To railroad employes the recent decision of the United States supreme court, relieving railroads of liability in case of accidents the result of employes' negligence, is the most startling and paralyzing blow that railroad men have received in a half century. Five of the nine supreme judges held to this position and four favored the more rational view that the operator is the agent of the employer and as such his negligence rendered the employer liable for damage or death caused thereby.

Fifth District Committee.
 Hastings, Neb., May 15.—(Special to the Bee)—The following are the new congressional committeemen for the Fifth District: Adams county, J. W. James; Chase, W. C. Hill; Dundy, L. Warren; Franklin, James Lantz; Furnas, T. A. Boyd; Gosper, Walter Smith; Harlan, A. H. Gosper; Hayes, John H. Christian; Kearney, S. C. Stewart; Nuckolls, W. F. Beck; Phelps, H. Bush; Red Willow, W. A. McCook; Clay, Harry Thomas; Hitchcock, W. E. Van Peltton; Frontier, J. A. Williams; Hall, John Brinnizer; Perkins, B. F. Hastings; Webster, J. S. White. George Allen was made chairman of the congressional committee and J. E. Kelley of McCook secretary.

Risk is Assumed by the Employe.
 Washington, D. C., May 16.—The supreme court of the United States today laid down the principle that a telegraph operator for a railroad company and a fireman on a railroad engine are "fellow servants," and that the negligence of the former, causing the death of the latter in the operation of trains, was a risk the fireman assumed and was not a ground for damages against the railroad company.

The case was that of Alline A. Dixon against the Northern Pacific railroad company for damages for the death of her husband C. A. Dixon, a fireman on the road, killed in a collision caused by the negligence of a telegraph operator.

The opinion delivered by Justice Brewer answered two questions certified from the United States court of appeals for the Eighth circuit as follows:
 "First.—When a local telegraph operator is called on specially by a train dispatcher to give information relative to the arrival of a train at his station, to enable the dispatcher to formulate orders for the movement of other trains, does the local operator in the matter of giving such information act as a fellow servant of the train operatives in such sense that the master is not liable to train operatives who are injured by obeying an erroneous order of the dispatcher, that was induced by false information given by the local operator?"

The answer to this question is: "The telegraph operator was, under the circumstances described, a fellow servant of the fireman."

"Second.—Is the negligence of a local telegraph operator and station agent of a railroad company in observing and reporting by telegraph to the train dispatcher the movement of trains past his station, which caused the injury or death of a fireman of the company without any fault or negligence of the train dispatcher, the negligence of the vice principal for which the company is liable in damages to the fireman or his personal representatives, or is it the negligence of a fellow servant of the fireman, the risk of which the latter assumes?"

Answer—"The negligence of the operator was the negligence of a fellow servant of the fireman, the risk of which the latter assumed."

A dissenting opinion was delivered by Justice White and concurred in by the chief justice and Justices Harlan and McKenna. In this dissenting opinion the view was expressed that the operator was the agent of the employer and as such his negligence rendered the employer liable for damages for death caused thereby.

The opinion was further expressed that the court's decision would create much confusion.

A New County Atlas of Red Willow.
 George A. Ogle & Co. of Chicago are gathering the data from which to make an atlas of Red Willow county. Mr. Siegel, representing the concern, is now in the county clerk's office getting necessary facts and data from the records for such atlas. Field men will later go over the county. Public Free Library Notes.
 Our inclination at this season of the year is to turn from books to nature, the source of all knowledge. How much better if we saw ways and only to the fountain's head rather than to the lower stream whose waters, from patches underlying through populous regions, become contaminated. Books, worthy of the name, are transcripts from nature. They are, necessarily, abridgments. They tell, imperfectly but of the stars. Art appeals to a single sense, while the thing itself speaks a language that every fiber understands.
 We who live in this new and somewhat unsettled land, remote from what we conceive to be the centers of all learning, are given to lamenting our isolation. We, too, would stroll through galleries crowded with treasures of sculpture and painting. We, too, would visit the opera and the theatre, with their blaze of light and music, their famous names and women. We would hear the compositions of the masters rendered by the greatest actors in the world. We would have access to those collections of books in which are found the recorded knowledge of the generations that have preceded us.
 The stone images of men that stand motionless and voiceless in the corridors of the museum, what are they at best but counterfeits; at best they are not imperfect even in form, which is the only aspect they attempt to imitate. Who is it they seem more wonderful to us than the originals, who, instinct with life, the greatest of mysteries, we see in our daily walks? And the paintings, mere sketches from old corners, caught on the instant and held fast until the colors fade—how are they comparable with the landscapes we may view from every hill-top—the whole world spread out before us, changing with the seasons, changing with the hours, changing with the coming and going of the clouds—even with the blowing of the wind? If you would hear music, go listen to the wind blow through the reeds, the water flow over the sands, the meadow lark sing in the fields, or on a still October day, when hills and valleys gleam beneath the lazy sunshine, say if the singer is not more eloquent than Wagnerian overtures. As for Shakespeare, why, if we must concern ourselves with the affairs of other men, should we not feel deeper interest in the world of yesterday, than in that of three hundred years ago? Why should not living Americans appear more interesting than the dead English kings? What do books teach us that we cannot better learn from the things around us? Nothing that is worth the trouble to acquire. Nothing that we cannot learn from nature's self. Every man is given power to see and know much that he is not permitted to reveal. Can words picture the green fields, or repeat the song-bird's note?

Weak Hearts
 Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

BONE FOOD
 Soft and crooked bones mean bad feeding. Call the disease rickets if you want to. The growing child must eat the right food for growth. Bones must have bone food, and so must have blood food and so on through the list.
Scott's Emulsion is the right treatment for soft bones in children. Little doses every day give the stiffness and shape that healthy bones should have.
 Bow legs become straighter, loose joints grow stronger and firmness comes to the soft heads.
 Wrong food caused the trouble. Right food will cure it. In thousands of cases Scott's Emulsion has proven to be the right food for soft bones in childhood.

"Do It Today."
 The time-worn injunction, "Never put off 'til tomorrow what you can do today," is now generally presented in this form: "Do it today!" That is the terse advice we want to give you about that hacking cough or demoralizing cold with which you have been struggling for several days, perhaps weeks—and let that remedy be Dr. Botchee's German Syrup, which has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble.
