Cards have been received in Lincoln announcing the forthcoming marriage of C. W. Loomis of Denver and Miss Winnie Crofts of Beatrice. Mr. Loomis was cashier of the Burlington & Missouri freight department of Lincoln and also served as traveling auditor. The wedding will take place June 11th at Beatrice.—Journal.

Henry T. Church of the Willow has a bunch of horses being ranged in Wyoming, near South Pass. A young son of the late Tobias Brown has been herding them. The young man not long since came home on a visit. When he returned to the range again quite a number of Mr. Church's horses were missing. The other day twelve of these horses put in an appearance at Mr. Church's ranch on the Willow, having made their way instinctively from the range near South Pass, Wyoming, a distance, perhaps, of a couple hundred miles. The animals, too, were not range bronchos, but American Normans, which is considered the more remarkable.

Curfew Bell Works Well.

Already several other cities have adopted the famous "curfew" ordinance which wrought such a revolution in favor of law and order in Stillwater, Minnesota. The terror and nuisance of cities large and small are the gangs of lawless boys that hang upon its streets in the evening, throwing stones, fighting and using foul and blasphemous language in the ears of passersby. Not seldom they are thieves. They stone windows and destroy property. They grow bolder by immunity from punishment and in a few years develop into gangs of burglars, who do not stop at even murder.

Stillwater had her share of these young miscreants. The ordinance passed by her city council to abolish that nuisance declared it unlawful for any boy or girl under 16 to be on the streets without parent or guardian after nine o'clock at night unless sent on some errand, and then it must be a clear case, and the boy or girl must go quickly and quietly about his or her business. Penalties were duly affixed for violation of the ordinance. To notify all concerned when the hour for going indoors had arrived the city fire bell rings "nine slow taps consecutively".

The measure worked like magic. It has abolished the gangs of young desperadoes that formerly made evening hideous. Night hoodlums have vanished from the streets of Stillwater.

The old soldiers of the city have been invited to attend the lantern class exercises in assembly room, this evening. They will attend in a body. Various battle fields will be shown by the lantern, and an invitation has been extended, if there are any present who were in the several battles, that brief remarks be offered by such old soldiers on the respective battles in which they were engaged.
