

Claim Life Seeks Vengeance.

C. A. Rodgers, the court reporter in question, has also prepared an affidavit that is in the hands of the judiciary committee in which he states that the bill of exceptions was delayed because he was neither paid nor tendered the lawful fees until the time to prepare the bill of exceptions before the expiration of forty days after the dictum of the court had passed. Regarding the false sheet of testimony he states that the judge only caused it to be restored to its original form after it had been mutilated by lead pencil and ink interpolations made in a hand writing closely resembling that of Burnett.

F. L. Wolff of McCook, another attorney interested in the various Wilson cases, has filed an affidavit defending Judge Orr. Besides reciting what Rodgers made affidavit to he states, on the affidavit of C. Reynolds and Y. W. Tilden, employed in the office of the district court that Burnett forcibly took the files in these cases and made changes in them. He also says that Burnett's complaint is filed solely by way of revenge and to influence pending litigation.

L. W. Stayner, who was a reporter in the court before Rodgers was employed, supports Rodgers' statement that the delay in the preparation of the bill of exceptions was Burnett's fault for failure to pay the fees. Stayner also denies that Judge Orr ever threatened Burnett with a citation for contempt of court for bringing an action in mandamus. He states that the judge did reprove Burnett for stealing the files in the case.

The course of an impeachment is elaborate and provides the accused with every opportunity for defense. Should this matter be acted upon by the judiciary committee a report would be made to the senate. Then it would be necessary for both houses of the legislature to pass upon the specifications. In the event that the legislature deemed the matter to be worth consideration it would so inform the supreme court and testimony in the case would be taken under the direction of that court.—Lincoln dispatch.

Special Medicine for Kidney Ailments

Many elderly people have found in Foley's Kidney Remedy a quick relief and permanent benefit from kidney and bladder ailments and from annoying urinary irregularities due to advancing years. Isaac Regan, Farmer, Mo., says: "Foley's Kidney Remedy effected a complete cure in my case and I want others to know it." A. McMillen.

Nail Penetrated His Eye.

Indianola, Neb., March 25.—While driving a nail yesterday W. S. Coleman suffered the loss of his left eye. He struck the nail a glancing blow and it flew from under the hammer with such force as to drive it through the eye ball, completely destroying the sight.—Journal.

For Councilman, Second ward: L. W. McCONNELL.
For Members Board of Education: A. BARNETT. L. SUESS.

Whereas, The conditions in McCook have reached a stage where it is absolutely necessary for the City to own and operate a municipal water plant, and as we feel that our water supply is inadequate for fire protection and for the protection of our lawns and trees, the candidates placed in nomination by this convention are pledged to accomplish this result at the earliest date possible.

The police judge of Alliance advises that he turned into the public treasury of that city, during the municipal year, $6,784.10. He does not state from what sources he received this sum of which he is so proud, and the reader is left to imagine. You have read of the little red wagon which was so proud of its load of fertilizer.

Nebraska is entitled to more pleasure than it is likely to feel in the final enactment of a stock yards bill turning the stock yards over to the railroad commission. This holds true entirely aside from such direct benefit as it may have. Except for the brewers, the stock yards have been the most disturbing interest in Nebraska legislation since the railroads were turned over to the commission four years ago. The stock yards have been the nucleus of every deal attempted in the last two legislatures. Few measures have secured action this winter without reference to the stock yards. To have this mischievous spirit banished from the legislature is worth a fortune to Nebraska.—Journal.

Governor Aldrich has signed H. R. 107, the anti-trading stamp and anti-free gift enterprise bill which was passed by both houses of the legislature. The bill has no emergency clause and will become effective three months after the legislature adjourns. The governor is said to doubt the legality of the bill, but he believes it will be better for those interested to test the bill in the courts of Nebraska than to continually maintain a lobby at the legislature. The Nebraska retailers' association asked for the passage of the bill and manufacturers of prize packages trading stamp companies had able lawyers on the ground to combat the bill and to question its constitutionality.—Journal.

Warning to Railroad men.

Look out for severe and even dangerous kidney and bladder trouble resulting from years of railroading. Geo. E. Bell, 639 Third st., Fort Wayne, Ind., was many years a conductor on the Nickel Plate. He says: "Twenty years of railroading left my kidneys in terrible condition. There was a continual pain across my back and hips and my kidneys gave me much distress, and the action of my bladder was frequent and most painful. I got a supply of Foley Kidney Pills and the first bottle made a wonderful improvement and four bottles cured me completely. Since being cured I have recommended Foley Kidney Pill to many of my railroad friends." A. McMillen.

Miss Cameron Weds.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Della Mae Cameron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Cameron, who reside west of town about a mile, to Mr. Henry W. Kauffman of Havelock, Nebraska, the wedding having taken place at Fort Morgan on Thursday of last week. The happy couple are now on their wedding trip to Denver and other western points, but will be at home at Havelock, Nebraska, after March 28th. Mr. Kauffman is a machinist in the Burlington shops at Havelock. — Wray (Colo.) Rattler.

Do you know that of all the minor ailments colds are by far the most dangerous? It is not the cold itself that you need to fear, but the serious diseases that it often leads to. Most of these are known as germ diseases. Pneumonia and consumption are among them. Why not take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and cure your cold while you can? For sale by all dealers.

WILL BUILD NEW CHURCH.

German Congregationalists Decide Upon Plans and Specifications for Larger Edifice.

At a meeting Monday evening, the members of the German Congregational church of our city finally decided upon plans and specifications for the new and larger church building they have been considering for some time.

The proposed new building will be 40x65 feet on the ground, with a basement under the entire structure. The tower will be 10x10 feet, 40 feet high. The basement will be equipped for Sunday school purposes in addition to having the toilet, furnace and coal bunkers in the same. This will leave the entire first floor for audience purposes, pulpit, sacristy, etc. It is proposed to build on the old site using as much of the material in the new as possible—this will be especially practicable in the basement part.

The new edifice will cost about $6,000.00. Of this amount the church extension society will advance $1,500; the local members are expected to raise about $3,000; and the balance is expected to be raised among local business men, and German friends and societies in this and adjoining states. They propose to have the building free of debt when they dedicate it, about October 12th next, when the ministerial association will meet with the local church.

It is expected to commence work of the new church about May 1st. The steady increase of membership in the local church has made this action imperative, and The Tribune congratulates Rev. Kauzer and his parishioners upon this decision. There is no doubt but that the business men of McCook will liberally assist in this commendable work.

Young Bride's First Discovery.

Their wedding tour had ended, and they entered their new home to settle down to what they hoped to be one long uninterrupted blissful honeymoon.

But, alas! the young bride's trouble soon began, when she tried to reduce the cost of living with cheap big can baking powders.

She soon discovered that all she got was a lot for her money, and it was not all baking powder, for the bulk of it was cheap materials which had no leavening power. Such powders will not make light wholesome food. And because of the absence of leavening gas, it requires from two or three times as much to raise cakes or biscuits as it does of Calumet Baking powder.

Thus, eventually, the actual cost to you, of cheap baking powder, is more than Calumet would be.

Cheap baking powders often leave the bread bleached and acid, sometimes yellow and alkaline, and often unpalatable. They are not always of uniform strength and quality.

Now the bride buys Calumet—the perfectly wholesome baking powder, moderate in price, and always uniform and reliable. Calumet keeps indefinitely, makes cooking easy, and is certainly the most economical after all.

AN ARCTIC RESCUE

The Finding of the Survivors of the Greely Expedition.

STAYED THE HAND OF DEATH.

The Seven Starved and Half-Crazed Dying Men Were Wearily Waiting For the End When Came the Shout That Told Them Relief Was Nigh.

In his story of the rescue of the remnants of the ill-fated Greely expedition at Cape Sabine in 1884 Frank B. Copley in the American Magazine gives a dramatic description of the actual finding of the starving survivors.

On June 21 a furious gale blew down the tent, which the despairing men had not the strength to raise again. On the 22d the gale continued, and the men felt that the end of their long struggle had come.

In the evening all the men were in their bags, waiting for death. Greely, Frederick, Biederick, Ellison and Connell were under the fallen canvas of the tent. Brainard and Long were under the fallen canvas of the adjoining shelter. It remained light, of course, the sun at this season being continuously above the horizon. Connell passed into the unconscious state which was the prelude of death. The other six men, supremely indifferent to everything, lay idly dozing.

But the evening still was young when, seemingly from a distance, there came a sound that forced itself upon their attention. Once came the sound! Twice came the sound! Three times came the sound! Each time it was a long, insistent screech.

At first it was annoying, as any sound is that gradually forces one to leave one's pleasant dreams and awake. But with the second repetition of the screech Brainard and Long sat up and looked at each other.

From under the canvas of the tent came the complaining voice of Greely, "Brainard, did you hear it?"

"Yes, sir."

"What was it?"

"I think—I am pretty sure—that it was the whistle of a steamer."

There was something of a stir under the fallen canvas of the tent. Biederick had aroused himself and seized the bag containing their last bit of brandy. Two spoonfuls were left. Biederick forced one down the throat of the dying Connell. If they actually were going to be rescued Connell should have a chance to live.

The other spoonful of brandy Biederick offered to his commander. When Greely declined it Biederick sent it to follow the other spoonful down the throat of Connell.

Greely now asked Brainard and Long if they could get out from under their canvas and report if anything was to be seen. They said they felt able to climb to the high, rocky point on the ridge where Brainard had set a signal flag.

"Do your best," said Greely. Slowly and painfully Brainard and Long crawled up the narrow path in the snow to the point which commanded a broad view of the sea. There was much open water, but nothing was to be seen on it save the old monotonous fogs and bergs.

Long said they must have been mistaken in the nature of the sound they had heard. Brainard agreed. After a few minutes Brainard, chilled through, said he would go back and report to Greely. Long, who was more warmly clad, said he would stay up there a while longer.

When Brainard, in reporting to Greely, again expressed the opinion that they had been deceived the opinion seemed to be accepted by all the men under the tent. Brainard crawled back into his bag, fully believing that he never would leave it again and fully resigned to the prospect.

Presently Biederick began to argue that the fact that no ship was to be seen from the point above them did not necessarily indicate that they had been deceived in believing that the sounds they heard were those of a ship's whistle. He suggested that the ship might be in Payer harbor, which could not be seen from their ridge.

Greely aroused himself sufficiently to say that he did not consider this probable. Biederick, however, went on arguing in his persistent German way that help was near. At length Greely, whose nerves were a wreck and whose mind was fast giving way, turned on Biederick and cursed him for making a disturbance.

"Shut up," he ordered, "and let us die in peace!"

So once more there was quiet. Lying outside in his bag, Brainard vaguely wondered if he ever again would see Long.

Presently he heard footsteps. Some one was coming. It could not be Long. Whoever was coming was running. God—he was running!

Then came a shout—the shout of a hale and hearty man.

"Greely! Greely! Are ye there?" There was no mistaking the voice with its Scotch Irish accent. The voice was that of James W. Norman, ice master on the Proteus when that steamship transported the Greely expedition to Lady Franklin bay three years before.

As Norman shouted two big ships of the United States navy were anchoring just at the foot of the ridge.

Seven men out of twenty-five lived until the evening of June 22. Another hour and probably only six would have been found alive. Two days more and in all probability the last man would have been found dead.
