

SAVED THE TRAIN.

in the midst of a scrubby pine forest, er's train and whether or not it had with a sandy road crooking out from left his station on time. three houses, a little general store with the trouble?" a porch like the visor of a military cap. and a schoolhouse, all arranged in a and Mercer made another attempt to scraggy row along the railroad track. arouse Pinckney.

A dozen trains whirled through Kane trained it. When the train was a mile more away. away there were always two blasts of With a hundred terrifying questions the whistle. Every one in Kane flashing through her mind, Polly ran thought they meant simply "Wake up, on through the gloom. When she was look out!" for that is what all locomo- almost within range of the big headtives say at every crossing, but the girl light, she saw half a dozen armed men in the gingham dress heard "Hello, swarming around the engine, she heard Polly!" and darted out on the platform fierce oaths, and then the engine start and waved her handkerchief. As the ed up again. She saw in an instant great train thundered nearer a hand that it had been cut free from the train was thrust from the engineer's win- In the cab window, where her father dow, and, although it was usually dark, usually stood, there was a big, unfashe could see the flutter of something miliar figure managing the lever and white, and oftentimes as the engine throttle. Terrified Polly sprang to one darted past the station she heard the side into a clump of bushes. As the blurred sound of a voice and caught a locomotive passed her on its way up glimpse of a grimy face and a blue jean the track she saw that the man in the jacket, and then she went back to her cab wore a black mask on his face, and place in the little station with a sigh of then she knew what had happened. contentment.

Polly Marshall when her father's en- had held up the train and were pregine went through. Polly was the sta- paring to rob the express car. tion agent at Kane Creek. Any one For a moment Polly was torn with could have told that a woman presided doubt and terror. Had they shot her in the little depot, for was there not al- father? She knew that he never would ways a bouquet in the window and submit to have his train captured withdainty pictures surrounding the grimy out a struggle. Should she go to him? time tables on the walls and a kitten Then she remembered her station and curling upon the doorstep? At 17 Polly the telegraph, and, without a moment's has gone in as assistant to learn teleg- delay, she was flying down the track raphy, and when Clark, the agent, was toward the depot. She would send for ralled to Mercer the company had left help to Mercer, but squarely in front of the independent girl in charge. She the little depot the locomotive stopped, and her father lived in one of the and the black masked man sprang from wooden houses a stone's throw back the cab window and darted across the from the depot, and since Polly's moth- platform. Hardly thinking what she er died they had been everything to was doing, Polly ran up on the other pered, but to Polly he was always as for she had heard much about the tertender as a kitten. Often when she rible doings of train robbers. was a little girl he took her with him | Through the cab window she could was for, and how, when the engine mask, and she saw him plainly. squeaked here or squaeked there, a lit- What should she do? She dared not very heavy work for a girl to do. It was one night late in the fall that At that moment three shots rang out, Polly Marshall had need of all her clear and istinct, from the detached your grandfather this morning, Bridknowledge of engines. She was sitting train. The man at the telegraph in get? at her desk in the little observation strument sprang to his feet and ran to window, a shaded light throwing its rays down on her telegraph instruments and the sounding key clicking sleepily. Suddenly she was startled her fingers sought the keys, and she gave the answer that signified that she was all attention.

"Look out for -- " clicked the sounder and then it suddenly ceased, and try as she would Polly could get no further communication from the station next to the eastward. What could the trouble be? Polly sprang to her feet, remembering that the night express of which her father was the engineer was the next train due. Could up the track. He had a pistol in his anything be the matter? She ran out hand. He was pointing it at her and on the dark platform to see that her shouting for her to stop, but the engine lights were all in place and that the switches were properly set, so that the as he would, the robber could not catch express would slip past the station it, but he stopped and fired, the bullet without an accident. Then she went ripping through the cab over Polly's back and called up Mercer.

"Can't you get Pinckney?" she asked.

ANE CREEK was a railroad sent her the warning dispatch so myscrossing on the S. & C. Rail- terious interrupted. She knew the operead, about two miles from the rator at Pinckney well. Every night divisional terminal at Mercer. It was he told her of the approach of her faththe trees on one side and into the trees "Pinckney quiet. Can't get answer." on the other. There were only two or was the report of the wires. "What's Polly answered as well as she could.

Her father's train was now due. It Creek every day with only a shriek of should be whistling cheerily at the greeting and a whipping wake of fine lower bend. Polly stepped out on the sand. Only two of them paid the slight- platform and peered up the track. Yes, est attention to the girl in a blue ging- there was the familiar headlight. She ham dress who stood in the little ob- would have known it among a hunservation window. One of them was dred. Then came the whistle, "Hello, the way freight, which stopped at Polly!" and Polly ran back into her Kane every time it came along while office much relieved, and sat down to the conductor handed the girl a bundle warn Mercer. At that instant she heard of yellow papers and received another a peculiar cracking sound that sent like it in return. The other was the her heart quivering deep in her bosom. night express, westward bound, from Then there was the shrill scream of the St. Paul, and running at forty miles an locomotive whistle, suddenly interrupthour. It was a splendid train-ten ed as if the hand that had drawn the stances. Which no one believed, of cars, with the finest engine on the road, lever had been struck from its place. big No. 606. As its glaring eye flashed Polly knew it was a cry of distress. around the bend in the direction of It seemed to say "Help!" in a long, Mercer the girl in the gingham dress tremulous wail. Instantly Polly dartoften thought of the great train as a ed outside and flew up the track. A1powerful and ferocious beast snorting ready the express should have thunand roaring westward on a race with dered past the station, but she could to the penitentiary.-Brooklyn Standthe sun, and she knew the hand that see its headlight a hundred yards or

She understood why Pinckney had For it was a moment of great joy to tried to warn her and failed. Robbers side-the fireman's side of the engine-Engineer Marshall was a big, silent | and, raising herself up, peered into the man, and his companions, some of cab. She had half expected to see her them, thought him gruff and ill-tem- father's dead body lying on the floor, to Mercer on his engine, and while she see the robber sitting at her own little sat on his black leacther seat at the desk in the depot sending a message. -cab window. clinging on with both It flashed over her all at once that he hands, he explained to her how the big was wiring Mercer that the express black creature under them was started was delayed, thus preventing any and stopped; what this brass crank alarm. The robber had pushed up his tle oil was needed in this cup or in that enter the office, and she, a mere girl, crevice, and Polly had learned to know | could be of no service where the roban engine as well as she knew the neat | bers were making their attack on the little pantry in the house at home. In- train. If only she had the little revoldeed, she had more than once managed ver that lay in the drawer of her desk! the levers and throttle, although it was | She set her teeth as she thought what she would do with it.

> a side window in the waiting room and looked up the track.

Now was her chance. Hardly thinkink what she did Polly sprang to the by the call of her number. Instantly engineer's cab, threw back the reverse lever and opened the throttle steadily. The big steel wheels began to turn, very slowly at first. Farther and farther the throttle opened and faster and faster turned the wheels, and yet they did not go half fast enough to suit Polly, who was now glancing fearfully day." over her shoulder.

Suddenly the depot door was thrown open, and she saw the robber darting was now going at good speed, and, run head.

The engine was now tearing down Pinckney was the station which had the track at full speed. Polly knew | break that it must be fired or it would not go' far, and so, leaving the throttle open, she sprang to the coal pit, flung open the firehole, and with the heavy shovel in her small white hands threw in load after load of coal. When she returned to her place she could see the first sig- | papers: nal light of Mercer already blinking into view. She pulled down on the whistle cord and the engine shricked its distress.

Five minutes later Polly strained at the heavy reverse lever, turned hard on the airbrake and brought the great iron horse to a sudden standstill. How she never knew, but in a few minutes the engine was headed back with a half dozen armed men aboard of her. Behind them came another load of men on a switch engine and two men were the alarm.

reached Kane Creek, but it ceased soon afterward. The robbers had gone. They had taken with them much plunder from the passengers, but they had not been able to get into the express safe, although they were at work drilling it open when relief came.

stopped Polly was missing. When the rescued and excited passengers and exaround and inquire, the Mercer men help to the beleaguered train.

a man moaning, and an instant later they saw Polly kneeling in the sand with her father's head in her lap, crying bitterly, and they gathered up the brave engineer and his daughter and carried them down to the train, cheering all the way. Engineer Marshall was not badly hurt, and he was able to be in Mercer when the general manager of the road thanked the blushing Polly officially and offered her a new and better position in Mercer, and, of course, all the passengers and express messengers heard about Polly's brave deed and said a great many pleasant things about her, but Polly, being a sensible girl, only blushed and said that she had to do it, and that any other girl would have done the same under like circum-

Later, when the robbers were captured, Polly was able to identify one of them positively-the one who had run the engine-and through him the entire party was convicted and sentenced ard-Union.

DEGENERATE FRANCE.

In Every Particular She Is Failing in the Race of Civilization.

In the view of the rest of Europe France is seen at her worst since the tiger-like outburst of the commune, writes Harold Frederick. The scandal of the Panama canal corruption was nothing by comparison, for that tainted only a single case in public life. Nor was even the commune itself so bad, for then it was only Paris which went wild, and it was the rest of France which roughly put it right. But in this abominable Dreyfus crime the dry rot permeates all of France. It is easiest to describe the disease as anti-Semitism, as that is what one sees on the surface. The cheap newspapers which have the largest circulations, have been for years openly preaching destruction to the Jews until they have filled the weak and ill-balanced brains of their hundreds of thousands of readers with the most cavage ideas. But in reality anti-Semitism is a symptom and not the disease itself. The true malady is degeneracy. The French are no longer able to keep up with the rest of the world under the tremendous strain of the pace at which contemporary civilization moves. They have broken down by the wayside. Their adults cannot adapt themselves to the new conditions. Their youth are pitifully below the standard of any past generation of Frenchmen we know about. From every standpoint, numer ically, commercially, financially, mentally and spiritually, they perceive themselves dropping further and further behind their rivals. Nobody any longer treats French opinion with intellectual respect. Even Russia, having borrowed more of their money than they could spare, laughs in their faces and makes open overtures to their enemy. It is the disordered, illformed and more or less vehement rage at the vague perception of these things which is the matter with the French masses. It needs no prophet to see that they will be much worse before they are better.

Another Delusion.

Mrs. Fadde, Faith Curist-How is Bridget-He still has the rheumatics mighty bad, mum. "You mean he thinks he has the rheumatism. There is no such thing as rheumatism."

"Yes. mum." A few days later.

"And does your grandfather still persist in his delusion that he has the rheumatism?"

"No, mum; the poor man thinks now that he is dead. We buried um yister-

Signs of the Times.

With a single break about fourteen miles in length it is now possible to go in trolley cars from Providence, R. I., to Nashua, N. H., a distance of considerably over 100 miles. This is a striking reminder of how the trolley has spread over New England during the last ten years.-Boston Journal.

A colored philosopher says it is fool ish to count your chickens before day SHAKSPEARE IN SHORTHAND.

German Rewriting the Plays in Elizabethan Tachygraphy. Dr. Eduard Engel has written the following letter to one of the Berlin news

"In a lecture I delivered some years ago to the Berlin Society of Stenographers, who use Stolze's system, I suggested that those accurately acquainted with the oldest English shorthand systems of the sixteenth century should try to ascertain whether many of the deficiencies of the text of Shakspeare she ever managed to stammer the story | might not be explained by stenographic mistakes. The idea was suggested to me by the old and well-founded conjecture of Shakspearean scholars that the oldest copies of Shakspeare's plays-the so-called quartos-were printed from racing up the street of Mercer calling | stenographic notes, taken in the theater, and that many of the unintelligibili-They heard the firing before they lies of the text are due to this. My suggestion fell on fruitful soil, and I have now the pleasure of making the excellent work of a young savant, who has thus sprung at one leap into the ranks of our best Shakspearean scholars, known to wider circles. In a series of articles on Shakspeare and the be-From the time that the engine ginnings of English stenography, Herr Kurt Dewischeit has proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that the quarto edipress messengers began to crowd tions of Shakspeare's plays were pirated editions printed from stenographic remembered her. A party of them went | notes, that the stenographic system out to find the girl who had brought used was that of Timothy Bright, who was born in 1550, and that innumerable In a little clump of bushes they heard | mistakes in the quartos, innumerable contradictions between them and the first authorized folio editions, can be at once and most simply explained by the defects of that stenographic system and the indexterity of the stenographers of that time. Herr Dewischeit has confirmed my conjecture almost beyond my own expectation. He is at present the only person who possesses all the requisite qualifications for this quite new kind of text investigation, and it is to be wished that he, with his accurate knowledge of the oldest English stenography, combined with solid Shakspearean scholarship, would subject the texts of the dramas to a thorough reinvestigation. The purification of the text of Shakspeare is raised by him for the first time from arbitrary fantasticality to the rank of a strict science, with which, however, only Shakspearean scholars theoretically and practically trained in stenographic questions are at liberty to busy themselves. Seldom has a higher, never has a more delightful, task fallen to stenography." A BAD COMPANION.

He Didn't Like to Correct a Lady, But He Had To.

The man with bronzed skin and longish hair was hanging upon every word that the charming young woman spoke, says the Washington Star. She was telling of an actress whom she greatly admired.

"I will never forget how she looked," the young woman said. "She was as beautiful as Juno."

The weather-beaten auditor moved uneasily, and then said: "I beg yer pardon, miss, but I ain't sure that I heard yer remark jest right."

"I said that she was as beautiful as "It ain't fer me ter c'rect a lady," he began in apologetic tones. "I am quite willing to be corrected when there is any reason for doubt," she replied, in a tone with traces of congealment through it. "But I do not perceive how this can be such a case." "I don't persume to conterdict nobody," he replied. "I haven't no observations to make further than that there ain't no accountin' fur tastes."

"Have you ever seen this actress?" "No, miss."

"Then I don't see how you are qualified to speak." "Might I make so bold as to inquire whether you was as tur west as British Columbia?"

"Never."

"Then, miss, you can't re'lize that I'm standin' up fur the lady's good looks as much as you are. Ye can't believe half of what these here miners that come East tell ye. If ye ain't even been as fur West as British Columbia, it stan's to reason that ye can't have no idea of what a lonesome, ramshackle, frize-uplookin' place Juneau is."

Managing the Woman with a Whip. It has always been a question with the country newspaper man what he would do if an indignant woman set out to horsewhip him. Some years ago W. W. Wick of Topeka was running a country paper and a weman assailed him on the main street of the town. He gathered her up under his arm and paraded around the square. She kicked and squirmed, but be marched laughingly along, displaying her to the crowd that had gathered. It mortified the woman so much that she left town on the first train and never bothered the editor afterward.

Ris Linguistic Limit. He had been a Latin scholar, And had mastered modern Greek, For a pairry wagered dollar He learned Hebrew in a week. Sanscrit and antique Phoenician, Or the scripts of Yucatan Were as simple as addition To this language-learned man.

Patois, race pronunciations And the Chinese alphabet He knew well-to fifty nations He could speak their tongue; and yet Finally his learning failed him And his thought and speech were "off," For 50 language gifts availed him With the dialect of golf!

Coal Tar for Dyes. Coal tar, when used for dyes, yields sixteen shades of blue, the same number of yellow tints, twelve of orange, nine of violet, and numerous other colors and shades.

Burning kisses always result from sparks.

DIDN'T MIND BULLETS.

The Judge Liked an Argument Too Well to Be Feased by a Shot.

During the day I had attended court, where a lawsuit of considerable importance was on trial and which was not decided until 6 o'clock in the evening, says a writer. Then I went home to stop for the night with the judge who had the case in hand. On the way home we were stopped by a man, who said:

"Judge, it is quite likely that the loser of that suit will shoot at you through a window to-night to secure revenge." "Yes, quite likely-thanks," pleasantly replied the judge, as we passed on. At the supper table his wife appeared nervous and uneasy, and before the meal was concluded she said: "Alfred, a man has been seen in front of the house acting rather suspiciously, and I'm afraid he means you harm." "Yes, I'm afraid so, my dear," replied | tify the system. the judge and then took up the conversation she had interrupted.

After supper we adjourned to the liorary, and by and by, as we sat at the able with a kerosene lamp between us, there arose an argument connected with the political question.

"Sir," said the judge, as he grew heated by opposition, "they may bring all their sophistry to bear on the question, but nothing will convince me that--'

At that instant I felt a hot streak along my left cheek, and the lamp chimney was shivered into a hundred pieces and the light went out. The judge rang a hand bell which was within reach and I thought I heard the notes of the bell before the report of a rifle in front of the house. A negro man came running in, and the judge said:

"Julius, bring us another lamp." When the lamp was brought I looked at the judge. He had not changed in the slightest.

"Wasn't that a bullet which broke the lamp chimney?" I asked.

"Very likely it was," he replied, as he looked around. "And wasn't it meant for you?"

"I presume so. There it is, in the back of a law book. As I was saying, however, sophistry is not argument, and those champions-" "Excuse me, judge," I interrupted, 'but the next bullet may kill one of us." "Oh, they never shoot but once, and want to convince you that your position is untenable. You see, to begin with, the Democratic party-" But his wife came in and insisted that he give an alarm, and the argument was never finished.

Making Bread in Camp.

Good bread, on which your climbing and digging depend, may be made direct from the flour sack, with a little salt and water stirred in. After the dough is worked to the required firmness squeeze it into thin cakes about the size of ship biscuits, throw them on hot coals raked from the heart of your camp fire; turn them before they begin to burn, and when firm enough set them on edge to be toasted until thoroughly baked through. Or if the weather is bad, cut a stick about the size of a whip-handle, of birch pine, spruce, cottonwood or willow, according to the flavor desired, and sharpen it; squeeze out a handful of dough, coil it in a thin spiral around the stick and set it upright in the ground at baking distance from the fire, giving it a quarter turn from time to time until the bread spiral is thoroughly baked and browned all around. Wholesome bread may be quickly made in this way in any kind of weather, with the flavor of sunny wheat fields in it, and that of the stick on which it is baked, while the losses from smearing of pans, and the soggy heart of thick loaves and dampers that must be thrown away, are avoided. If you must have your bread old-fashioned and light-bloated into a fluffy mass full of airholes-then instead of a heavy case of powders take a quarter-ounce cake of baker's compressed yeast to start with, and after each baking put a handful of the fermented dough into the flour sack, and with this store you may go on raising cerealine billows as long as you like .- San Francisco Examiner.

Blood

Pure Blood

Is Health.

Without blood circulating through your veins you could not live. Without pure blood you cannot be well. The healthy action of every organ depends upon the purity and richness of the blood by which it is nourished and sustained. If you have salt rheum, scrofula sores, pimples, boils or any kind of humor, your blood is not pure. If you take Hood's Sarsaparilla it will make your blood pure and promptly relieve all these troubles. In the spring the blood is loaded with impurities. Hence, all those unsightly eruptions, that languor and depression, and the danger of serious illness. Hood's Sarsaparilla is needed to purify, enrich and vitalize the blood and protect and for-

Hood's Sarsa-

Is America's Greatest Medicine. Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Get only Hood's.

Hood's Pills are the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

SEND FOR A BICYCLE CREAT CLEARING SALE of '97 and '98 models, best makes, $9.75 to $18. Sent on approval without a cent payment. Free use of wheel to our agents. Write for our new money. SPECIAL THIS WEEK-40 high grade '97 models [slightly shopworn], 819.75 each. "Wanderings Awheel," a souvenir book of art, FREE for stamp while they last. K. C. MEAD CYCLE CO., CHICAGO.

A Daring Joke.

The celebrated Handel had such sensitive nerves that he could not bear to hear the tuning of instruments, and so this was always done before he arrived at the theater. A musical wag wishing to make mirth from Handel's irascibility of temper, stole into the orchestra on a night when the Prince of Wales was to be present and untuned all the instruments. As soon as the prince arrived, Handel gave the signal for beginning con spirito; but such was the horrible discord that the enraged master started up from his seat, and overturning a double-bass which stood in his way, he seized a kettle-drum and threw it with such violence at the head of the leader of the band that he lost his wig in the effort. Without waiting to replace it, he advanced bareheaded to the front of the orchestra. breathing vengeance, but so choked with passion that he could not speak. In his ridiculous attitude he stood stamping and staring for some moments, amid a convulsion of laughter. Nor could be be prevailed upon to resume his seat until the prince went in person and with much difficulty appeased his wrath.

A Trolley Coach.

The people of Greenwich, Conn., are riding in a trolley stage coach that needs no rails for its operation. The wires are at one side instead of being overhead. The coach can be turned around or moved in any direction without interfering in the least with the ordinary traffic of the highway. Certain property owners would not permit the operation of a regulation trolley over a road, and this trolley stage coach was devised as a means of overcoming their objections.

A Pessimist. "I suppose," he ventured, "that you would never speak to me again if I were to kiss you."

"Oh, George!" she exclaimed, "why don't you get over the habit of always looking at the dark side of things?"-Cleveland Leader.

G. W.'s Motto. "Boys," said the school teacher, "who can tell me George Washington's mot-Several hands went up.

"Philip Perkasie, you may tell." "When in doubt, tell the truth."-Detroit Free Press. Lake Erie is the lake of the "wild cat," the name given to a fierce tribe of Indians exterminated by the Iro-

THE SECRET OF A GOOD DISPOSITION.

Mrs. Pinkham Says a Careful Regard for Bodily Health Makes Women Sweet and Attractive to All.

The world is filled with sweet women who are held back from usefulness by some trouble of the female organs. Fretfulness and nervousness rapidly destroy sweet dispositions.

happy if she will follow Mrs. Pinkham's advice. See what Mrs. Craig says: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:-I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and think it is the best medicine for women in the world. I was so weak and nerv-ous that I thought I could not live from one day to the next. I had prolapsus uteri and lencorrhœa, and thought that I would die. I had dragging pains in my back, burning sensation down to my feet, and so many miserable feelings. People said that I looked like a dead woman. Doctors tried to cure me, but failed. I had given up when I heard of the Pinkham medicine. I got a bottle. I did not have much faith in it, but thought I would try it, and it made a new woman of me. I wish I could get every lady in the land to try it, for it did for me what doctors could not do." -Mrs. Sallie Craig, Baker's Landing, Pa. That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a safeguard of woman's health is clearly proven by the thousands of letters constantly being received. Here is one from Mrs. W. P. VALENTINE, 566 Ferry Ave., Camden, N. J .: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:-Before writing to you I felt very bad, had terrible sick headaches, no appetite, gnawing pain in stomach, pain in my back and right side; was tired and nervous, and so weak I could scarcely stand. I was not able to do anything, had sharp pains all through my body. Before I had taken half a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I found myself improving. I continued its use until I had taken four bottles, and felt so well that I did not need to take any more. I am like a new person." Ask Mrs. Pinkham's Advice-A Woman Best understands a Woman's file