The men looked at one another and exchanged their thoughts in half whispers, and Willie Trebalion, after hanging in the wind for a minute or so, rapped his book against his forehead and came forward as their spokesman.

"We bain't altogether in love wi' galleys, Captain Ireland," said he, "nor with any other ship that's driven wi slaves' oars. You see, slaves is apt to break out when you're fighting their friends an requires a lot o' victual an attention. An this company, being sailors all an not soldier mariners, likes best to maneuver in battle under canvas an, in fact, backs one round ship to three long ones any day."

"And I am with you there, Willie. I did not mean that we should put these prisoner dons on a galley's bank and let them taste the bitters of their own prescription. No, no; leave oared craft to nations of land soldiers. The winds are the ministers of the Englishman, and sails are the wand with which he rules them. Give me a handy craft, and I'll warrant to keep the weather gauge of an enemy without cumbering the waist with filthy slaves and telling off good fighting men to guard them. The Spaniards here shall be far luckier than they deserve. They shall work for us as shipwrights' laborers and shore servants; and when our ship is built and we are fitted for the cruise we'll give them a holiday to dispose of their bodies as they like. If we return to refit or for any other purpose and find them here-well, we can enslave them again and make them useful. If we return no more again, well. And if we come and find that they have escaped, still well, for they will then be off our hands."

Here he paused, and at once there arose a strong lunged shout of approbation, in which all joined with the exception of the old man, who remained moodily silent. The men were delighted with the plan and eager to begin the work of shipbuilding. They swore to follow Captain Ireland to man who should disobey him. Then they rated John Topp as his lieutenant, Willie Trehalion as boatswain and Jan Pengony gunner, after which, remembering the old man and thinking he might work mischlef unless he was humored, they named him captain of guard over the prisoners and promised to haul him a bombard ashore, with which he could belch language into the cave in case of a revolt.

And at this he regained his spirits instantly and with a horrid torrent of "Oh, ho, ho!" and "Ah, ha, ha!" assured us that before the month was a week older he would have occasion to shoot, for that already, like an Andes condor, he could scent the steam of Spanish slaughter from afar.

Meanwhile Alec had the five Spanish officers brought before him armored, but unarmed, and told them what enough. Bandy legged little Don Sancho shrugged his shoulders and, saying that it was the fortune of war, hoped that we would set our tasks lightly in view of a possible turning of the tables some time in the future. The sallow faced commandant, however, refused absolutely to soil his hands for any man's pleasure and set his snarling yellow teeth with the air of a man who intends to keep to his word.

"Why, senor," said I, "John Topp the tar bucket if need be."

He turned round sharply when he heard my name. "John Topp, is it? I must ask your pardon for not recognizings on the point differ from yours."

"Take care, Don Miguel. We have a me by inches if you please, for Lam to that extent in your power, but I shall not be your obedient servant."

"Oh, ho, ho!" laughed the old man, who had just come up to look after his charge. "Ah, ha! Stubborn and stiff and telling and appropriate and hu morous, too, if possible. Why isn't the potbellied little racker here? Dear me, at another time such a piece of pleasantry would be on my lips in a moment! Oh, ho! I have it. We will roast you in your metal shell like some great crab, most illustrious Senor Commandant. You're rather lean, so maybe will be a trifle charred in the process, but the devil, who will eat the dish, is not overnice in his feeding and will forgive the cooks for forgetting to baste. The Spaniard uttered no verbal reply, but shrugged his shoulders and gave a sneering smile which showed no de parture from his previous resolve.

XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX Then Alec spoke:

"Jan Pengony and Job Treballon, slip off Don Miguel's iron shirt and bare his back. Now trice him up to the lower bough of that tree. No, not by the neck. I don't want him hanged. Fasten his wrists."

Don Miguel's face showed its first expression of uneasiness.

"Senor Captain," he said, "flogging to death is a felon's death, and I have done nothing to deserve that disgrace. If you will not hold me to ransom, at least kill me by sword, rope or bullet and let me die like a soldier and a gentleman."

"But I have no intention of killing you, senor," replied Alec with a courtly bow. "Here, you men, go and bring the rest of the prisoners from the cave to witness the flogging. I am not going to have you whipped to death, Don Miguel, though the old man here is

We will roast you in your metal shell." Itching to do it, I can see. No, I am simply going to give you threescore lashes today on the bare back and threescore more on every succeeding the end and promised death to the first day that you refuse to work. You may get tired of your stubbornness in time, and meanwhile the example will be good. No, old man, don't hurry. Wait for the audience."

> "Ten thousand times would I prefer death," cried the Spaniard with a venomous oath.

"You are not offered a choice, senor."

"You refuse to kill me?" "Absolutely."

"Ab. then, I surrender. Your punish ment is more degrading than your task.

I accept the lesser indignity." "So? I thought you would," said Alec. "Here, gunner; appoint this man to a gang and give him a task suitable to his strength."

me cases the external signs of Contagious Blood Poison are so slight that the victim is firmly within the grasp of the monster before the true nature of the disease is known. In other cases the blood is quickly filled with this poisonous virus and the swollen glands, mucus patches in the mouth, sores on scalp, ulcers on tongue, sore throat, enaptions on skin, copper colored splotches, and failing hair and eyebrows leave no room for doubt, as these are all unmistakable signs of Contagious Blood Poison.

Doctors still prescribe mercury and potash as the only cure for Blood Poison. These poisonous minerals never yet made a complete and permanent cure of Contagious Blood Poison. They drive the disease back into the system, cover it up for a while, but it breaks out again in worse form. These powerful minerals produce mercurial rheumatism and the most offensive sores and ulcers, causing the joints to stiffen and finger nails to drop off. Mercury and potash make wrocks, not cures, and those who have been dosed with these drugs are never after free from aches and pair. S. S. S. acts in an entirely different manner, being a purely vegetable remedy; it forces the poison out of the system, and instead of tearing down, builds up and invigorates the general health. S. S. S. is the only antidote for this specific virus, and therefore the only cure for Contagious Blood Poison. No matter in what stage or how hopeless the case may appear, even though pronounced incurable by the doctors, S. S. S. can be relied upon to make a rapid, permanent cure. S. S. S. is not a new, untried remedy; an experience of nearly fifty years has proven it a sure and unfailing cure for this disease. It is the only purely vegetable blood medicine known.

Mr. H. L. Myers, 100 Mulberry St., Newark, N. J., says: "I was afflicted with a terrible blood disease, which was in spots at first, but afterwards spread all over my body. These soon broke out into sores, and it is easy to imagine the suffering I endured. Before I became convinced that the doctors could do me no good I had spent a hundred dollars, which was really thrown away. I then tried various patent medicines, but they did not reach the disease. When I had finished my first bottle of S. S. S. I was greatly improved, and was delighted with the result. The large, red splotches on my chest began to grow paler and smaller, and before long disappeared entirely. I regained my lost weight, became stronger, and my appetite improved. I was soon entirely well, and my skin as clear as a piece of glass."
