C. F. Heber accompanied Mrs. Heber to a hospital in Lincoln last Friday night on No. 6. Mrs. Heber has not been well for several weeks past, and her condition became somewhat acute, end of last week.

It is understood that dispatchers on every division of the Burlington lines west of the river, with the exception of the Sheridan division, have petitioned the management for an increase in pay. The management has replied that the matter is taken under consideration and an answer will soon be made. Just why the dispatchers on the Sheridan division did not petition while others were asking for more pay is not known.

The movement for more pay inaugurated by dispatchers is country wide. On many roads it has been taken up by the dispatchers organization, while on other roads the request has been made individually and by petition. It is understood that very few dispatchers in the employ of the Burlington railroad are members of the organization. On some roads almost every dispatcher is a member.

When the train dispatchers organization was formed it had the effect of bringing the salaries of men on some roads that paid below the average scale up to the average. In some instances it was not necessary to await a demand. The managements acted at once and increased the pay. Dispatchers get from $125 to $175 a month.

It is said that one point urged by the dispatchers organization is that dispatchers be recognized as officials and not as employees merely. Many of the men do not regard this matter as important enough to insist on.—Lincoln Journal.

THE TRUE CASABIANCA

"BOY OF THE BURNING DECK" WAS REALITY.

Was Son of French Admiral, and the Man Who Ordered Vessel Blown Up Was Born at Jamaica Plains.

The "Boy on the Burning Deck" is not a myth, but an actual fact, and few know that the man who gave the order for the destruction of the vessel, on whose deck the aforesaid boy stood, was torn in Jamaica Plain, and lived there till his royalist father, who objected strenuously to the American revolution, transported him to England, where he served under Nelson in the Battle of the Nile.

The boy was French, son of the admiral of the French ship Orient, and that was the vessel that blew up with the immortal boy standing by the mainmast.

The boy's unconscious destroyer, Captain Benjamin Hallowell, was born in the old Boylston house, still standing at the corner of Boylston and Center streets, in Jamaica Plains. The house was built in 1726 by the Boylston, and afterward passed to the rabid royalist, Benjamin Hallowell after whom the captain was named.

The old man lived in Jamaica Plain long enough to make himself unpopular when the American revolution broke out. The son had been early sent to England for his education, and he became one of the seven American born men to attain distinction in the British navy.

In the battle of the Nile Captain Hallowell had command of the ship Swiftsure, which ran down the luckless l'Orient. When Captain Hallowell gave the command for the French vessel to be blown up, he knew nothing of the thirteen-year-old son of the French admiral who, foolishly but heroically, obeyed his stern father's order, "Don't leave the vessel until I give you permission," and his "proud, though childlike form" graced the doomed vessel when she "with fragments strewed around the sea."

Captain Hallowell afterward heard the sad tale and was much moved by it. The boy called out three times in agony to his father, he learned, but stood resolutely by the mainmast, though his father lay cold in death.

So much moved was the captain that he had a coffin made in the boy's honor out of the floating fragments of the l'Orient and sent it to his friend and patron, Lord Nelson, with the story of the boy's bravery, and expressing deep regret for the young hero's untimely end.

Nelson had the coffin placed in the cabin in remembrance of the boy, and Captain Hallowell himself told the tale to the then widely known poet, Felicia Hemans. Her sympathies were immediately excited, and she immortalized the boy in her sentimental verses, and she named him wisely "Casabianca."

Cruel Old Laws.

England's present King George is spared the mental torture experienced by the earlier George by reason of the numerous cases of capital punishment for which they had to sign warrants, says the London Chronicle. Of George III, for example, it is said that he kept a register of all the cases of capital punishment—it was then a capital offense to open without authority a letter addressed to another—that he entered in it the names of all felons sentenced to death, with dates and particulars of convictions, together with remarks upon the reasons which induced him to sign the warrants. It is also recorded that he frequently got up at night to peruse the fatal list, and that he shut himself up closely in his private rooms during the hours appointed for the execution of criminals. No wonder he went mad.

Story of a Cabinet.

The Swedish consul at Marseilles has received a modest but interesting memento in the form of a cabinet for papers for transmission to King Gustav V., says the London Globe. The history of the cabinet is interesting. It is made of juniper wood, and the tree was supposed to be a thousand years old when it was felled. It had grown on an estate near Marseilles which had belonged to the Clary family. One of the daughters married Bernadotte, the founder of the royal house of Sweden. Bonaparte, it is said, used to enjoy sitting under this tree. Some time before the death of Oscar II, the present king visited the home of his ancestors and expressed a desire to possess some souvenir of the place, and the cabinet is the outcome of that wish.

Pater Hated Serpents.

Water Pater figures so seldom in biography that the following glimpse of the solitary scholar, quoted by the San Francisco Argonaut, is specially interesting: "During dinner a guest asked to see a necklace I was wearing. It was in the form of a serpent made of silver wire deftly interwoven to resemble scales and to make it sinuous and supple. I unfasted the serpent and as I handed it to Mr. Pater, who was nearest me, it writhed in a lifelike manner, and he drew back his hands with a slight movement of dislike. In a flash I remembered the passage in 'Marius the Epicurean' in which the hero's dislike to serpents is so vividly described, and I realized the description to be autobiographic."

You save money in two ways by buying from us: First, our prices are much reduced from our regular prices, as this is the end of the season for us. You, however, yet have a long time to use and enjoy winter clothes. Second, you can save money at all times by buying from us, because the quality of our goods is always the best, and it pays to buy the best. Come to us and save money.

The Tale of a Key.

There is a roll top desk in an office near Wall street which can be bought cheap. The owner is a commuter and has desk room in a large office. He came late the other day and discovered that he had forgotten his keys. No key at hand would unlock the desk. The maker could not give aid for an hour or more, and some papers had to be reached before noon. The desk was forcibly opened, and two inner compartments were smashed. Warm and tired from the exertion of wrecking his property, the man took off his coat and slipped into an office coat, in the pocket of which his keys jingled. Tableau! Before going home he confided to the office boy that he wouldn't care if he hadn't told.—New York Tribune.

Teeth in Their Stomachs.

Whatever it may be that the lobster and the crab, rapacious, never dainty, are eating they always see something else that they want and can't wait until they have masticated the first before attacking the second. But they don't give up the first, not by any manner of means. Nature, humoring this rapacious bent, has fitted the lobster and the crab with teeth in their stomachs, and they swallow their half masticated food and finish the chewing process with their stomachs while they seize and chew the other thing that has attracted them. Lobsters and crabs have no teeth in their mouths. They chew with their claws what they have time to and band the unfinished job down to their stomachs to do the rest of the chewing.

Dollar Bills From All Over.

"That dollar silver certificate you have there has been gathered together from all over the world," said the bank cashier. "Part of the paper fiber is linen rag from the orient.

"The silk comes from Italy or China. The blue ink is made from German or Canadian cobalt. The black ink is made from Niagara Falls acetylene gas smoke, and most of the green ink is green color mixed in white zinc sulphide made in Germany.

The federal court in Tennessee has sustained the interstate commerce commission's ruling that it is not unlawful to separate white and colored passengers on the railroads in case equal accommodations are given at the same price. The railroads fought the "Jim Crow" law not because they were not willing to separate the races but because they did not wish to provide equal accommodations. The cars set apart for the use of the blacks have been notoriously poor and unsanitary. This decision will not give the colored people social equality with the whites on the trains, but it will result in giving them equality in comfort.—Journal.
