A Howard Musical Comedy.

Whenever it is announced that one of the "Howard" musical comedies is a coming attraction, it causes much local comment as the theatregoer of today fully realizes that it will be a real treat from a musical standpoint. Mr. Howard is without a doubt becoming the greatest musical writer of the age; in the past two or three years he has written the music to no less than a dozen of our most successful light operas. Among those which were the most successful are "The District Leader," "The Place and the Girl," "The Girl Question," "A Stubborn Cinderella," "A Prince of Tonight," "The Golden Girl," "The Goddess of Liberty," and the sensation of them all, "The Flower of the Ranch." This delightful comedy will be seen in this city on Wednesday, Oct. 5th at the Temple Theatre.

The entire production will be seen in this city as it was produced for Mr. Howard, two years ago when it ran for 150 nights in New York city and six months in Chicago, at the Garrick theatre. Aside from its success in the dramatic and musical line, it is a play that holds the entire audience from the rise of the curtain with interesting stage settings of ranch life in the golden hills of California. Seat sale opens Saturday, Oct. 1st.

Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture says that the unbounded prosperity of the agriculturist is not due to chance, but is the result of Ocean and Farmer has placed before intelligent, scientific business methods. A reader of The Weekly Inter him each week the practical and approved methods to which Secretary Wilson refers. It is a good investment. DARING WORK IN A FOG.

Clever Seamanship of a Captain in a Landlocked Harbor.

"The greatest piece of seamanship I ever saw," said a traveler, "was on a trip to Halifax. It was a marvel, and this is how it happened.

"We were steaming along about twelve hours out from our destination one summer afternoon. It had been clear all day, and the sea was beautifully blue, but about 4 o'clock the fog began to shut down—one of those swift, dense fogs that come on that coast and shroud a boat from sight in less time than it takes to tell of it. Of course the fog whistles began to blow, and many of the passengers got nervous under the strain of its continued howling.

"After dinner I went up on the bridge and was permitted to stay. The captain would not enter into any conversation—that is, I could not talk to him, but in his restless pacing up and down the bridge he would frequently make a remark to me. It went on that way for hours, the fog as thick as steam and the whistle reiterating its mournful warning.

"At length the captain gave a sharp order. 'Two points, northwest by north,' he said. 'No, a little more—that's right,' he finished as his command was executed. I was bewildered, and my face must have shown it as he passed me, for he vouchsafed the explanation that he wanted to pass within a few hundred feet of a certain whistling buoy near the harbor. I said nothing, but I did not understand. Why, the night was so thick that it was hard work to see from the bridge to the rail, and what could he mean by making a buoy?"

"On and on we went, and always the fog seemed to me thicker. I could not sleep, and most of the night I was on the bridge. When it must have been nearly morning a new whistling began to sound on our starboard bow, as nearly as I could judge. It was a fearful fog siren, and kept getting nearer and nearer. We had stopped whistling, and the passengers were terribly frightened. I looked at one ex-naval officer who stood with me on the bridge, and his face was like a dead man's. Mine must have been also. "Then, just as it seemed that some giant steamship must strike us, so close was the whistling, the fog lifted like a veil, and there, not 150 feet away, was the buoy that the captain had mentioned.

"Almost at once the fog closed down again; but, do you know, he took us past two warships, into the landlocked harbor and up to the dock in it. It was magnificent, and though we really could not put our admiration in tangible form, we got together and gave him a gold watch on the return voyage as a little souvenir."—New York Post.

A Cumulative Persian Story.

A hunter finds some honey in the fissure of a rock, fills a jar with it and takes it to a grocer. While it is being weighed a drop falls to the ground and is swallowed up by the grocer's weasel. Thereupon the huntsman's dog rushes upon the weasel and kills it. The grocer throws a stone at the dog and kills him. The huntsman draws his sword and cuts off the grocer's arm, after which he is cut down by the infuriated mob of the bazaar. The governor of the town, informed of the fact, sends messengers to arrest the murderer. When the crowd resisted troops were dispatched to the scene of the conflict, whereupon the townspeople mixed themselves up in the riot, which lasted three days and three nights, with the result that 70,000 men were slain. All this through a drop of honey.

Early Landholding.

Nothing is clearer than the fact that the system of landholding in the most ancient races was communal. Private right in land was for a long time unknown, the source of life being held in common between the members of the tribe. Not only land, but all property that in any way had to do with the general welfare, was looked upon as belonging to the whole tribe in common, no individual having the right to call it his own. Gradually and after a very long time, under the old regime, the right of private ownership began to creep in until at last it became the recognized rule pretty nearly everywhere.—New York American.

The Front End.

A young couple had been married by a Quaker, and after the ceremony he remarked to the husband:

"Friend, thou art at the end of thy troubles."

A few weeks after the man came to the good minister boiling over with rage, having found his wife to be a regular vixen, and said:

"I thought you told me I was at the end of my troubles."

"So I did, friend, but I did not say which end," replied the Quaker.

Way It Goes.

"Give 'em what they want, my boy," said the old physician.

"For instance?" inquired the young medico.

"Well, many a woman will take oxygen treatment at $5 a throw who wouldn't spend a far fare for fresh air."

The New Automatic Electric Washer and Wringer

It is as far ahead of its predecessor as the first automatic was in advance of its competitors. I now call your attention to a few prominent features of this machine: THE REVERSIBLE WRINGER, whereby clothes becoming entangled in the rolls can be readily extracted. A simple movement of the small lever attached to the wringer frame will either start, stop or reverse the wringer at will. THE LOCATION OF THE MOTOR and gearing in the center of a substantial platform beneath the tub provides the best possible protection from splashing or dipping water, and makes the neatest arrangement of machinery to be obtained. This is an exclusive advantage of the automatic electric washer, and patented. Call at my office and see the machine in operation or let me bring it to your home for a free trial.
