THE NEW YEAR.

O'er the mountains wild comes a little child,
And all the untrodden ways
Are blooming bright 'neath his steps of light,
And the valleys ring with his praise,
And the morning glints on his brow and tints
His cheek with its rosy rays.

His bright eyes beam and his tresses gleam—
Shot with the sunshine's darts
That mark his way through the gates of day—
As the dying year departs,
And the vacant throne is now his own,

And his kingdom is human hearts.

The songs he sings and the joy he brings
Are wonderful, sweet and rare,
And the future glows like a fragrant rose
'Neath the wand that he waves in air,
And with kisses sweet, and with smiles, we

The beautiful, glad New Year,

And cover the head of the Old Year, dead,
With a cold, cold shroud of snow.

Life is sweet, but time is fleet,

And the years must come and go—
The beautiful years, with their smiles and tears,
The years that we all love so.

Kisses and tears for its joys and its cares—
The year whose steps have passed
Into silence sweet, where no fall of feet
Is heard in the Dim and Vast.
o the Old—his due; but we love the New—
The sweetest rose is the last!

Featherstone—My tailor has a delic sense of humor.

Ringway—Why, what has he done now? Featherstone—He has sent me a calendar for 1894.

The Persian Bathes on New Year's. On the 21st of March, according to our chronology, the Persians arouse from their usual apathy and roam about in glee. The men fall upon each other's necks, kiss and caress each other and vow eternal brotherly love. The Persian laborer and peddler, who ordinarily does not mind if his hands and feet are of the hue of night, takes a bath and has his hair cut, and if the sun is hot he has his head shorn clear of hirsute adornment. Balancing himself on the ground by holding on to his toes, he delivers himself over to the hair butcher, who is usually a tonsorial artist of no mean development. Indeed it is said that several of these public barbers have become quite rich, notwithstanding that they perform their hardest labor on this
