McNamara Bros. Comedy Co., appeared at the Gehling on Saturday evening and played to a small house. "Mr. Plaster of Paris" was the attraction announced but at the last moment the bill was changed and the melodrama, "Grit the Newsboy" was played. It is hardly fair to criticize the actors adversely because the best of actors could make nothing of such a play and the disappointment of the audience was due to this fact more than anything else.

The bonafide circulation of The Tribune doubled itself in the last week and it wasn't a very good week either. In addition to this regular list, we print every week enough sample copies to make our circulation greater than that of any other paper in the county. We see that these copies reach the very best class of people in the territory tributary to Falls City. A word to the wise advertiser is sufficient.

W. E. Horstman, the popular auctioneer was in town Monday. Mr. Horstman is often called upon to cry sales for men who have employed him before, which is the best possible evidence of his ability. Matt Schulenberg is going to hold a big sale and Mr. Horstman will do the "spieling."

The front of C. F. Hoffmans tailoring establishment has been given a coat of paint. It is very attractive being a bright red, and that together with the window display draws attention from all who pass.

On Saturday a Tribune man had a talk with the gentleman who discovered the mineral paint deposit near this city. He promises something of interest for publication in the near future.

TRANSCENDENTAL JOKES.

At the Expense of the Illustrious Colony at Brook Farm.

For the unbelieving world outside, it must be remembered, the Transcendental movement at least contributed some such sunshine through the very sarcasms it excited; as when Mrs. Russell, Father Taylor's brilliant daughter, did not flinch from defining the Transcendentalists as "a race who dove into the infinite, soared into the illimitable and never paid cash;" or when Carlyle described Ripley, who had called on him in England, as "a Socinian minister who had left the pulpit to reform the world by cultivating onions." Emerson compared Brook Farm to "a French revolution in small" and a certain meeting of the Transcendental club to "going to Heaven in a swing." All the peculiarities of Brook Farm, we may be sure, says Thomas Wentworth Higginson, in Atlantic, were reported without diminution in the gossip of Boston Society, even the jokes of the young people made upon themselves being taken seriously in the world outside; as when they asked at the dinner table: "Is the butter within the sphere of your influence?" or proposed that a pie should be cut "from the center to the periphery." There being more young men than young women, at first, an unusual share of household duties, moreover, fell upon the stronger sex. They helped in the laundry, brought water from the pump, prepared vegetables in the barn. The graceful George William Curtis trimmed lamps and the manly and eminently practical Charles Dana organized a band of "griddle cake servitors" composed of "four of the most elegant youths of the community."
