Stricken by Sunstroke.

While on his way home, Tuesday evening from McCook, Ira J. Miller of Red Willow precinct, this county, was stricken down by the heat and died at his home about eight miles north-east of this city, Tuesday night about eleven o'clock, never rallying or regaining con-

Mr. Miller left McCook about six o'clock in the evening in his canopy-top spring wagon for home in usual health. L. A. Mansur rode with him as far as Michael Honlihan's farm, noticing nothing unusual in Mr. Miller's actions or speech. Farther on he spoke to one of the Sinsintaffer boys-nothing wrong being noticeable. At T. J. Ruggles' farm, still nearer Miller's farm, Ruggles' boy noticed that Miller was reclining in the seat of the wagon, one hand holding ness. the lines and the other grasping the rod at the end of the seat; at this point the day night, from visiting his children supplemented in the evening by Dr. horses had gotten out of the road into a near Crete. wheat field, but a little farther on they farther on, Jack Lytle noticed the same riding gallery. condition of affairs, but thought there was nothing wrong. At the Brown farm, adjoining the Miller farm, T. H.
