Republican Senatorial Convention.
The Republican electors of the Twenty-Ninth Senatorial district are requested to send delegates from their respective counties to meet in convention in the city of McCook, Nebraska, Thursday, September 13, 1900, at 8 o'clock, p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for the office of state senator and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

The several counties are entitled to representation as follows:
Chase.....4 Dundy.....4
Frontier.....10 Furnas.....14
Gosper.....5 Hayes.....4
Hitchcock.....5 Red Willow.....11
The apportionment being based on the vote cast for Hon. M. B. Reese for supreme judge in 1899, giving each county one delegate at large and one delegate for each 100 votes and major fraction thereof.
It is recommended that no proxies be admitted to the convention, but that the delegates present be authorized to cast the full vote of the county they represent.
McCook, Nebraska, August 15th, 1900.
F. M. KIMMELL, Chairman.
F. M. KIMMELL, Secretary.

COLONEL HITCHCOCK of the Omaha World-Herald modestly announces his candidacy for Senator Thurston's toga. It wouldn't fit him if he got it—but he won't get it.
COLLIS P. HUNTINGTON, president of the Southern Pacific railroad, died at his summer home in the Adirondacks, Tuesday night, of heart failure. His fortune is estimated by Wall street at between forty and fifty millions.

CERTAINLY there were no more gallant soldiers in the war than General Wheeler, General Fitzhugh Lee and others whose names are known throughout the country. With such a record in bringing on the war and fighting it to a successful issue why the south should oppose President McKinley for attempting to secure the results of the war is more than can be easily understood. On the issue of imperialism the south stands with McKinley. Why should it not support him?

ONE year ago the Democrats could not talk enough about the "trusts." It was a theory fondly held that the "trusts" were held in trust for the Democratic party as the "paramount" issue in 1896. Why is it that there is so little talking about the "trusts" by the Democrats now? Were it not that the writer of the anti-trust plank of the Democratic platform, Van Wyck, has kept the trust issues fresh on ice; that Richardson of Tennessee, who presided over the Kansas City gathering, through his private book trust, has made the "trust issue" an open book; that Senator Jones, chairman of the Democratic national committee, has found a trustworthy use of a "trust" in cotton as a means of extracting "velvet"; that Bryan himself is seeking to get elected by means of a political fusion "trust"; the "trust" issue in politics would, during this campaign, be a rather rusty issue.

ALL the historic precedents favor the re-election of President McKinley, for no president has ever run for a second term, with a united party behind him, who was not re-elected. The presidents who have held two terms were Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln and Grant. These were re-elected either by the whole people, as in the case of Washington and Monroe, or by an undivided party vote. The presidents who were defeated for a second term were John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Martin Van Buren, Grover Cleveland and Benjamin Harrison, and in each case their defeat was due to dissensions in their own party, and they were not loyally supported. The most recent instances, Harrison and Cleveland, are within the memory of every one. The former's quarrel with Blaine lost him many votes, while Cleveland was defeated in New York by one of the Democratic factions. But there are no divisions in the Republican party today, based on the spirit of faction or enmity to McKinley. The party stands four square to the world, presenting an unbroken front in every direction. The dissensions are in the Democratic party, not the Republican.

THE death of J. J. Ingals removes a prominent figure from American politics and letters.

THERE are eighteen reasons why W. S. Morlan should be elected to congress from the Fifth district of Nebraska. They are as follows: Adams, Chase, Clay, Dundy, Franklin, Frontier, Furnas, Gosper, Hall, Harlan, Hayes, Hitchcock, Kearney, Nuckolls, Perkins, Phelps, Red Willow and Webster.—Beaver City Tribune.

THE southern people are now and always have been in favor of expansion. It was through the influence of the south and of southern statesmen that Louisiana, Florida, Texas, California and Oregon were acquired. Imperialism is the traditional policy of the south, if expansion means imperialism. No part of the union was more eager to free Cuba from the Spanish oppression than the south. It was the southern Democrats in congress who united with the Republicans of the north-west and far west to bring on the war.

WHEN the Republican county convention meets in September there will be no other name presented for state senator except that of E. N. Allen. Ask anyone whom the Republicans will nominate and the response comes quickly, "Why, Ed Allen of course." So it is a settled fact Ed has the nomination right within his grasp. As to his acceptance we cannot say, but we believe he will not turn a deaf ear to the unanimous voice of the party. Ed is more popular than he was a year ago and about his re-election there can be no doubt; the only question in our mind is, how much bigger will his majority be?—Cambridge Clarion.

THERE is an interesting substance of the hue and cry from Democratic sources about "militarism." The phenomenon has been coincidental with Bryan's long silence about China, and final confession that the administration was doing the right thing there. If "militarism" is right in China, as Mr. Bryan admits, why is it wrong in the Philippines? Troops in China may avenge crimes that have been committed, but can never restore the lives of people that have been already massacred. In the Philippines the use of American troops has prevented the perpetration of such horrors as in China have shocked the whole world, including even Mr. Bryan. Manila was prevented from becoming a charnel house only through the vigilance of American troops who were on guard duty the night that Aguinaldo had set for the general massacre of all Americans and Europeans in that city. How about the old adage that "An ounce of prevention is worth one pound of cure?"

MR. BRYAN doubtless feels internally vexed over the praises bestowed upon him since his nomination, by prominent English papers like the "Spectator." It must be naturally disagreeable to be taken for a friend by a nation against which he wants to wage a wordy war in the hope of gaining the votes of such people in this country as feel hostile to it. The English apparently care nothing about Bryan's pro-Boer protestations, for they do not believe Mr. Bryan as president would be militant enough to involve the Anglo-Saxon countries in bloody war by going any further than offering to mediate, as President McKinley did. Why England wishes for Bryan's election is because he is a free-trader. By closing the mills of the United States the mills of England would do a bigger business. The work that Mr. Bryan would take away from American workmen would go to the workmen of England.

lives a happy wife. She writes: "I have used Mother's Friend before two confinements. The last time I had twins, and was in labor only a few minutes. Suffered very little." The reason why does expectant mothers so much good is because it is an external liniment, to be applied upon the outside, where much of the strain comes. It helps because the pores of the skin readily absorb it, and it comes into direct contact with and is absorbed by the parts involved. Morning sickness is quickly banished, and nervousness is kept completely away. The sense of dread and foreboding is not experienced, even during labor itself. Confinement is short and almost without pain. Recovery is quick and sure. Best of all, Mother's Friend benefits the unborn just as much as the expectant mother, and when the little one comes it will be strong, lusty and healthy.

Nast, Conkling and Curtis.
It is to be suspected that some of Tom Nast's wittiest work with his marvelous pencil was "printed, not published"—was intended simply to gratify his friends—and never met the eyes of the general public. Not long ago, in looking over the album of a lady who for years was a social leader at Washington, I came across a contribution of Nast's which was as effective in its way as any of the cartoons which have made his name famous.
He wanted to impress upon the lady that Washington life had been too much for him and did so by drawing a capital full length picture of himself as he appeared walking along the avenue. What gave the picture point and rendered it irresistible was the fact that the back of his head was where his face ought to be—in other words, Washington had turned his head.
I suppose the politicians still recall Roscoe Conkling's famous allusion to the great cartoonist in his Rochester speech "dedicated" to George William Curtis. Mr. Curtis at the time was the editor of Harper's Weekly, a position which he had held for many years. In the course of his philippic Mr. Conkling took occasion to refer to The Weekly, and although Mr. Curtis sat listening to him, he described it simply as "the paper made famous by the pencil of Nast."—New York Mail and Express.

Tragedies of the Grand Canyon.
Tragic stories are told of men who have lost their lives in the search for precious metals which may lie hidden or uncovered, says Harriet Monroe in The Atlantic. The great primeval flood cut its broad V through all the strata of rock, with all their veins of metallic ore, down to the earliest shapeless mass, leaving in its wake the terraced temples and towers which seem to have been planned by some architect of divinest genius to guard their inaccessible treasures till the end of time. And the river, rising far to the north among mountains rich in mineral, has been washing for ages the sands away and depositing thus gold and silver and lead in the still crevices of the inaccessible chasm.
Here the earth laughs at her human master and bids him find her wealth if he dare and bear it away if he can. A young Californian who accepted the challenge and set forth upon the turgid water to sift its sands for gold never emerged with his hapless men to tell the story of his search. Only near the brink of the cleft are a few miners burrowing for copper and sending their ore up to the rim on the backs of hardy burros, as who should prick the mountain with a pin or measure the ocean with a cup.

Got the Correct Time.
Jake Foster was for many years one of the characters of Oregon, Mo. He drove the hack between Oregon and Forest City and was known to every man, woman and child in Holt county. Oregon is three miles from the railroad and for many years was not connected with any other town by either telegraph or telephone. One morning Robert Montgomery hailed Foster as the hack started for Forest City and said: "Jake, I wish you would get the correct time at Forest. My watch stopped last night."
"All right, Bob," said Jake.
When Jake returned from Forest, he put up his team and walked around to the bank where Montgomery presided. Stalking into the bank, Jake stepped up to the window and laid down a soiled bit of paper bearing the figures "11:17."
"What is that?" asked Montgomery in astonishment.
"That," replied Jake, "is the correct time at Forest."—Omaha World-Herald.

Lungs and Long Life.
One of the most remarkable cases of longevity on record was that of an Englishman, born in 1483, whose delicate appearance made all the doctors give him up when he was in the cradle. His chest was so narrow, says the report, that he seemed to have difficulty in breathing. Well, this young moribund, condemned by the doctors to die in short order, died in 1651 at the age of 169. He saw the reign of ten kings.
Secundi Hango, consul of Venice at Smyrna, measured only 57 centimeters around the chest, and one of his lungs was diseased. Nevertheless he lived to the age of 115 years. He was married five times and had 49 children. When he was 100 years old, he got his wisdom teeth. When he was 110, his hair turned black again. At 112 his eyebrows and his beard turned black.

Proved His Theory.
The late Hall McAllister some years ago entertained a visiting scientist at the Union club, before his amalgamation with the Pacific, and during the evening, a particularly foggy one, made some whimsical remark conveying the idea that fog was an excellent conductor of sound.
The scientist took exception to this novel theory and asked Mr. McAllister on what it was based.
"On phenomena which we have all observed," returned the ready jurist. "On an evening like this we hear the fog horn quite distinctly, but when there is no fog we cannot hear it at all."—San Francisco Argonaut.

"Shall I sing 'Because I Love You'?" asked Mrs. Darley as she seated herself at the piano.
"No," replied Mr. Darley, who is a brute. "If you love me, don't sing."—Detroit Free Press.

He used them for three or four days without relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him the next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said, 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured."
