Hugh Bonner, The Veteran Fire Fighter

THERE have been great changes in the city of Manila since the era of Spanish occupation. One of the institutions established by Americans that have earned popularity is the fire department. Much of the efficiency which the Manila fire fighters have attained is due to the work of that veteran fireman, Hugh Bonner, who was recently appointed deputy fire commissioner of New York city for the borough of Manhattan. It has been said that Bonner comes nearer to being the embodiment of the story book fire fighter than any other living man. He is sixty-six years of age, and when he was a youth fire fighting was not an occupation of itself. Even the city of New York, his birthplace, had no paid fire department. Bonner learned the tinsmith's trade as a young man, but as a boy he always ran with the engines when a fire was to be put out, and as soon as he was old enough he joined a volunteer company and rose to be a captain in the volunteer department. While he was fighting a fire with his company one day he and his men were notified that they had been made members of the newly organized paid department. He continued in the service about thirty-five years and for over ten years was chief of the department, raising it to a state of efficiency that made it famous the world over. About a half dozen years ago he resigned and was commissioned shortly afterward to go to Manila and undertake the establishment of American methods of fire fighting in the capital of the Philippines. During the 300 years or so that the dons ruled in Manila they had not done much toward establishing a fire department. In a city of nearly 300,000 people there were only a few antiquated hand engines manned by volunteers. All this has been changed by the work Bonner did in his stay of from two to three years in the city. Today the fire department is the pet of property owners, who no longer watch in blank despair the burning of their buildings when a fire breaks out. There are over 150 paid men in the department. About 35 per cent of the force are natives, but the officers are Americans, and many of the officers and men are former United States soldiers, a fact which makes for good discipline. There are fire houses, steam and chemical engines and all other appurtenances of an up to date department. The first time that Bonner and his new service were called on to attend a fire in Manila there was great excitement in the Philippine city. A blaze had started in the store of a merchant on the Escolta, the leading street. Shopkeepers by the hundred ran out into the street, fearing that their stocks of goods would be consumed. Amid a clanging of strange bells and a clatter of hoofs the new firemen made a record in reaching the scene. They obeyed their orders like soldiers, the fire was put out in less than half an hour, and Manila did not get over the sensation in a week.

HUGH BONNER AND MANILA METHODS BEFORE HE IMPROVED THEM.

One time when Bonner was chief of the New York fire department a fire broke out on election night on Broadway. A force of thirty men were on the fourth and fifth floors of the burning building pouring water on the flames when the wall on one side of the structure from the roof to the pavement fell outward. There was a whirlwind of flame and smoke, and the men at work in the building fighting the fire prepared to jump to the ground, thinking that otherwise they would be hurled in the ruins. The windows were lined with men ready to leap to a fate that might be death. Bonner is noted for his knowledge of the construction of buildings. He knew that though one wall had fallen out the others would probably stand. So he shouted to the panic stricken men:

"Stay where you are. You're all right." The men had so much confidence in his judgment and were under such good discipline that they obeyed, and thus their lives were saved.

EARLY CREEK HISTORY.

In the Time of Cortez the Tribe Life Was Idyllic.

The Creeks are an entirely different race of people from the Cherokees and other northern Indians. They are of Aztec, or rather, Toltec, origin, and in a teocallis, or pyramidal, temple, located in a secluded wild of the Creek country, the same religious rites and ceremonies are performed today that were performed in the imposing teocallis located on the bank of the beautiful Lake Tezcuco, in the days of the ill starred Montezuma II. The archives of the nation are here preserved in hieroglyphics, beautifully painted on shells, strung together on deer tendons. Here are also preserved their most cherished relics, their green Jasper altar and a life sized image of their great war god, both brought from their former home near Vera Cruz, Mexico.

At the time Cortez made his appearance in that neighborhood, bent upon a career of conquest and plunder, the Creeks, as they are now called, were living a peaceful, idyllic life in a land made sacred to them by having been the home of their ancestors for untold thousands of moons and containing the ashes and bones of their wise and loved old men through many generations. Gathering their warriors together, they gave battle to the invaders, but weapons of stone and flint could make but little impression upon the steel clad warriors of Spain, and they were defeated with terrible slaughter. Gathering wives and little ones together and taking with them their most cherished possessions, among which were the records of their race, the Jasper altar and their war god, holding in his extended right hand the sacrificial knife of flint, they made their weary way to the capital of Montezuma, the sacred city of Mexico, where they were warmly welcomed by that unfortunate monarch and where they fought bravely in defense of the devoted city. They assisted Gauto-mazin, the chivalric nephew of Montezuma, in his glorious, if ill fated, attempt to regain the throne of his ancestors, and upon its failure and the attendant death of that young chieftain by torture, after the manner of the ancient Israelites, they determined to seek a land that man knew not, where they might provide homes for their families and worship the gods of their ancestors.—Exchange.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The man who loves his joke is usually unpopular.
Put yourself in the other man's place and you may stop abusing him.

It is commendable to save your money, but it is not commendable to look it. We worry as if we had to go through a whole year tomorrow instead of just one day.

The cares and worries of life look pretty good, after all, to those returning to town through the cemetery gate. When a soldier returns from a battle his story of the fight is more interesting and less truthful if he returns alone.

Of course friends are a good thing, but when misfortune comes to you which do you wish you had more of—friends or dollars?—Acheson Globe.

Cold Feet.

Never go to bed with cold feet; never try to sleep without being perfectly certain that you will be able to keep them warm. To lie one night with cold feet gives such a strain to the system as will be felt seriously, perhaps ending in a fit of sickness. Cold feet show an unbalanced circulation. The very best thing to do is to warm them by exercise, if that be practicable; if not, by dipping them in hot and cold water alternately two or three times and then using vigorous friction. If that does not warm them and keep them warm, heat them before the fire, drying them thoroughly, and then correct your habits or improve your health, for be sure that one or the other is wrong, perhaps both.

Washington Irving.

A house in William street, New York, was Irving's birthplace on April 3, 1783. The British were soon to evacuate the city and Washington took possession of it. Mrs. Irving, a warm hearted woman of English birth and an ardent patriot of the new land, said, "Washington's work is ended, and the child shall be named after him." The child was still in the care of a Scotch nurse when one day she saw the president, as Washington then was, enter a shop, and after him she went. "Please, your honor," said she, "here's a balm was named after you." The president laid his hand on the boy's head and gave him a blessing, which he never forgot.

A Jewel of a Wife.

The minister's wife had an unwelcome visitor in a very talkative scandal monger, so the minister went out for a stroll. Returning half an hour later, he called out, "That old cat gone, I suppose?" "Yes," said his wife, who had still her guest talking to her, "I sent it home in a basket, my dear, this morning." "What do you think of that for presence of mind and absence of cat?"—Christian Life.

What Will Happen to It.

"That flimsily constructed public building is a scandal!" exclaimed the patriot.
"Never mind," answered Mr. Degraft soothingly; "it'll soon blow over."—Washington Star.

Thankful For Small Mercies.

A man lost a leg in a railway accident, and when they picked him up the first word he said was, "Thank the Lord, it was the leg with the rheumatism in it."—Atlanta Constitution.
