RAILROAD NEWS ITEMS.

Mrs. R. E. Foe went down to Red Cloud, first of the week, on a visit to the homefolks.

Engineer Zajicek was working with his engine, Saturday, when he told his helper to open one of the valves, and by mistake he opened the "blow off cock." Mr. Zajicek was standing in front of it and as it had 200 pounds pressure on it struck him hard. Fortunately it was covered with dust and dirt so as to form a protection as it struck him or he would have been scalded worse. As it was he was bruised as he was thrown against the tank, and not scalded seriously. He is getting along nicely and will soon be out again.—Oxford Standard.

Automatic Block System.

Engineer William H. Watson of Los Angeles, Calif., who is here on a visit, guest of Engineer L. S. Viersen, is the inventor and patentee of an automatic block system, which seems to be the most perfect, automatic, absolutely certain yet offered to the public in that needed line.

It seems to provide for practically every emergency and is attracting the attention of railroad men here, as it does everywhere he exhibits the details of the patent.

It seems destined to be one of the great factors in avoiding the accidents which now cost American railroads so much money and so many lives annually.

Rosebush Buys the Plant.

The McCook Cement Stone Co. plant was purchased, end of last week, by H. N. Rosebush, the well-known cement stone man, who assumed charge of the plant out on West Dennison street, Monday morning. Mr. Barger, we understand, contemplates removing from the city. The plant in Mr. Rosebush's management will be in good hands.

TESTING DRUGS.

Ergotine Is Tried on Chickens, Digitalis on Frogs.

A lot of sorry looking chickens, dogs and cats loafed in the black, ill smelling yard of the great chemical plant.

"We use these animals to test our drugs on," said the chemist. "They come in very handy. They more than earn their board."

"Ergotine is a drug we test on chickens. It is a simple test. If a dose of ergotine fails to turn a chicken's comb black, we know that the drug is for some reason or other worthless."

"Hasheesh we test on dogs. Hasheesh is made of female hemp buds. Male hemp buds have no medicinal value, yet some dishonest dealers put male buds on the market, and since they resemble the female buds precisely it is impossible to detect them save by an actual test. Dogs given hasheesh get drunk and happy if the stuff is good."

"Digitalis, the heart stimulant, is tested on frogs. We inject a drop of it into a frog's stomach, and in the kymograph, or heart recording machine, we study the changes that take place in the frog's heart action. Thus we get a very accurate knowledge of what our digitalis can do."

"Do we ever test drugs on ourselves? Oh, yes, indeed, often. Chemists have lost their lives, chemists have gone incurably insane, through too rash a bravery in testing drugs on their own persons."—Los Angeles Times.

The Raven.

Writing on "Birds in Christian Legend and Symbol" in the National Review, Rev. R. L. Giles says:

The raven is looked upon with divided feelings. He is the "bird of ill omen" par excellence. "Corvo di mal augurio" is indeed the Italian equivalent of the phrase and "Unglucksrabbe" the German one. According to the fathers, he is the emblem of prostration, with his cry of "Cras, cras"—"Tomorrow, tomorrow." His not having returned to the ark has always been remembered against him. Yet he, too, is a pious bird. He played his part in the Christmas mystery. It was said that at the hour of the great birth the crook croaked "Christus natus est," the raven croaked "Quando?" the rook cawed "Hac nocte," the ox moored "Ubi?" the sheep bleated "Bethlehem," and the ass brayed "Eamus." This is found as early as the fourth century.

His Gratitude.

The Medical Record tells of a man who was cured of blindness by a surgeon remarkable for his unprepossessing appearance. When vision was fully restored, the patient looked at his benefactor and said:

"Lucky for you, young man, I did not see you before you operated or I would never have given my consent."
