Chanler as a Campaigner—Eugene V. Debs and the Socialist System of Winning Votes.

Samuel Gompers and His Long Labor Record—Other Figures in the Political Battle.

LEWIS S. CHANLER.

It was indeed a whirlwind tour that Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler made as Democratic candidate for governor of New York in the closing days of the campaign. And no less arduous and energetic was the tour of his Republican opponent, Charles E. Hughes. The two men passed and repassed each other on the railroads, put up sometimes at the same hotel and on several occasions their itineraries coincided so closely that, without any intention of so doing, they found themselves holding rival meetings in smaller towns of the state at the same time. Automobiles were pressed into service by both candidates in covering country as well as city districts, and in this way both were able to fill a great many speaking engagements in the course of a day's campaign labors. While the two candidates conducted so vigorous a canvass, both were careful to avoid personalities and to treat each other with unflinching courtesy.

The campaign of two years ago, which resulted in the election of Mr. Hughes, the head of the Republican ticket, for governor and of the Democratic candidates for the other state offices, placed Mr. Chanler and Mr. Hughes in peculiar relations. As lieutenant governor Mr. Chanler has often been called on to appear with Mr. Hughes at public functions or to consider public matters with him as a member of the state government. One of these occasions was when, just at the outset of the campaign, Governor Hughes and Lieutenant Governor Chanler met at a state fair and spoke from the same platform on nonpolitical subjects. Under such circumstances it would be difficult for some men not to permit political differences to affect their personal relations and their conduct toward each other in public.

Mr. Chanler is an effective speaker and a good campaigner, and he has a splendid physique, which enables him to undergo prolonged strain without incurring great fatigue.

Thomas D. Long, Democratic nominee for governor in Montana, is a lawyer and was born in Columbus, Ind., Oct. 10, 1867. He was chosen assistant attorney general of the state of Montana seven years ago. The Democrats carried the last state election in Montana, when J. K. Toole was re-elected governor. He was the THOMAS D. LONG, first governor and has been honored with several re-elections.

ceived in this country, claims that Abraham Lincoln would have stood for the same things that socialism does if he had lived at this time. In the course of his canvass he paid a visit to Lincoln's tomb at Springfield, Ill. Standing by the sarcophagus of the martyr president he delivered an eulogy upon him, saying among other things: "Slave power, which loathed and despised Lincoln, was no more heartless than the power of capitalism, which today holds the workmen of the nation in bondage."
 Debs and his associates lay great stress on "the slavery of today," as they term it, and they find arguments on this subject particularly effective among the colored voters. The Socialists count on gaining recruits from the Democratic party among the laboring men and from the Republican party among the colored voters.
 The Socialists, headed by Debs, have a vast army of speakers, paid and unpaid, and these men appear on street corners in the large cities during the state and national campaigns, outlining the party principles and selling the publications in which the party's recommendations are described. Of course a radical party like the Socialists has active opponents, and at meetings when these opponents are present the speakers set aside a period in which questions may be asked. Sometimes a quick witted Socialist is able to make the questioners appear ridiculous, and it is seldom that a meeting of this description terminates without a disturbance of more or less importance.

The size of the socialist vote in this country is rapidly increasing, and this fact is the more noteworthy because the party's organization is by no means complete. Debs proudly states that his party is a volunteer party, making material progress without office or patronage. The paid workers of other parties have no counterpart in the district organizations of the Socialists, and this fact is one that causes most worry to the Democratic and Republican leaders. They realize that a party popular enough to attract hundreds of volunteer workers is certain to become a national factor, worthy of serious consideration, if, indeed, the Socialist party has not already become such.

Samuel Gompers has had plenty of publicity in the campaign of 1908 on account of the controversy over the position taken by him in the support of the Democratic national ticket. As president of the American Federation of Labor Mr. Gompers is always a busy man, but because of the active part he has taken in politics this year his duties have been exceptionally many and laborious. For several years he won re-election as head of the American Federation of Labor after contests which threatened the continuance of his power. The next meeting of the federation occasions especial interest on account of the controversies expected to arise over the question of indorsement of President Gompers' course in the campaign.

It is twenty-six years since Mr. Gompers was first chosen president of the Federation of Labor, and every year since, with one exception, 1894, he has been re-elected. Under his direction the order has increased in numbers until it is now 2,000,000 strong and is accounted the most influential body of organized wage earners in the world. Mr. Gompers was born in London in 1850 and for forty years and more has been identified with union labor. Many a time he could have had positions which would have paid him a larger salary than that which he receives as president of the American Federation of Labor, but his sympathy with the cause of labor prevented him from accepting them. He is a poor man, is proud of it and expects to die poor. He has no ambition to make money and chooses rather to devote his energies to uplifting his fellow workers and leaving them as a class when he dies better off than they would have been but for his having lived.

The political contest in Rhode Island has excited interest this year on account of the value to both national tickets of the electoral votes of the commonwealth and the complications caused by local issues. The Republicans nominated for governor Aram J. Pothier of Woonsocket and the Democrats Obey Arnold of Providence. The Democrats made much in their campaign of the charge that the influence of the blind leader, C. R. Brayton, was still potent. Constitutional amendment has been one of the issues in Rhode Island.

GOOD HORSEMANSHIP.

An Old Hunter's Illustration of the Gift of "Hands."

Your heart and your head keep up. Your hands and your knees keep down. Your knees keep close to your horse's sides. And your elbows to your own.

This old bit of advice for the would be horseman is quoted by a writer in Bally's Magazine and declared to be perennially sound.

He quotes another old hunter on the subject of what he calls "the divine gift of hands" in riding. This old hunter, John Darby, used to attach two pieces of twine to the back of an ordinary chair and draw the same tighter until the chair balanced on its fore or hind legs, according to his own position.

Then when balanced he would keep it, so to speak, on the swing by gently manipulating the twine or reins he held in his hand. A rough pull would, of course, have upset the chair one way, whereas the fact of not checking it in its movements at all would have caused a total loss of control over it in the opposite direction.

"And that," when the exhibition was concluded he would add, "is hands, gentlemen."

Jogging to the covert, continues the writer, you may notice one fine horse, the owner fully equipped, throwing its head up and down like a pump handle, another sweating profusely, although the pace has not exceeded five miles an hour since it left the stable, and a third snorting and prancing about all over the place.

Why is this so? Simply because the rider of neither of them is possessed with the divine gift of "hands."

THE BEE'S STING.

An Ugly Weapon Something Like a Three Bladed Sword.

The bee's sting is made up of three separate lances, each with a barbed edge and each capable of being thrust forward independently of the others. The central and broader lance has a hollow face furnished at each side with a rail or beading, which runs its whole length. On the back of each of the other two lances there is a longitudinal groove, and into these grooves fit the raised beadings of the central lance.

Thus the sting is like a sword with three blades—united, but sliding upon one another—the barbed points of which continue to advance alternately into the wound, going ever deeper and deeper of their own malice aforethought after the initial thrust is made. It is a device of war compared to which the explosive bullet is but a clumsy brutality. Yet this is not all.

To make its death dealing powers doubly sure this thorough minded amazon must fill the haft of her triple blade with a subtle poison and so contrive its sliding mechanism that the same impulse which drives the points successively forward drenches the whole weapon with a fatal juice.—From "The Lore of the Honey Bee," by Tickner Edwardes.

The Weather House.
 A very ingenious contrivance for foretelling the weather is the old fashioned "weather house," largely made in Switzerland. It is arranged in such a way that two figures act in response to the twisting of a piece of catgut. The material, supported by a wire, controls the movements of a little platform on either end of which is placed a model. Excessive moisture in the air causes the catgut to twist and turn the platform round, so that the man emerges from one of the doors in the front of the house. Reverse conditions of the atmosphere bring about the contraction of the catgut, and the platform swings back, thus bringing the figure of the woman into prominence at her particular door. The making of a weather house is quite an easy matter.

"Spoken English Very Good."
 From an advertisement of a Danish hotel: "The hotels charmingly situated, surrounded of a nice garden the good cuisine, the kindly accommodation with moderate charge and good conveniences, with easy occasion for salmon and trout fishing, the ascending of the surrounding mountains has done this place well-known and praised of all travellers. N. B.—The landlady is spoken English very good."—Lahore Civil and Military Gazette.

A Riot of Color.
 From the land of the Moros a soldier writes: "A Moro matron passed our quarters this morning wearing a helle-trope jacket, purple trousers with large heart designs worked in yellow, blue and pink embroidery, a red and black sarong, yellow plush slippers and yellow silk mantilla. The lady's maid (old, in modest garb, walked behind, carrying a magenta parasol."

Hobson's Choice.
 "There is an egg for breakfast," remarked a landlady to her lodger "Which do you prefer?"
 "Prefer?" repeated the latter "Where's the preference when you only offer an egg?"
 "Why, you can have an egg or nothing!" was the sharp reply.—London Scraps.

No Fun.
 Jester—Of course I expect pay for them. You don't suppose I write these things for fun, do you? Editor (handing back the batch of paragraphs)—Well, if you did, you failed most dismally.—Illustrated Bits.
 Consistency is a jewel, but obstinacy is a counterfeit.—Illinois State Register.

A DUSKY CYNIC.

He Gayly Admitted That the Joke Was on Himself.

A lady was walking along Fifth avenue a couple of weeks ago when a big negro stepped up to her politely and asked her to give him a quarter.

"I am a shipwrecked sailor," he told her. "Three days ago the ship I was on went ashore outside Sandy Hook. Ever since then I've been wandering around without being able to get a job."

The lady gave him a quarter and passed on. A week later while going by the same spot on Fifth avenue she was approached once more by the same negro.

"I am a shipwrecked sailor," he began. "Three days ago—"

She let him finish. Then she remarked:

"Two weeks ago when I gave you a quarter you told me that same story. Then you said that you had been wrecked three days before. Now you say the same thing."

And she looked at the negro severely. He threw back his head and burst forth into roars of laughter.

"Did—did I give you that story last week?" he chuckled. "Did you give me a quarter? Well, if that ain't a joke on me!"

And she left him standing on the sidewalk convulsed with laughter.—New York Times.

CARDS IN CHURCH.

They Were Not Uncommon in the Old Days in England.

Frequent cases of card playing occurred in churches in olden days in the high or curiated family pews that were to be found in several parts of England.

A case of card playing was mentioned by the poet Crabbe as having occurred in one of those pews in Trowbridge parish church. Mr. Beresford Hope stated that card playing was not uncommon in churches having curiated pews, where those occupying them were screened from the observation of the rest of the congregation, and that one of the Georges is credited with taking part at a game of whist in the church he attended.

The church at Little Stanmore, in Middlesex, has a luxurious room pew which is approached by a special door and staircase.

The old St. Paul's cathedral before the great fire of London was used by business men as a sort of exchange. The portico was let out to hucksters, and in those days gambling and cards are both said to have been indulged in without let or hindrance within the cathedral.—London Standard.

Outwitting a Bushranger.
 In Mr. George E. Rozall's "Story of the Australian Bushrangers" the following little episode is related: A man named Michael, who went to an inn for food, found the place in the hands of the bushrangers. Fourteen guests were already disarmed and were being searched in order. Michael was compelled to take his place in line. The bushrangers handed him a pannikin of tea before they took his money. Knowing what was coming, he held the pannikin as if the tea were too hot to drink, and when the leader of the highwaymen was looking away dropped his roll of bank notes into it. He stood quite quiet, and when the bushrangers came to feel his pockets there were only a few shillings in them. The robbers appeared satisfied and allowed him to go. He carried his pannikin out with him, took his money and put it in his pocket without being observed. Then he mounted his horse, rode to the nearest police station and gave information.

Her Indorsement.
 "Madam," said the teller of a bank in Baltimore to a woman who had handed him a check to cash—"madam, you have forgotten to indorse."
 A worried smile came to the woman's face, but she took back the paper and wrote something on the back thereof.

When again the teller looked at the check he found that the woman had indorsed as follows:
 "The — bank has always paid me whatever it owed, and you need have no worry. Therefore I indorse this check. Very truly yours, Anna M. Blank"—Harper's.

Radishes.
 Radishes originated in China, where they have been cultivated for many centuries and sometimes grow as big as a man's head. In Germany the old fashioned country weather-cure bear-ness and curd with radish juice mixed with sugar made. The radishes of today are a sort of bear-ness made from the same.

An College.
 "What makes you so late?" asked the boy's parent.
 "The school was out in its usual way," said the boy.
 "Europe?" asked the parent.
 "And no wonder you can't find me in Moscow," he was heard to say years ago. "It's an outrage to treat a student that way!"

His Telet.
 "My poor man, how did you acquire such a thirst?"
 "It was dis-a-way, mister. When doctor operated on me for appendicitis he forgot an' left a sponge inside o' me."—Boston Traveler.

DO IT NOW.
 McCook People Should Not Wait Until It Is Too Late.

The appalling death rate from kidney disease is due in most cases to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer goes gradually into the grasp of diabetes, dropsy, Bright's disease, gravel or some other serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headaches, dizzy spells, if the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders—they cure where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have recommended them.

Here's a case:
 Mrs. I. H. Rust, living in Red Cloud, Neb., says: "Some years ago I used Doan's Kidney Pills with such good results for kidney trouble and have lately started taking them for rheumatism which has caused me considerable suffering. I am pleased to state that I have so far found the remedy to be very beneficial and I am fully convinced that I will obtain a permanent cure through its use."
