TEMPERANCE COLUMN

Conducted by the McCook W. C. T. U.

NEWS-PAPER VERDICTS.

No decision was given; but in this city where the papers are so largely influenced by the brewers, these two editorial statements speak for themselves. The Free Press said: "The antagonists of the prohibition movement will have to adopt a vastly different line of argument if they wish to make headway against the facts and figures of its advocates." An opinion signed by an editorial writer in the Journal said: "The Michigan man, beyond any question whatever, carried off the honors." Later the Journal had a cartoon picturing a woman in a rage against her husband. She was shrieking, "What! Home again sober? This will drive me insane." Below there was a column account of the plea of Mrs. So and So for divorce. It was written in technical legal phraseology and stated that the first two years of married life had been blissful because her husband, in a manly way, had regularly come home drunk and abused his family, but since the prohibition laws had gone into effect he had sadly changed his ways. Now he refuses to get drunk or stay out with his friends and he does not even get drunk at home. This naturally began to wear on the petitioner's nerves and it is having a baneful effect upon her mind. She trusts a humane court will grant her merciful release. Below, small print said, "This is the first day of April."

The brewers have had a number of speakers of national repute here to defend their interests, but every one has succeeded in giving an impetus to the temperance cause. The debate was no exception; it was, many believe, the most telling blow ever struck for temperance in this city. They simply have not talking points. While they work in the dark by the corruption of politics, and the subsidizing of newspapers, by the boycott, and the intimidation of public men, they put up powerful opposition, but just as soon as they step out into the open and attempt a verbal defense of their business they throw away their case. The American saloon cannot stand the light.

We are earnestly wishing that these discussions may go on. It is heartening to hear the brewers ring the bell for a prohibition meeting. Nothing that I know of could have brought together so great a company of our representative business men to hear a temperance address as did the debate. We wish Chicago would let us have the second one here. With the "Rev. Dr. Rose" to read the scriptures and Dr. Dickie to expound them, it would not take many meetings to start a sweeping temperance revival even in Milwaukee.

PLAYING FOR KEYS OR SCHOOL BOY GAMBLING.

Some parents think this subject so trifling as to be unworthy of notice or correction, but there is nothing so small to merit attention that has to do with warping character, and this it unquestionably does. A few are so far from the right point of view as to desire their boys' lessons in experience to date from their marble-playing days, in hope they may gain shrewdness, or wisdom from it. But alas! So many of us are heedless of consequences, or trust to infinite goodness that our boy shall take no harm from the amusement. The full grown gambler is a far cry from the small lad in knee pants cheerfully wearing out the knees of his stockings for the patient overburdened mother to mend, but we need to make the application personal. The children sing, "Was that somebody you?" But we need to ask, will that enemy of his fellowmen be mine? said Mrs. Gradgrind. God forbid. Then let us see to the careful instruction of our lads in the right and wrong of this matter. I think every mother will admit that the wee laddie in his best moods can be made to see clearly the difference between "mine and thine" and it must be among the first lessons we teach him. It ought to be pretty well fixed in his mind before the marble-playing age and he will at once see the justice in not "playing for keeps." How many of us have realized that our little ones were indeed fresh from the hand of God when he has rather startled us by his grasp of the justice of some situation where our own ideas may have been somewhat biased and we realize this to our shame. Then we do us if we fail to build sure foundation on this at that age for the manhood that shall be assaulted on every side, and like the house builded on the sand, the fall thereof may leave our hearts most desolate.

Not only gamblers be the result of carelessness or neglect of our boy's habits in play. We are most of us sadly aware of the greed of gain that need no fostering to develop into a so-called captain of industry who with his trained hosts rides rough shoe over his weaker brethren and makes the bread they earn bitter by his pitiless disregard of their rights. These kind of gamblers who deal in the necessities of people, corner wheat, or monopolize iron, coal, oil, timber or any great necessity or industry are as well the logical outcome of our marble player. In the training of my own lads I have endeavored to instill the thought of the rights of others, and the bible idea of letting him take your cloak also with varying degrees of success up to a certain time. After the lure of the world and the rush for the mighty dollar gets hold of them it seems as if one's teaching is in a measure forgotten. But even yet let that same counsel continue of preferring the welfare of others to their own, and along with the voice of conscience mother's voice will also chime with the still small voice, and who can say they will not prevail when temptations assail.

I can never see why a mother of sons, or daughters either, should ever array herself on the side of the saloons, or any debauchery, for she of all people can not afford to be on any but the right side of moral questions, and then if any of her own shall meet with shipwreck on temptation's seas, it cannot then be said to her, you are to blame. Her heart will be sore enough without this thorn.

There are so many and enticing ways to entrap the unwary all along the way, and some of them I am sure are placed there by people who are not intentionally guilty of any thought of the harm they will do. Slot machines in their various guises, and various vendings of things calculated to part the small boy and his penny or nickles, candy boxes, with chance for free boxes, grab-bags, also alluring to the small child, and contributing to disappointment or success, with a desire to try either one over again with the hope that springs eternal in the human breast. The raffle, and buying, of numbers with chance of winning some article of value many times over the risk, appeals to those older, and keeps them in the path, and now develops into the get something for nothing, or get rich quick, and by and by some poor soul's feet are in quicksand and he goes behind prison bars.—Mrs. Jos. Allen, McCook.

What a pity it is that all the Christian denominations of our city do not co-operate together in the cause of temperance. Any true christian will admit that the saloon is one of the greatest enemies of the church, and yet we find many who have sworn to further the interests of His kingdom, selling themselves to the enemy, betraying their Lord and Saviour as did Judas, for a few pieces of silver. Every one admires and honors the man or woman who stands unflinchingly for the right, but who is there that does not despise a coward and traitor?

Those who failed to hear the lectures of Mrs. Wallace missed a rare treat. She is an able and entertaining speaker, well qualified for the great work she has undertaken. She easily held the attention of the large audience, Sunday evening. The people showed their appreciation by their generous offerings to the cause of temperance. We trust that the truths she presented to us may not fail of their purpose.

AUSTIN JAMES RITTENHOUSE.

Was Born February 1st, 1850, and Died April 24th, 1909.

Hon. Austin James Rittenhouse was born in Harrison county, Ohio, on a farm, where he lived until about twenty years old, when he moved to Cadiz, Ohio, and began the study of law. He afterwards moved to Seymour, Iowa, where he was admitted to practice. Was married to Louise J. Brown at this place, and afterwards moved to Unionville, where the oldest child, Oliver R. Rittenhouse, was born. The family then moved to Aurora, Nebraska, where George B. F. Austin and May M. were born. This was in the early days of Nebraska. In 1883, they moved to McCook, Nebraska, and in 1889, they moved to Whatecom, Washington, then back to McCook, in 1892, where Robert R. was born, thence to Oklahoma, in 1897. With the exception of May M., all children survive him and were present at the last rites.

Deceased practiced law always since being admitted to the bar and had been admitted to practice in six states and federal courts. He had three brothers, all of whom are lawyers and who started life on the farm. A. P. Rittenhouse, the oldest brother, and the only member of the family now living, is practicing law at Los Angeles, California.

Deceased had been sick for the past 18 months with sorosis of the liver, from which he died. Death came at night, quietly and without pain or agony to the sick one, at Hot Springs, Ark., where he had been taken with the hope that the change might prove beneficial. His wife was with him all through the sickness watching over him day and night.

Funeral services were held at the Christian church, Monday morning, April 26, interment being made at Oak Park cemetery. The service was largely attended by the Chandler friends of the deceased, members of the local bar and order of Odd Fellows, of which he was a loved and honored member. Judge Rittenhouse had attained the highest pinnacle of success at the practice of his chosen profession. During his residence in Chandler his opinions and advice were held in highest esteem by his brother attorneys and his demise is a heavy loss to this community. During his practice he had attained one of the finest and most valuable law libraries in this section and this heritage, together with the years of training, he leaves to his sons, George B. and Austin, who are now associated in the practice of law in Chandler.

To the broken hearted wife and sons and daughter is extended the sincere sympathy of all Chandler and Lincoln county.—From the Chandler Publicist, April 30, 1909.

ANSWERS EVERY CALL.

McCook People Have Found That This Is True.

A cold, a strain, a sudden wrench. A little cause may hurt the kidneys. Spleils of backache often follow. Or some irregularity of the urine. A certain remedy for such attacks. A medicine that answers every call. Is Doan's Kidney Pills, a true specific. Mrs. B. F. Marshall, living in the western part of Arapahoe, Neb., says: "While lifting some years ago I strained myself and after that began to have trouble with my kidneys. If I worked a little harder than usual, or caught the slightest cold, I was sure to suffer more severely, and at times would be forced to remain in bed for a couple of days. My back was very sore and when I straightened after stooping, sharp pains would dart through me. I also had frequent headaches and dizzy spells and the kidney secretions annoyed me somewhat by their irregular action. Not until I used Doan's Kidney Pills was I able to get relief. They went directly to the root of my trouble and before long I was in good health again."

Plenty more proof like this from McCook people. Call at a drug store and ask what customers report.

THE MYSTERY OF MARS.

Old but Unsolved Problem, Is There Animal Life on the Planet?

With a planet so old as Mars and so far along in the process of life extinction the conditions of life would be severe, and only a highly intellectual and scientifically developed race could endure and master them. The engineering skill and constructive capacity to control the annual floods from the poles, store the waters and build the thousands of miles of huge canals would require scientific knowledge beyond that possessed by us at the present time and financial resources in excess of those we have yet accumulated. The nation that finds the digging of a little ditch at Panama so great a task would be helpless in the face of such a problem as these thousands of miles of Martian canals, if, indeed, canals they be. Yet, in view of the greater life age of Mars, such higher intelligence would be natural in the regular process of development, assuming that it has ever been the abode of intellectual life.

Scientists are in the main in a receptive state on this subject. They are not ready to admit that the existence of life on that planet has been proved. They do not deny it, but call for greater proof than a plausible theory. Among others than scientists there is in the main a disposition not to accept the Martian human life theory or the theory of life on any of the thousands of spheres that wheel and glisten in limitless space. They seem to think that such a theory conflicts with religion and dwarfs man and his importance in the scheme of creation.

This seems to be a very narrow view to take, since it appears to set bounds upon the infinite power and creative desires of the Almighty, whose great scheme of mortal and immortal life is not necessarily confined to a single planet or the few billions of human beings who are born and die upon it. As to dwarfing the importance of man, a few billions more added to the billions on earth would make little difference. Man is at best a small and insignificant creature, but if all embracing wisdom, power and love takes solicitude note of him it would be limiting those infinite qualities to say that one planet must be his abiding place. Therefore the question of human intelligence on Mars or any other planet of the solar system or the other great systems in remote space should be purely and simply a scientific one, to be accepted as true only when proved, but not to be rejected through sentiment or for any other reason whatever except lack of proof.—St. Louis Star.

An Oriental Blessing.

A well known representative from China, who was a guest at a wedding in a capital city, was approached after the ceremony by the best man and joyfully asked to go over to the young couple and pronounce a parental blessing. The obliging dignitary complied with pleasure. Placing his hands on the blushing bride and shaking bridegroom, he said: "May every new year bless you with a man-child offspring until they shall number twenty-five in all. May these twenty-five man children offspring present you with twenty-five times twenty-five grandchildren, and may these grandchildren—"

But the little bride grew hysterical about this time, and the oriental blessing was ended amid the laughter of the guests.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Cowboy Spider.

"Faking aside," said the nature student, "there is in New Zealand a cowboy spider. This creature throws a coil of web like a lasso over its prey's head, then adds more and more coils and when the prey is bound hand and foot devours it."

"There is a Borneo spider that in the spring days plays a fiddle. It is a common thing for a lovesick spider to dance before his girl, but this Borneo boy when drawing his arm across his tum produces a sweet, clear note. Whenever he sees a good looking young lady spider he stops and gives her a tune, hoping to win her by music."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Miners' Freedom From Cancer. "Miners never have cancer. In thirty-five years' practice in a mining town I haven't had a single cancerous patient."

"And to what, doctor, do you impute this immunity?" "Miners are singularly cleanly. They bathe every day. They rarely smoke. They are a temperate and regular set. Above all—"

The physician smiled grimly. "Miners," he said, "die young. Cancer is an old age disease. And there really is the reason of the miner's cancerous immunity."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Not the Same. "Excuse me," he said as he entered the public library at Pezantia, "but do you have any social registers here?" "No, we haven't," said the librarian, with considerable hauteur. "This here buildin' is hot up by steam, and we haven't got nothin' but radiators, and we don't allow no settin' around with your feet on to them neither. The nearest thing we got to a social registry in this town is the postoffice stove."—Lippincott's.

A Reminder.
