THERE are some wholesome indications pointing to the probable establishment of a permanent tariff commission, composed of experts, statisticians and business men. Thoughtful politicians and business men generally have long desired and sought to devise some means through which this tariff tinkering might be taken out of politics, and the extremes of tariff legislation avoided. Some of our broader statesmen, notably Senator Cullom, are openly advocating the idea of a permanent commission, and the idea recommends itself to THE TRIBUNE as a sensible and practical way out of what is getting to be an expensive and tiresome muddle.

O. FROST AND FAMILY DEPART.

O. Frost, cashier of the late Bank of Bartley, and family left, Sunday evening, for Beaver Crossing, this state, where Mrs. Frost and Reuben will spend about two weeks with friends and afterwards visit at Columbus and Broken Bow, going from there to Detroit, Michigan, to spend a good part of the summer with relatives. It is needless to state that their departure is a matter of general and sincere regret. They have always been among the foremost in affairs of a social nature and identified with every enterprise which would prove of benefit to the town or ameliorate the condition of those around them. Their untiring efforts to improve and beautify their residence property, in which they have been abundantly successful, it being by far the most attractive in town, cannot fail to be appreciated by every admirer of trees and shrubbery and flowers and lawns and well-kept premises.

In Mr. Frost the town has lost a valued business man and a citizen who commanded the admiration of even his opposers by his persistent and invariably successful efforts to accomplish those ends which he deemed wise and just. In Mrs. Frost local society has lost a leader, one who will be missed on every hand, and who was always lending her cheerful disposition to brighten the pathway of others. Charitable to a fault, she was constantly rendering assistance to the needy and afflicted and with them her place will be most difficult to fill. In Reuben his youthful playmates have lost their jolliest member, one always willing to sacrifice his pleasure if by that means he could add to the enjoyment of others. For him to know one was to gain their everlasting friendship and his companions are a unit in expressing regret at his removal.

Fortunate indeed is the place where this family decides to locate and to it we tender our heartiest felicitation.

Between 125 and 150 friends were at the depot when they left to wish them god-speed and a safe journey, thus testifying to the esteem in which they are held by those who have known them for years.

Mr. Frost returned, Tuesday morning, and will probably be in the vicinity attending to business for about two weeks before his departure.

THE COUNTY TEACHERS.

The wielders of the ferule, the autocrats of the "braineries", those who preside over the nation's destiny, in short, the dear, sweet-faced, charming, chic, little schoolma'ams from all parts of the county, flitted into town, Saturday morning, with the effect of a ray of sunshine in a Kansas cyclone cellar, and went away in the evening leaving the town seemingly brighter and better because of their brief stay within its borders. McCook, Indianola, Danbury, Lebanon, Cambridge, and Frontier county were represented, and the attendance particularly at the afternoon session was large.

The morning assembly was opened with music by a vocal quartet consisting of Misses Kate Smith and Nellie Stephens and Messrs. Perce Catlett and A. B. Wilson, and devotional exercises by Rev. G. B. Mayfield. Following was a paper, "The Use of the Story", by Mrs. Ami Teel of Indianola, which elicited considerable discussion. A guitar duet by Miss Grace Curlee and John Jones, and a paper by County Supt. Carnahan closed the forenoon program.

The beginning of the afternoon session was characterized by a vocal solo, Tennyson's well-known poem, "The Bugle Song", by Miss Hannah Stangeland of McCook, who delighted her auditors by her charming rendition. She was accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Frank Brown of Cambridge. Mrs. Sylvester Cordeal of McCook and Frank Abbott of Danbury were not present, but the subjects of their papers, "What Constitutes Order in the School-room" and "The Relation of Teacher and School-board", were discussed by the assemblage. In presenting his address on "Cultivating the Imagination" Prof. William Valentine of McCook did not disappoint those who expected the usual treat from his lips and, borrowing the expression, "When he had finished nothing remained to be said". Rev. Hart L. Preston handled his subject, "The Teacher and Truth", in a very able manner and was accorded the closest attention. A guitar solo by John Jones concluded the program. At this juncture President C. N. Whittaker was reminded that he had another attraction and accordingly introduced Roy Israel of Orleans as "an elocutionist of more than ordinary ability". Mr. Israel then endeavored to interest the audience by a labored recital of a granger's version of "How Reubenstein Played the Piano". Then the meeting closed "for sure".

A few nights ago she was in such pain that she was nearly crazy. She sent Mr. Rowland for the doctor, but he had read of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and instead of going for the physician he went to the store and secured a bottle of it. His wife did not approve of Mr. Rowland's purchase at first, but nevertheless applied the Balm thoroughly and in an hour's time was able to go to sleep. She now applies it whenever she feels an ache or a pain and finds that it always gives relief. He says that no medicine which she had used ever did her as much good.
