SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of an order of sale directed to me from the district court of Red Willow county, Nebraska, on a judgment obtained before Hon. D. T. Wely, judge of the district court of Red Willow county, Nebraska, on the 15th day of January, 1895, in favor of George Hockwell as plaintiff, and against George M. Cheney et al. as defendants, for the sum of three hundred thirty-eight ($338) dollars and forty (40) cents, and costs taxed at $25.18 and accruing costs, I have levied upon the following real estate taken as the property of said defendants to satisfy said judgment to-wit: The undivided one-half interest in lot thirteen (13) in block twenty-two (22) in the original town (now city) of McCook, Red Willow county, Nebraska. And will offer the same for sale to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, on the 8th day of April, A. D., 1895, in front of the south door of the court house in Indianola, Nebraska, that being the building wherein the last term of court was held, at the hour of one o'clock, p. m. of said day, when and where due attendance will be given by the undersigned. Dated March 4th, 1895.
E. R. BANKS, Sheriff of said county.
W. S. MORLAN, Attorney. 3-8-95.

Tom Wilkinson and Charlie Brewer had a head-end collision, last Friday night, in which the latter's headlight was slightly damaged.

Conductor W. G. Reddin is ill with a severe attack of pneumonia. His father has been telegraphed for and was expected to arrive in the city, last night.

A force of men have been spading up the yard east of the depot, this week, in order that the plat may be again seeded. Last year's effort was not a success.

A Kansas City paper says: The Williams Palace Sleeping Car company has been organized with a capital stock of $5,000,000, to manufacture in this city a new car unequalled in point of comfort, convenience and elegance by any sleeping car now in use. The new car is the invention of a local railroad man, who was formerly connected with the Missouri Pacific and the Rock Island roads. The leading shareholders of the company are eastern capitalists, who are heavily interested in railroads and railroad machinery. J. O. A. King and L. Buchanan of this city are also stockholders. The main feature of the new car is a berth which disappears at the will of the passenger into the wall of the car, and is confined in a space of one and seven-eighths inches. Mattresses of air are to be used, and all bed clothing can be put in lockers underneath the seats of each section. The berths will be made of steel and aluminum.

C. P. Judge, the clever foreman of the B. & M. bridge carpenters' gang, was making Benkelman his headquarters a couple of days, first of the week. To a Bee reporter Mr. Judge gave the information that he is about to complete one of the nicest residences in McCook, and when completed it will be occupied by himself and family. It is a story and a half high with four large rooms. The doors of this dwelling will all contain the latest pattern of colored glass, also the windows. Mr. Judge being a skilled carpenter and carver, he has finished the interior of the dwelling in a most artistic style. Birds, roses and other images carved from wood here and there bedeck the walls and ceiling in such a manner as to attract the eye of the most fastidious. During the past twelve consecutive years Mr. Judge has been a steady employe of the Burlington road and the manner in which he has always discharged his duties has convinced his employers that he is a faithful and conservative man. The erection of this cottage will show that Mr. Judge has saved his earnings and instead of living an aged life in pain and misery, he will enjoy it with ease and comfort.—Benkelman Bee.

FREAKS OF NATURE.

Some Curious Things That Amuse and Astonish Men of Science.

Nature's freaks of fancy afford a strange study. People are constantly sending to the National museum supposed fossil animals and other oddities which are in reality mere accidental forms carved by water. A pebble in a stream gathers about itself grains of sand until an odd shaped lump is made. A favorite shape for such lumps is that of a turtle with four legs, a head and tail, even the lines of the shell being sometimes distinct. Similar concretions of carbonate of iron and clay assume the appearance of petrified peanuts. Break one, and you will always find inside a small spiral wrinkle shell, which has served as the nucleus. A queer counterfeit of this kind, forwarded to Washington not long ago, was an alleged fossil foot of a child, with a little stocking on, the latter showing signs of wear on the ball of the foot and on the heel. It was only a concretion, as was likewise what appeared to be a petrified oyster on the shell.

One eminent scientist has been amusing himself of late by making imitation spider webs out of quartz fibers. It is well known that copper wire can be drawn to a fineness much less than the thickness of a hair—in fact, to the diameter of the one-thousandth part of an inch. But glass may be spun finer than copper, while even the finest spun glass is not so fine as silk fiber. The latter, however, is coarse compared with the threads that can be obtained by melting quartz under a blowpipe and pulling it out. Such threads may be reduced to a thinness of one-millionth of an inch. Drawn to such tenacity, they are invisible under a microscope of the best power. Yet they are stronger in proportion to their thickness than the best quality of bar steel. Enough thread like this could be made from a single cubic inch of quartz to go around the world 658 times. A grain of sand barely large enough to be visible to the naked eye would yield 1,000 miles of thread.

Obviously no practical use can be made of threads so extremely fine. Comparatively coarse ones were woven into cobwebs by the scientist aforesaid. They would not catch flies because they were too slippery, having no gluten on them, like real cobwebs. This difficulty was got over by moistening a straw in castor oil and gently stroking the threads with it; then the webs captured flies fairly well. But a cobweb is incomplete without a spider, so it occurred to the experimenter to attract an arachnid to his web by the buzzing of a fly. It was difficult to make a fly buzz to order, but a satisfactory imitation was produced by permitting a tuning fork to vibrate against the quartz fibers. This fetched the spider right away. The scientist also amused himself with blowing bubbles of quartz, which looked exactly like the most beautiful soap bubbles.—Washington Star.

Sponge Fishing.

The Greeks are considered the principal sponge fishers, and it takes much experience, skill and hardihood to qualify a man for a first class place among sponge divers. Many of the most valuable specimens are found at a depth varying from 10 to 35 fathoms. To aid in the descent, the divers make use of a triangular stone, with a hole in one corner, through which a rope is spliced. On reaching the deep sea gardens, where the rock ledges are clothed with marine growths, the diver, retaining a hold on his rope, dexterously breaks away the holdfast of the sponges and places them under his arm until a sufficient load has been gleaned, when a pull on the rope signals his companions above that he is ready to ascend, and he is then hauled to the surface, bearing his ocean treasures.—Exchange.

Manuscript of "The School for Scandal."

No printed version of "The School for Scandal" was prepared for publication by Sheridan. He always alleged that he could not supply one with which he was perfectly satisfied. Yet he made the attempt, and Mr. Fraser Rae has discovered the copy containing his final corrections of passages in many scenes, which Moore must have overlooked, the documents at his disposal having recently been put into Mr. Fraser Rae's hands by Sheridan's descendants for the purpose of writing a complete biography of the great dramatist and orator. The manuscript is imperfect, yet enough is extant to show how effectually Sheridan could add a fresh charm to his polished phrases.—London Athenaeum.

Rules of Horses and Men.

It is instructive to compare the visage of the ruler of horses with that of the ruler of men. The horseman's face shows command in the mouth; the drill sergeant's in the mouth and the eye. The last is undoubtedly the most effective instrument in exacting obedience from our own species. Here we get a hint of the cause of that want of dignity, that element of coarseness, which is discernable in the countenances of some men and women who have much to do with horses. The higher and nobler method of expressing authority is outweighed by the lower and more animal one.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Are Men Getting More Vain?

A local philosopher, who makes a practice of observing other people's manners and commenting upon their habits, states that nearly every man now carries a pocket mirror. According to him, this habit has grown immensely of late, and nearly every man can be observed at frequent intervals pulling a glass out of his pocket and looking at the set of his necktie or the appearance of his whiskers.—Philadelphia Call.
