Beatrice, June 7-8-9, 1910.
Probably thousands of Sunday school workers in Nebraska are now looking forward to the state convention, but that thousands can be there, but because of the general interest in what promises to be the greatest state convention yet held. The program commands the attention of every Sunday school teacher and officer, both in the strength of its speakers and the comprehensiveness of the work taken up.

The general state secretary met recently with the chairmen of the local committees at Beatrice who will have charge of the work of handling this great meeting, and they are fully alive to the magnitude of the task before them. The entertainment committee purposes finding places for 1,500 delegates. Three of the largest churches, centrally located, will be open to the convention's needs for regular and overflow meetings. The Y. M. C. A. will throw open their building to all the men attending the convention, with privilege of baths, reading and writing rooms, etc. The assignment committee is working out plans whereby arriving delegations, however large, can be handled very quickly and with accuracy and precision.

There should not be a Sunday school in the state which is not represented at this convention, which will mark a distinct epoch in Sunday school work in the state.

GRANT AT THE FRONT, 1863.

CAMP OF FRENCH'S BRIGADE, VIRGINIA, 1864.

A MEMORIAL DAY REFLECTION.

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

1861.
Ah, there was thrill in the bugle note of the days of sixty-one!
"To strife, to strife!" was the shrill of the life to strife of sword and gun!
And "Come, oh, come!" was the call of the drum—come into the crowding ranks
And march away to the martial fray by the Rappahannock's banks!
We were young and erect as we marched then for the great republic's cause,
And we dreamed of fame and a deathless name and the hero's high applause.

1910.
Ah, there is dirge in the funeral note of this Memorial day!
And "Death, oh, death!" is the bugle's breath as the music melts away.
But "Come, oh, come!" is the call of the graveyard lone
And the blossoming-spray as a tribute lay on the soldier's crumbling stone.
We are old and bent as we march now in the days of our nation's peace,
And we dream no more of the cannon's roar, but of strife's and life's surcease.

A WREATH ON LINCOLN'S TOMB
BY JAMES A. EDGERTON

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

LAST year saw Lincoln's triumph. O'er his tomb
The century plant of fame burst into bloom,
And all the earth was filled with its perfume.

IT was most meet that in that selfsame year
The skies above his land should wholly clear
And the last clouds of section disappear.

FOR that was his own dream. He sought to write
But one word—"Union." On the future's height
It now is written in eternal light.

WHATEVER stress of madness or of crime
Shall rack the world, that covenant sublime
Is now secure through all the storms of time.

AND one who sits today in Lincoln's seat
Has made the bonds of union more complete,
Has made the name of union yet more sweet.

THE new time over all the land is born;
Over the cotton's snow and silken corn
The north and south clasp hands and face the morn.

O'ER blue and gray strew flowers with love's perfume
And for a wreath to strew on Lincoln's tomb
Weave the word "Union" out of fragrant bloom.

MORE "YOUNGEST VETERANS."

Recent Discussion Brings Forward Two Under Sixty.

That highly interesting hero, the "youngest veteran" of the civil war, continues to hob up serenely now and then. He seems to be almost if not quite as numerous as the last survivor of the charge of the Light brigade at Balaklava. The surprisingly large number of men still living who enlisted when mere lads helps to uphold the statement frequently made by individuals and proved by the records of the war department that the great conflict was fought and won by boys—young fellows who enlisted in their teens. The records show a preponderance of such early enlistments.

Last March a New York paper printed a brief obituary of the "youngest veteran," who had just died at the age of sixty-two. The editor received a flood of communications from claimants to that distinction. One modest veteran from Brooklyn, signing himself simply "Cavalry," wrote, "I served two years and six months and am not yet sixty-two." Then F. Blemly, living in another part of Greater New York, giving his birth date as Jan. 31, 1849, came forward with this statement: "I served under Sheridan and Custer in the Shenandoah valley until the close of the war, and I have a year yet to hang on to the saddle before I reach sixty-two."

Youngest Veteran Blemly was checked by Charles Carr of Brooklyn, formerly of Company C, Fourth Ohio cavalry, who said he was born March 13, 1849, nearly six weeks later than Blemly, and "served throughout the Atlanta campaign under General Sherman."

From New Jersey came the claim of David W. Ryan, only fifty-nine years old, who served as bugler in Company H, Second New Jersey cavalry. Youngest Veteran Ryan seemed to have the pennant, but Michael Donoho of Auburn, N. Y., assailed his position and captured the standard, being still under fifty-nine. Born May 27, 1851, Donoho joined D'Eppensville's zouaves and went to the front in 1861. Afterward he served with the One Hundred and Fifty-ninth New York regiment, being mustered out at Syracuse Aug. 19, 1865. Youngest Veteran Donoho, according to this record, was only a ten-year-old when he joined the zouaves and began to wear the baggy breeches and the soft sash belt of that branch of the service.

It is highly probable that if this friendly controversy had extended to the west there would have been several youthful veterans somewhere around the edges of sixty to lay claim to the honor.

NOW grandpa tells a story to the child upon his knee
About the great big war that helped to make the nation free,
And while she dreams of future days (they'll come so soon, so fast!)
The veteran of '61 is dreaming of the past.

COURTSHIP IN PORTUGAL.
The Way the Young People Begin Their Lovemaking.
The most important event in the life of a Portuguese woman is marriage. Next in importance are the early days of courtship, for a Portuguese courtship is the essence of romance, and the ways of the Portuguese lover are singularly picturesque. Here is a little drama in which Cupid is stage director. If a young Portuguese sees in the street a pretty girl with whom he would like to become acquainted he follows her. Chaperons are not impossible obstructions. He follows her right up to her very door and notes the address. Next day he comes again, and if the young lady approves of him—for she certainly saw him the day before—she is on the lookout.
Sometimes hard fate in the guise of an angry parent prevents her, and then the gallant youth is kept waiting. Sooner or later she leans over the balcony and smiles at him. The happy youth ties a note to a cord which the fair lady drops from the balcony. The next day the young man comes again. This time he rings at the door. If the inquiries which the young lady's elders have made prove satisfactory the swain is admitted to make the acquaintance of the young lady. After that courtship in Portugal is about the same as it is in Kankakee or Kalamazoo.—Leslie's Weekly.

Not a Laughing Matter.
Cut off from family and home by a relentless tide, fat Mr. Bodger had been forced to clamber till he gained a pathway cut in the cliff's face. It was a narrow path, and Mr. Bodger was no narrow man. Getting more frightened every moment, he proceeded warily along the fast diminishing way till at last it faded suddenly into what the poets would call "sweet nothingness." Already he was overlapping, and it was impossible to turn.
An excited crowd watched his progress from above.
"What on earth am I to do?" gasped Bodger desperately on his four inch ledge as he gripped a tuft of seaweed with one hand.
"Do, guv'nor?" came back a voice. "Do anything you like, but for goodness' sake don't luff or your wesk'it'll bump yer off as sure as eggs is eggs!" —London Answers.

Can't Please Everybody.
The manager of an asbestos mill conceived a novel idea for his announcements. He had them printed on thin asbestos and inclosed in envelopes of the same material. As he was uncertain of the correct addresses of some of the stockholders, he ordered his stenographer to write on each envelope "Please Forward."
The idea was clever, but one may appreciate the feelings of the widow of one of the stockholders when she received an asbestos envelope addressed to her late husband with the inscription "Please Forward" beneath the address.—Lippincott's.
