DEDICATION OF CHICKAMAU. GA'S PARK.

A Great Crowd in Attendance-An Im posing Military and Official Display-Senator Bate and Congressman Grosvenor Discuss Issues of the Rebellion-A Frank Talk by Gov. Turney.

At Chickamauga Park.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 21 .-The third day of the exercises attendant upon the dedication of the battlefield of Chickamauga to the nation as a park, opened with a grand civic and military parade, in which the visiting -cabinet officers, governors and their staffs and the various military organizations took part. It brought more people to the city proper than had been here at any one time since the -dedicatory exercises began.

It was a few minutes past 10 when the parade started. A platoon of police led, followed by a military band. Then came Vice President Stevenson and party, Lieutenant General Schofield, Secretary of the Interior Smith, Postmaster General Wilson, Secretary of the Navy Herbert and Attorney General Harmon, United States senators, congressmen, governors and staff's, park commissioners, Tennessee legislators, Mayor Ochs, citizens committee and invited guests. Another piatoon of police followed, and then came the United States troops, the Ohio national guard, Tennessee national guard, Capital City guards of Georgia and the Chattanooga school battalion. The formal exercises of the day were held in the Barnum tent near the government building, and were presided over by Vice President Stevenson. After music by the band, the Rev. Dr. S. T. Nicholls of St. Louis offered prayer. The first address was by George W. Ochs, mayor of Chattanooga.

SENATOR BATE ON THE ISSUES. Senator Bate, the second speaker, said in part: "We have assembled on the glorious battlefields for the preservation and perpetuation of the sacred memories, to advanve by lessons learned here, the common glory of our country. With what inexpressible pleasure the lapse of more than thirty years has mitigated the passions and dispossessed the minds of all the surviving contestants of these great battles, to look back at the past with those moderate convictions which are due to a contest in which each | had control of the Republican primarparty held principles and convictions to justify the contention."

tion of the Confederate monument at | to the conclusion that laws that operricago as an indication that sectional feeling was obliterated and then turned his attention to the causes which led up to the war. He said that the Missouri compromise and fanaticism had something to do with it. The denial of equal rights to equal states was the real cause. Whatever may have been the right or wrong, the south believed it was right, and in defense of this belief it accepted battle. In conclusion he said that it was in vain to surround America with fortresses, as modern cannon would demolish them. The only safety was in union.

CONGRESSMAN GROSVENOR'S ADDRESS. After some music, Congressman Charles H. Grosvenor of Ohio scoke. He declared that all were present as American citizens, without bitterness or criticism of any kind. He declared that the union had been absolutely restored in every way-in law and in the hearts and loyalty of all citizens, and all present were brothers in devotion to the union and the flag. He believed that nowhere was there a thought of disunion.

The speaker then gave an extended history of the American constitution and the various contentions in regard

He continued: "We did not go to war to emancipate the slave, but we did go to war with the consc ousness that the slavery question was one of the great questions that was producing the war; and he was a man of shortsightedness on the one side or the other side who doubted that the result of the conflict, the end of the war, would produce either emancipation or perpetuation. An institution so intertwined about the very heart of a great mass of the people, and thus becoming one of the promoting elements of controversy, and thereby incidentally, if you please, producing a conflict, and thereby imperiling the life of a nation, could not stand unless the side that defended it could stand. We went to war to establish principles-political principles. We went to war to legislate. We put in motion in the great congress of war the passage of bills that afterwards were passed upon the bloody battle fields of the country; and all that stood in the way, everything that came incidentally into collision, and everything that came, perchance by accident, if you please, to be inimical to the great end sought, was wiped out and destroyed. There was not an institution dear to the hearts of the American people other than the worship of God Almighty and the protection of family and home that would not have been destroyed in battle, had it stood in the way of the accomplishment of the great purpose of that war." The speaker next discussed the battle of Chickamauka, giving many facts and figures and closed: "Standing here to-day, my countrymen, is there anything greater, anything more charming to the heart of an American patriot than the love of the American people for this union, this constitution and this power? It is our protection against enemies abroad; it is our assurance against disturbance within; it is the beacon light to other nations and the sheet anchor to ours. It is the doctrine of the American home, the American fireside, American institutions, the American union, and the American flag. And we will protect it | ure of a bank, was tried to-day and | Brickel, a hotel keeper, was horseat home and vindicate it abroad; and found not guilty and released. It was whipped by Mrs. W. W. Wilkerson, in the hour of its peril, in the hour of its danger, if that hour shall come, in the time that tries the future of this great fabric of government, if the hour shall come, there will rally to the flag of the Union, there will rally to the constitution of the country, there will rally to our institutions, whether it be to protect our territorial integrity, our dignity as a nation, or position upon the great political ques-tions, international in their character.

them will be found the men and the descendants of the men of 1861 who fought to destroy the Union and who fought to uphold it; the men and the A RAVISHER IN THE HANDS OF descendents of the men who, at Gettysburg and South Mountain, at Shiloh and at Nashville and here upon this sacred spot stood and fought and bled and struggled, going forth as a mighty army with banners, to vindicate, to cherish and protect the flag and the Union that we love."

GOVERNOR TURNEY'S FRANK WORDS. When Mr. Grosvenor had finished, Governors Morton of New York, Woodbury of Vermont, Matthews of Indiana and Turney of Tennessee each made short talks

Governor Woodbury said that during the war each side believed it was would have to teach their children the South was wrong. Governor Turney took exceptions to this in his speech. "I believed I was right during the four years and nineteen days I served in the Confederate army," he said, "and at the end of that time I thought I was right. I still think I was right and shall teach my children so. No one is more loyal to the stars and stripes than I and no one is more loyal to the government, but I can never be convinced that the South was wrong.

This rather frank expression caused a great stir in the audience and when the meeting adjourned was the topic of general conversation.

gathered at the jail. The mayor tried to persuade them to disperse, but they picked him up and carried him away. For nearly four hours the officers were kept busy guarding the entrance to the cell. When the electric lights were turned off at 12:45 o'clock this morning, the crowd surrounding the city hall numbered about 300 men. At 12:55 six men approached Night Watch Ogren who was guarding the rear entrance and demanded the keys. Ogren had hidden them but the men overpowered and searched him. Failing to secure the keys they seized the fire axes, hattered down the wooden door and rushed into the corridor. Using the same axes they broke the lock, opened the cell and, placing a rope around Thomas's neck, pulled him out of the building and hurried down Main street to Third and then to thrown over a telegraph pole. While the crowd was waiting for the rope to be properly placed, City Marshal McMillan, followed by a band of deputies, cautiously worked their way close to the prisoner, and before the hood and intelligence of the city must- would-be lynchers realized their presand will combine to crush it out at ence the rope was cut from Thomas' neck and prisoner and rescuing party backed from the crowd.

A Fine Old Game for Boys.

The old game of hare and hounds is gaining new popularity and being played by many boys nowadays.

Any number of persons may play the per, which are called "scent."

of the players, who are called hounds, missed the pupils. Then he tapped me not being allowed to see the direction on the shoulder and remarked: they take. When five, ten, or fifteen as they cover the course.

Usually it is agreed beforehand that the run shall be a certain number of miles or for a certain length of time. If a hound catches one of the hares within each arm and disappeared." the specified distance he wins; otherwise the hares win.

If a hound catches sight of the hares he and his companions may not cut across and run toward them directly, but he must follow the course of the scent, although sometimes rules are made allowing this to be done, under which circumstance it is, of course, perfectly allowable.

Very often chalk is used in place of paper, the hares making marks upon trees, walls and pavements. This is not, however, as satisfactory as paper for scent. The scent should be white in summer and black in winter. The reason it should be black in winter is that in this way the hounds will be enabled to more easily follow it. This game is often played by rival clubs, two rival packs of hounds constituting the whole pack. The game is then decided by adding together the numbers representing the order in which the two clubs finished.

The Kaiser's Informal Call.

The Berlin paper Das Volk claims to have received the following story from a Frenchman living in Berlin: The Emperor William on the morning the news of M. Casimir-Perier's resignation became known in Berlin drove at once at an early hour to the French embassy. M. Herbette had only just got up, and when the illustrious visitor put in his appearance he had just begun to dress. The emperor, who had to be informed of this, amiably sent him word that he was not to put himself out of the way at all, but to come just as he was. He consequently appeared in his dressing gown, and the emperor joked him about his early rising. But then the emperor asked seriously what he thought of the surprising news. "What news?" answered M. Her-bette, astonished. "Why, that from Paris." "I have not yet opened the telegrams and know of no important news." He was horrified when the emperor told him about the resignation and more so when he found the Paris telegrams confirmed it. When the emperor took his leave, M. Herbette accompanied him, but on opening the door he started back in a fright, for in the hall were not only some gentlemen, but several ladies, to whom he could not possibly present himself in his costume. The emperor smiled and said: "I see. You can receive the German emperor in your dressing gown, but ladies-that is another affair."
