AFTER balloting for 111 times the state board of education decided upon Kearney as the location for the new state normal school. The final vote stood as follows: Broken Bow 2, Kearney 4, Ord 1. The state board of education consists of State Treasurer Mortensen, Superintendent Fowler, Mr. Tawney of Pierce, Mr. Delzel of Lexington, Mr. Rogers of Omaha, chairman of the board; Thomas Majors of Peru, and Rev. L. P. Ludden of Lincoln. This mode of putting up to the highest bidder and to the manipulations of politicians the location of the state institutions is one of the most reprehensible transactions in which the state can be a partner. These state institutions should go where they are most needed, and the state should pay the bill like an individual or corporation. As it is present deals and politics and bluffs seem to have the call and perhaps will to the end.

PUBLIC FREE LIBRARY NOTES.

The most important question left unanswered by the past is what is called the "labor problem." Its solution involves, or seems to involve, a readjustment of social conditions. The conflict of capital and labor, now rapidly approaching a crisis, is absorbing the attention not only of the economist, but of the sociologist as well. We who dwell in a rural community, remote from the turmoil of metropolitan life,—we who breathe a social atmosphere of almost absolute serenity, can form no conception of its terrible seriousness. The city dweller, to whatsoever class he belongs—whether he is an employer, or the member of a union, or one of that vastly larger estate comprising all other men—the city dweller, who comes face to face with one or another of the problem's innumerable phases at every turn, alone can realize its magnitude. He alone knows how hopelessly far from settlement the difficulty is.

Many men are devoting their energies and their lives to the study of the subject. The results are found in several interesting volumes that have expanded our knowledge and broadened our views, but that seem to have accomplished little practical good—judging at least, from the conditions that prevail, for never have employer and employe been nearer the verge of open warfare than now. This may be the fault of the books, or it may be because the books have not reached the hands of those for whom they were intended. Literature of this class has enjoyed wide popularity, a few of the "problem" books having attained circulations of more than a hundred thousand copies each.

One of the most honest thinkers along these lines was Henry George, in whose untimely death the human race lost one of its sincerest friends. Bellamy was somewhat of a dreamer, but his works were popular in their day. They appealed more strongly to the young than to nature minds, and it may be doubted whether their influence was more than temporary. Josiah Flint has dealt with tramp life in a series of fascinating sketches that have appeared from time to time in the magazines, and are now more accessible in book form. Wyckoff has treated of the worker himself, and probably has a profounder understanding of the real controversy than any other man. He, too, has been a contributor to the magazines. I. K. Friedman in his first novel, "By Bread Alone," describes a strike at a steel plant. Notwithstanding innumerable blemishes, the book is not without merit, and will repay a reading. In "A New Industrial Conspiracy," the first article in the September number of McClure's magazine, Bay Stannard Baker gives the reader a rather hasty, but none the less accurate glance into the affairs at Chicago, "the best organized city in the world," where a condition bordering on anarchy exists.

The questions treated in these books are of such paramount importance, that it is well for all of us to be familiar with them. Moreover, they are interesting, and from their consideration one can gain, not only profit, but pleasure.

"After my first baby was born I did not seem to regain my strength although the doctor gave me a tonic which he considered very superior, but instead of getting better I grew weaker every day. My husband insisted that I take Wine of Cardui for a week and see what it would do for me. I did take the medicine and was very grateful to find my strength and health slowly returning. In two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was able to take up my usual duties. I am very enthusiastic in its praise."

WINE OF CARDUI

Wine of Cardui reinforces the organs of generation for the orifice of pregnancy and childbirth. It prevents miscarriage. No woman who takes Wine of Cardui need fear the coming of her child. If Mrs. Unrath had taken Wine of Cardui before her baby came she would not have been weakened as she was. Her rapid recovery should commend this great remedy to every expectant mother. Wine of Cardui regulates the menstrual flow.

Nebraska at the World's Fair.

The great State of Nebraska, in making her World's Fair exhibit at St. Louis, will draw largely from the State Museum, with its treasures, valued at more than $125,000, and will also have the private collection of the Hon. Charles H. Morrill, which cost more than $50,000.

Nebraska's Commission selected a building site on the plateau of States facing the Kansas building, and between the Oklahoma and Colorado buildings. The building was designed by Thomas Kimball, of Omaha. It will be 80x100 feet, and will cost $15,000.

The appropriation provided by the State legislature is $35,000. Commercial organizations and private individuals have undertaken the task of doubling this sum, and have guaranteed the success of the undertaking. With the collection of the State Museum and Prof. Morrill's valuable collection, Nebraska will practically have $200,000 at her disposal.

In the Department of Education, Nebraska will make an especially comprehensive exhibit under the control of Prof. E. H. Barbour, of the Nebraska State University, at Lincoln.

In the Palace of Agriculture, the sugar beet industry will be the basis for a splendid display, showing the accepted methods of cultivating the beet, and in the production of sugar. A sugar beet factory will be shown in operation. Nebraska is the State in which this great industry was developed, and where the first sugar beet factory and refinery were established.

Other products in the agricultural department that will form the basis for large exhibits will be wheat, corn, oats and the grasses. The horticultural exhibit will embrace choice selections from the apple, grape, and small fruit crops.

A Cut and Slash.

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach and exposes the nerves of the stomach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucus instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

relieves all inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the stomach, protects the nerves, and cures bad breath, sour risings, a sense of fullness after eating, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.

Kodol Digests What You Eat
