IV, of Prussia, died on the 2d of January, 1861; but before his death a number of thaler pieces, bearing his effigy and the date 1861, had been issued from the Berlin mint. On the accession of King William new thalers were coined and put into circulation, and the others were gradually called in. By the end of last year all the Frederick William thalers of 1861, save about fifty, had been returned and defaced, and the remaining specimens are now consequently very scarce. Making due allowance for losses and deliberate destruction, it is considered probable that not more than a score of these curiosities are at the present moment in existence. No other coins of Frederick William IV, bear the date 1861. There are not many parallel instances, for of course it does not often happen that a sovereign dies so early in the year.—New York Evening Post.

The Poor Little Ones.
We often see children with red eruptions on face and hands, rough, scaly skin, and often sores on the head. These things indicate a depraved condition of the blood. In the growing period, children have need of pure blood by which to build up strong and healthy bodies. If Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is given, the blood is purified of its bad elements, and the child's development will be healthy, and as it should be. Scrofulous affections, rickets, fever-sores, hip-joint disease or other grave maladies and suffering are sure to result from neglect and lack of proper attention to such cases.

Florida Saurians.
Some interesting discoveries have been made in Florida by Prof. Lawrence Johnson, of the United States geological survey. Just south of the Alachua county line he found several specimens and skeletons of animals which relatively belong to a not far distant period. In piles, and somewhat mixed, there were the remains of a mastodon, two or three specimens of the rhinoceros, a large stag, a camel, fully as large as the Arabian camel, but in structure more allied to the llama; also a tapir, very much like the South American tapir, which lives in swampy places; two teeth of a cardiovorus animal allied to the tiger and panther; one set of teeth and bones of a hippopotamus; several crocodiles or alligators, and innumerable other bones not identified. Apparently the territory south of Alachua was at some time a large fresh-water lake.

A Lovely Complexion.
"What a lovely complexion," we often hear persons say. "I wonder what she does for it?" In every case the purity and real loveliness of the complexion depends upon the blood. Those who have sallow, blotchy faces may make their skin smooth and healthy by taking enough of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" to drive out the humors lurking in the system.
