STATE GRANGERS.

The Iowa State Grange and the executive committee of the State Farmers' Alliance held a joint meeting in Des Moines, Saturday a week. The resolutions adopted favor control by the government of all railroad and telegraph lines in the country, the adoption of the Australian ballot system, and insist upon absolute fairness in the matter of finance.

The State Grange of Delaware in session at Wilmington passed resolutions denouncing class legislation, approving the silver bill passed by the present congress, and declaring it was inexpedient to set up a third party in Delaware.

The Michigan Grange is in open revolt against the National Grange on account of the stand taken by national organization in endorsing the proposition for government loans on real estate.

The Farmers' Alliance is negotiating for the mammoth East street shops at Springfield, Ohio. The alliance proposes to fight the Harvester trust. Farming stock company will be formed, no one subscriber to furnish over $1,000, and machinery will be supplied to alliance members at cost.

THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS.

Established 1859.

The Daily News, of seventy-two columns, has a capacity for reading matter equal to the large Eastern papers. It aims to furnish all the news of the day, complete in detail, yet concise in form. It is devoted to Western, and especially to Colorado interests.

Our SPECIAL TELEGRAPH SERVICE is superior to that of any other journal west of St. Louis. The News employs more agents and pays more for special dispatches than all other Western newspapers combined.

The News is issued every day in the year. The Weekly News furnishes a compendium of every notable event, at home and abroad, with a liberal supply of choice, original and selected articles, specially adapted to family entertainment and instruction. It is the best weekly family newspaper published in the West.

A feature of both the Daily and Weekly editions of the News, of the first importance to the public, is our perfect system of market reports. The absolute reliability of our commercial department has long been recognized by the business men in the state, and every issue will continue to furnish a true reflex of the latest Kansas City, Chicago and St. Louis, as well as local quotations.

BITS BY THE BARDS.

Not Exacting.
Phyllis to Stephen, About to Travel.
When sailing o'er the broad Atlantic ocean,
When tossed upon the mad and raging sea,
When flitted with strange tumultuous commotion,
I'll pardon if you fall to think of me.

When hunting in the forest or the jungle,
When chasing mastodon or fleeting hind,
And thought of me your work would sadly bungle,
Why let me slip at once from out your mind.
Should boa constrictor twine himself about you,
Demanding all your precious thought and time,
Let not a thought of me, my darling, flout you,
Who'll pray for you in this far distant clime?

But should you in the regions of Golconda
A rich and brilliant ruby chance to see,
O, don't forget that mine no heart is fonder,
And then I beg that you'll remember me.
—John Kendrick Bangs, in Life.

That Unruly Member.
"The boneless tongue, so small and weak,
Can crush and kill," declared the Greek.

"The tongue destroys a greater horde,"
The Turk asserts, "than doth the sword."

Or sometimes takes this form instead:
"Don't let your tongue cut off your head."

"The tongue can speak a word whose speed,"
Says the Chinese, "outstrips the steed."

While Arab sages this impart:
"The tongue's great storehouse is the heart."

From Hebrew wit this maxim sprung:
"Though feet should slip, ne'er let the tongue."

The sacred writer crowns the whole:
"Who keeps his tongue doth keep his soul."
—Chicago Globe.

A Boy's Fish Story.
Wunst we went a-fishin'—me
An' my Pa an' Ma—all three,
When they was a picnic, way
Out to Hanch's Woods, one day.

An' there was a creek out there,
Where the fishes is, an' where
Little boys 'tain't big an' strong
Better have their folks along.

My Pa he ist fished an' fished!
An' my Ma she said she wished
Me an' her was home; an' Pa
Said he wished so worse'n Ma.

Pa said if you talk, er say
Anythin' er sneeze, er play,
Hain't no fish, alive er dead,
Ever go' to bite, he said.

Pur' nigh dark in town when we Got back home; and Ma, says she,
Now she'll have a fish for shore!—
An' she buyed one at the store.

Nen, at supper, Pa he won't
Eat no fish, an' says he don't Like 'em. An' he pounded me
When I choked!—Ma, didn't he?
—James Whitcomb Riley, in Century.

A Sad Tale With a Moral for Girls.
She was smart and she was pretty, and her elders thought her witty, and she tripped the light fantastic like a fay.

She could read both French and Latin, and was sweet in print or satin, and 'twould make your bosom heave to hear her play.

But in single life she tarried, and she never, never married, and she'll doubtless be a maiden till she dies.

For she bade a proud defiance to the culinary science, and she never knew the mystery of pies.

—Burlington Free Press.

'Twas Ever Thus.
Some burdened hearts must ever sigh,
While some are filled with gladness;
Some dwell beneath a sunny sky
And some 'neath clouds of sadness.
Thus runs this strange old world away
In pleasure and in sorrow;
The most of us are here to-day
And not far off to-morrow.

Dame Fortune to a favored few
Is richest favors giving,
But there are countless thousands who
Must hustle for a living.
And some it seems 'twould ever pay,
While some forever borrow;
And most of us are here to-day
And not far off to-morrow.

—Chicago Post.

At Last.
Her lily hand was clasped in his;
But, with a lover's foolish dread,
"Tell me you love me, dear," he cried,
"You know it now," she said.

"Perhaps—but tell me, dearest love,"
Her sunny head drooped sweetly low,
And hid upon his beating heart;
She whispered: "Now you know."

"But say it, dear." Around his neck
One rounded arm crept gently slow,
She murmured, as he stooped to hear:
"You can not help but know."

"But let me hear you say it, love,"
Her lips pursed up a pretty pout,
She stamped her foot—"I love you! there!
I hope you've found it out."
—J. T. Newcomb, in Puck.

To my Wife.
I would not speak one bitter word
To thee, my friend,
Who have been faithful and will ever be,
Be'n to the end;
I still would treasure, as I do to-day,
My very life,
The sweetest, dearest, tenderest one,
My precious wife!

Though forms and faces oft in time
Grow dim and strange—
Though hearts and hands wax cold, dear love, in you
I find no change.

The same soft hand to smooth my fevered brow,
The same warm tears,
The same true heart that shared my joys and pains
In earlier years.

If I with hasty words that gentle soul
Have ever wrung,
Pardon, with thy forgiving spirit, love,
My thoughtless tongue,
And I will promise, as the years roll on,
To make my life
A loving tribute to thy virtues rare,
My darling wife,
—Mrs. M. A. Kidder, in N. Y. Weekly.

The Universal Strife.
A cricket fed on an insect
Too small for eye to see,
A field mouse captured the cricket
And hushed his minstrelsy.

A gray shrike pounced on the field mouse
And hung him on a thorn,
And a hawk came down on the cruel shrike,
From over the waving corn.

And a fox sprung out on the red-tailed hawk
From under a fallen tree;
For bird and beast, by food and field,
Of every degree,
Prey one upon the other.

'Twas thus ordained to be:
My rife laid old Reynard low,
And Death—Death looked at me.
—Ernest McGaffey

Saved.
Her heart is the court of love
Wherein I am being tried;
I ask of the powers above
That she may become my bride.

Her "no" will to me be death—
Ah, ended is all the strife,
For "yes" with a smile she saith;
The verdict is thus "for life."
—Nathan M. Levy, in Munsey's Weekly.
