

Hidden Beauty

In Egypt the custom is for Princesses to hide their beauty by covering the lower part of the face with a veil. In America the beauty of many of our women is hidden because of the weakness and sickness peculiar to the sex. If the Egyptian custom prevailed in this country, many sufferers would be glad to cover their premature wrinkles, their sunken cheeks, their unneatly complexion, from the eyes of the world with the veil of the Orient.

Bradfield's Female Regulator brings out a woman's true beauty. It makes her strong and well in those organs upon which her whole general health depends. It corrects all menstrual disorders. It stops the drains of Leucorrhoea. It restores the womb to its proper place. It removes the causes of headache, backache and nervousness. It takes the poor, debilitated, weak, haggard, fading woman and puts her on her feet again, making her face beautiful by making her body well.

Druggists sell it for $1 a bottle. Send for our free illustrated book for women. The Bradfield Regulator Co., Atlanta, Ga.

"One Minute Cough Cure is the best remedy I ever used for coughs and colds. It is unequalled for whooping cough. Children all like it," writes H. N. Williams, Gentryville, Ind. Never fails. It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. Cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, pneumonia, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles. Its early use prevents consumption. D. W. Loar.

Agumaldo lost his hat in his flight, but as it was old and talk-riddled, he offers no reward for its return.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers purify the blood, clean the liver, invigorate the system. Famous little pills for constipation and liver troubles. D. W. Loar.

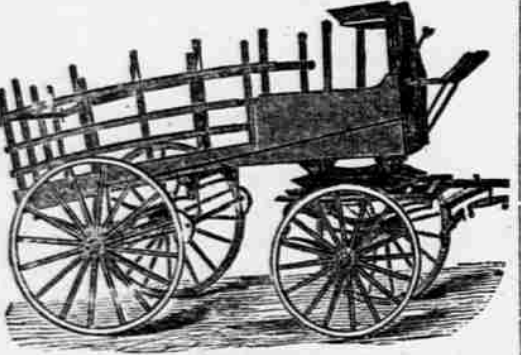

John Bull is now prepared to fully coincide with the late General Sherman in the opinion that "war is hell."

Mr. J. Sheer, Sedalia, Mo., saved his child's life by One Minute Cough Cure. Doctors had given her up to die with croup. It's an infallible cure for coughs, cold, grippe, pneumonia, bronchitis and throat and lung troubles. Relieves at once. D. W. Loar.

Third Article.

The December magazines teem with good things for teachers: "The Art of Seeing Things," by John Burroughs in the Century; one in the Cosmopolitan on "The Child Raised at Home," which contains many hints; and "The School City," by Albert Shaw in the Review of Reviews. In John Burroughs' article the device mentioned in my last, for the cultivation of attention and memory is recommended, and credit given to a well known primary teacher as the originator. I was not aware it had ever been given in any teacher's manual, but am glad to find myself in such worthy company as this lady and John Burroughs, and will say that I have used it for many years with gratifying results.

We often have among our pupils many who see without being conscious, and others who hear without hearing. Ask your pupils, some morning, what they saw on the way to school, without having asked them beforehand. One will have seen many things—the sky with its strange clouds; the trees and the distinct foliage of each; the grass; the flowers; the fields; the animals; the pebbles by the brook; and if snow covered the ground, this one will have noted the tracks of birds and animals and can tell what they were; another will have seen some of these, but not all, while still another will have seen absolutely nothing. Sometimes we flatter ourselves that the latter lives in a world of his imagination, that later he may develop into an inventor, or writer, or philosopher. Once in a while this may be true, but oftener we find that he has let his imagination run riot, and that the world in which he lives is simply a castle in Spain, which will eventually vanish into thin air without result. He has had, to begin with, a good stock of imagination which has been over-stimulated by too many fairy tales and adventures until his greatest pleasure is to imagine himself a prince with an Aladdin's lamp which will bring to him wealth and fame without effort on his part. He sees without seeing. He is the pupil who gives no trouble in school. He simply sits and dreams, and when recalled to his duties, will reluctantly come back to earth, only to wander away at the first opportunity. He needs more attention than the worst of all the wigglers, who annoys one so much. In him must be cultivated the art of seeing and knowing—(I like John Burroughs' expression, "The art of seeing,")—and consequently have adopted it. He must be taught that nature can present to his vision more wonders, and greater, than Aladdin's lamp or Arabian Nights. The growth and development of a single plant, or the habits of the tiniest insect, may serve to open his eyes to more wonderful things than the most daring fancy which the human mind has pictured.

A dozen noisy, wide-awake youngsters present less of a problem to the young teacher than does this one dreamer, but he can be awakened, and this very characteristic of imagination may be made an ally, if the teaching is made to fit his quality of mind. It has been truly said, "That not every scholar is a teacher, but every teacher must be a scholar." By this we mean, that he must have the spirit which is not only concerned in the accumulation of facts, but also in the intelligent use of those facts already learned. Every teacher must be able to impart his knowledge in a clear, concise and interesting way. He must constantly seek to know more, to expand himself, that he may be able to aid the expansion of the minds in his charge. If he confines himself to the little he already knows, and never goes outside the four walls of his school-room, or the covers of the text-book, he must become narrow, petty and nagging. Attention belongs as well to learning as to seeing, and must be as assiduously cultivated in one direction as in the other, for by hearing we learn of what we cannot see. "Read and you will know," might be translated also, "Hear and you will know," for you may read and listen forever without concentrated attention and you will never know. A class should be so interested that a fact need not be repeated, after the pupils have been a short time under a teacher's care. This state of affairs is neither impossible nor difficult, if the teacher has properly prepared himself and can impart his knowledge. He must be alert and enthusiastic. Another most important point is the cultivation of the art of doing (to carry Mr. Burroughs' idea a little further.) From the very first day, the pupil must be taught to do, and to do willingly because he likes to do. Encourage him at every step, from the writing of the first word he has learned, to the last lesson in the term. Do not encourage in him the spirit of emulation, with the idea of outstripping others, but because he should wish the best for himself, and should be satisfied with nothing less. If the best is impossible for him, then let it be his best, and not to be compared with others of different mental calibre. M. J. CORDEAL.

Clerk Howland and Clerk Swart of the Commercial and National hotels respectively indulged in a one-round mix-up at the station, last Saturday night, for which Clerk Howland appeared before Squire Babcock, yesterday, and repaired the fractured law to the extent of $1 and costs—the total spoiling a gold-eagle.

MR. AND MRS. WILL WALLIN of Red-willow departed, this week, for West Plains, Missouri, where they will probably locate. Here's success to them in large measure.

DR. AND MRS. J. A. GUNN were called to Emerson, Iowa, Sunday night, to the bedside of her father, Mr. Patrick, who was not expected to live. Miss Nellie received a telegram, this morning, announcing the death of her grandfather.

MISS MINNIE ROWELL entertained the A. L. Os. Tuesday evening, most enjoyably. They indulged in a taffy-pulling, with pop-corn on the side, and all that was needed to make the occasion complete was a proper admixture of the opposite sex.

F. O. FRITZ, supreme lecturer, dispatched his share of the 'possum, Monday night, at the Jupiter banquet. He is delivering a series of lectures for the good of the order in this part of the state, and will join his family in eastern Nebraska for the holidays. He is doing good work for the rising and promising young order.

F. S. LOFFON has the deepest sympathy of all in the sorrow that has come to his home in the loss of reason by Mrs. Lofton, following a severe siege of typhoid fever. It is expected to take her to Lincoln, tonight, for treatment, in the hope that she may recover her usual mental vigor and health. It is most devoutly to be hoped that such may be the result.

A Story of John Morrissey.
Henry L. Dawes of Pittsfield, Mass., successor of Charles Sumner in the senate, told the following story: "When I was a judge in Pittsfield, Morrissey and Yankee Sullivan fought a prize fight at a neighboring place called Boston Corners. Sullivan was arrested and fined $1,000. He handed over the money and went his way. A day or two later, while I was sitting on the bench, a fine looking man entered the courtroom and sent a letter up to me. It was from a friend of mine introducing John Morrissey. He, too, was fined $1,000 and said to me that he would send me his check on his return to New York.

"Well, I didn't know what might happen if he was let go on that understanding, but I said to Morrissey that any arrangement for settlement which he made with the sheriff would be satisfactory. The sheriff, feeling as I did, insisted upon having the fine paid in cash, and since Morrissey didn't happen to have that much cash with him the sheriff locked him up until the amount was sent on from New York.

"I fancied that Morrissey felt he owed me a grudge because of this incident. Years afterward in Washington a number of new congressmen were brought up to be introduced to me. Among them was Morrissey. When he came forward, he smiled and said, 'Mr. Dawes, I believe we have met before.'

She "Sassed Her."
Some visitors to East Gloucester paid a special call upon the woman said to be the original of Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward's famous story, "A Madonna of the Tubs." Mrs. Phelps Ward's summer home, be it known, is in East Gloucester. The visitors found a typical New Englander with a self evident capacity for taking care of herself.

"So you are the Madonna of the Tubs?" said the visitors.
"I am," said the New Englander.
"And Mrs. Phelps Ward wrote a beautiful story about you?"

"She did."
"Have you ever met Mrs. Ward?"
"I have. After she wrote that story she came round here one day and hunted me up. She said as how she wanted to see me for herself."
"How interesting!" murmured the visitors. "And what did you do?"
"Do?" repeated the Madonna of the Tubs. "What did I do? I sassed her well for writin such a story as that about me. Such a pack of lies I never read. Why, there wasn't one-half of it true. And she had the face to come and see me afterward! Oh, I sassed her well, I did!"—New York Sun.

Grotesque Spelling.
One of the Boston papers calls attention to this woeful example of bad spelling—and in Boston too! It is from the doorway bulletin board of a little restaurant:

This reminds the Tales of the Town man of a sign he saw not long ago in the window of a Broadway saloon: "A ror oster wit every Drink."
Several months ago there was an announcement laboriously chalked on a St. Clair street sidewalk in front of a beer refectory which read like this: "Fre lunge 11 2 2."

It took the man who saw this some time to figure out that the patron who didn't drop in between 11 o'clock and 2 o'clock would be very apt to miss the free lunch.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Needed an Explanation.
Sir John Adey, who was governor of Gibraltar fortress, always made himself closely acquainted with the work of whatever happened to be his department. Meeting a person once coming into the office late, the general asked him what time he was supposed to be on duty.
"Oh," was the reply, "I usually stroll in about 11 or 12 o'clock."
"Stroll in?" said Sir John in a rising tone. "Then I presume you do not leave till late?"
"Well, I usually slip off about 2 o'clock."
"Slip off at 2?" exclaimed the veteran in his topmost note. "Pray, may I ask what department you belong to?"
"Oh," said the stranger, "I come every Saturday to attend to the cocks." Sir John retreated for the first time in his life.

A Little Too Hot.
Little Janet, aged 4, noticed the other day at dinner the rest of the family helping themselves liberally to the mustard. Nobody offering her any, she waited until something drew away the attention of the others, when she lifted the mustard spoon. liberally doused a piece of bread with it and took a great bite. Her hand immediately went up to her burned mouth; but, bravely suppressing an outcry, she put the bread away from her, remarking, "I think I'll wait till that jelly gets cold."

His Nose For News.
"Henry," whispered the maiden in some embarrassment as they stood in the hallway, where the young and handsome reporter was preparing to say good night, "it's dreadful of me, I know, but I've been eating onions."
"Great Scott, Fannie!" he exclaimed. "You don't think that's a scoop on me, do you? I knew that as soon as I came in."—Chicago Tribune.

Reviving Appreciation.
"What's an 'octogenarian,' Cousin Martha?"
"Well, an octogenarian is a man who hates life when he is 70, but gets proud of himself again at 80."—Indianapolis Journal.
