Capt. Bogardus again hits the Bull's Eye.

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says: "I suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and used several well known remedies, all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I had severe headaches and pains in my kidneys with suppression and a cloudy voiding. On arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and again feel like my own self."

Death of Grandpa Paine.

W. D. Paine, commonly known as grandpa, was stricken with a stroke of paralysis at 10 o'clock Thursday night and remained in an unconscious condition until 7 o'clock Saturday night, October 1, when he died. The funeral was held at the M. E. Church at 9:30 a. m., Monday, October 3.

The remains were interred in the Morningside cemetery.

Grandpa Paine was born at Chesterfield, N. H., November 29, 1829, and was therefore 80 years and ten months old. On August 29, 1854, he was married to Mary A. Moses at Morengo, Ill. Three children were the result of this union, the only surviving member of which is C. D. Paine of this place. He had two sisters living at Elgin, Ill.

Mr. Paine was an old veteran having served in the war of the Rebellion and was with General Sherman in his historic "March to the Sea." He was a man of excellent habits, fine moral character and sturdy constitution, and he continued to be active in his accustomed pursuits till long past the age at which men ordinarily drop out of the ranks of the workers. He was a member of the M. E. church and took an active interest in its affairs and always glad to help in the advancement of the community.—San Fernando, Calif. Press.

A Generous and Charitable Wish

"I wish that all might know of the benefit I received from your Foley's Kidney Remedy," says I. N. Regan, Farmer, Mo. His kidneys and bladder gave him so much pain, misery and annoyance, he could not work nor sleep. He says Foley's Honey and Tar completely cured him.

GILBERT M. HITCHCOCK.

Democratic and People's Independent candidate for United States senator.

Born in Nebraska 51 years ago. Educated in public schools of Omaha. Attended school two years in Germany.

Graduated at Michigan University Law School 1881.

For 25 years has edited and published the Omaha World-Herald.

Has been three times elected to Congress, representing Douglas, Washington and Sarpy counties.

His record there shows that he has fought the trusts, the high tariff, ship-subsidies and Canonism.

He helped secure the passage of the postal savings banks bill.

He forced the investigation of Ballinger and the land frauds.

He has stood with his Democratic associates and co-operated with such progressive Republicans as Murdock in the house and LaFollette in the senate.

In view of the fact that a vicious personal attack has been made upon Mr. Hitchcock in this campaign, he feels justified in asking the people of Nebraska for a personal vindication.

He has lived in Nebraska all his life, has had a share in the upbuilding of the state and believes he has established a good reputation.

In this campaign that reputation has been attacked in an attempt to defeat him at the polls for United States senator. He believes the attack will fail.

The people vote for United States senator this year. The names of Gilbert M. Hitchcock and Senator Burkett will appear on the ballot just before the names of the candidates for governor. If you vote the straight Democratic of People's Independent ticket, Mr. Hitchcock will receive the benefit of your vote.

If you do not vote either of those tickets, and endorse the position he has taken in the interest of the people on the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill and his work in exposing Ballinger's efforts to allow the Guggenheim interests to gobble up the coal and mineral lands of Alaska, he will greatly appreciate it if you can at least give him your vote and your influence among other voters.

McCOOK HARDWARE CO.

Since last March, when Congressman Norris became a national figure of special prominence, McCook has been looked at curiously by eastern reporters and magazine writers. They can hardly help mentioning the great American desert of the old geographer, and wondering at the growth of such a town against such a historical and geographical background. Many eastern Nebraskans would probably join in their surprise to some extent, although we should not examine the town as a strange creature. It is simply a typical, though probably an especially up-to-date Nebraska town, with a double foundation for its prosperity.

At McCook one begins to hear familiar and neighborly talk of Colorado and the mountains. The skies are the deepest blue and the air one breathes seems to be of the same pure, deep quality. This is really western Nebraska. In other ways, too, McCook is western. It is new, and looked so spick and span under the clean October skies that I thought there must have been a house cleaning recently. The people seemed to have the pride that one finds in a bride and groom who have just set up housekeeping, with no wedding gifts to speak of, but with some nice things they had bought with their own hard-earned money, for instance, a parlor rug, a chafing dish, a Haviland set. McCook similarly treasures its park, a fine block in the residence part of the city. It is no direct gift of the gods as one may see by looking down the street to the brown short-grass hills just a few blocks away. Green grass seems to be one of the hobbies of the town. The park sets the pace, and at two school buildings half a block of absolutely perfect lawn teaches the lesson to the rising generation. At the fine new high school building I asked the superintendent, Mr. C. W. Taylor, how they kept the children off the grass. "We don't say anything to them," he replied. "They do it themselves." What a good civic discipline! I suppose the same thing is done in a hundred other towns in Nebraska, where a beautiful building inspires the children with right ideals.

Then, a large number of the citizens of McCook are Russian-Germans, who work on the railroad. They, too, like blue grass, and around their neat little cottages that line one hill street, the grass plots are as green as around the larger homes that face the park or other residence streets.

Besides the high school building, there are two other public buildings which are of special interest to the visitor and which afford the McCook man further opportunity to "point with pride." These are the Carnegie library—they do not mince matters, but have the name "Carnegie" over the entrance—and the other is the Masonic temple. The library is of cement, with red tile roof, a striking bit of architecture, in a fine location. It is a $10,000 structure. The furnishings are also of the best style and material. I noticed a good selection of books and magazines, and was told that the circulation is excellent. The Masonic temple is the special luxury of the place, a $65,000 building, containing the theatre, which is said to be one of the best play houses in the state. The second floor also contains a few offices, and a large club room for the commercial club. On the third floor are the Masonic rooms, with banquet hall and kitchen. One reason McCook people brag like a Kansan about this fine building is that they had to work so hard to sell the stock, and that nevertheless, they did sell it. Most of the citizens feel their ownership in the building and patronize the theatre regularly.

The evident prosperity of the town is of course partially explained by its railroad activities. Is there an accident on the division? Anywhere in McCook you will hear the question, "Were any of our men hurt?" That "our" is a little touch one would not hear in Lincoln outside of special railroad circles.

McCook is one of the few spots I found in the Republican valley which can boast of irrigated land. There may be more to the west, but I judge the area irrigated from the Republican river is limited. But out in the valley near McCook there are many farms under irrigation. On one farm there I stood among the cornstalks of a field that would run a hundred bushels to the acre, and picked my way through a watermelon patch, still about a hundred loads had been marketed. On another fine farm, through which visitors are permitted to drive, we saw an orchard of over a hundred acres only waiting now for a little decent treatment from Jack Frost in the spring to pay very handsomely for its keep. And there is nothing more to be said about alfalfa on irrigated land. It is the eighth wonder of the world.

On the train going from McCook to Oxford a man who has traveled the state from corner to corner, said that the Republican valley is destined to become the garden spot of Nebraska. Not too seriously, but with some show of positive belief, he defended the proposition. Remembering not only the other garden spots of our 77,000 square miles, but also the season of drouth typical in western Nebraska, I scarcely accepted the prophecy as absolute. But he looked forward to the time when the excess flood waters will be captured and canals and put to work over the entire valley. That such a development is impossible or impractical is not believed for an instant by anyone in this day when we make a business of accomplishing the impossible. The productive power of the entire state is capable of an increase beyond our power now to imagine. And in this beautiful valley of the far corner of Nebraska, who knows what richness those grim old hills may look down upon when all the natural resources are utilized to the fullest extent. The psalmist says, "The little hills rejoice on every side. The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing."—Flora Bullock, in The State Journal.

How to Tell if Your Hair is Diseased.

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. 98% of the people need a hair tonic.

Pull a hair out of your head; if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want every one whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and cure baldness.

It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. L. W. McConnell.
