The men were idling about the hot decks in surly knots of threes and fours, but the news brightened up their sullen faces as rain does a parched prairie. They jumped to their stations like a parcel of holiday schoolboys. Up went the stowed foresall, the headsails sprang aloft like larks, and driven by eager arms the windlass heaved us up to the stream anchor at which we were riding.

If you are sick all over and don't friends. A. H. Kiesau.

Children are constantly exposed to all sorts of dis-ses. The air they breathe is filled with germs, sewer cases. gas and dust from the filthy streets are inhaled into the lungs and taken into the blood. At the crowded school rooms and other public places they come in contact almost daily with others recovering from or in the first stages of contagious discases. You can't quarantine against the balance of the world, and the best you can do is to keep their blood in good condition, and thus prevent or at least mitigate the disease. You have perhaps learned from observation or experience that healthy, robust children (and this means, of course, children whose blood is pure) are not nearly so liable to contract diseases peculiar to them, and when they do it is generally in a mild form. On the other hand, weak, emaciated and sickly ones seem to catch every disease that comes along. This is because their blood is lack-ing in all the elements necessary to sustain and build up the body. Poisons of every description accumulate in the system, because the polluted and sluggish blood is unable to perform its proper functions. Such children need a blood purifier and tonic to give strength and vitality to their blood, and S. S. S., being a purely vegetable remedy, makes it the safest and best for the delicate constitutions of children. S. S. S. is not only a perfect blood medicine, but is pre-eminently the tonic for children; it increases their appetites and strengthens the digestion and assimilation of food. If your children have any hereditary or acquired taint in their blood, give them S. S. S. and write to our physicians for any information or advice wanted; this will cost you nothing, and will start the little weaklings on the road to recovery. Book on Blood and Skin Diseases free.

"Don't you bother about Garge, Master Topp," sang out Jan Pengony from the fore scuttle. "Garge's skull's like a bullock's. Now that the old man's pulled the broken sword blade out on't an sewed up the slit Garge is cursing away as amiable as ever he did."

"Is the old man surgeoning, then?" "Aye, an lacking a better we might have a worse. He's just chopped off Tinker Tom's leg at the knee joint an sewed up the stump as neat as can be. An Tom, he never uttered a groan nor a grunt the whole time, an there he is now a clamoring to have his leg salted down to take home with him for a keepsake. I'm thinking the old man bain't no bad surgeon." "And so it proved, for with the exception of the loss of Tinker Tom's leg. every man of the crew was as sound ten days after the fight as he had been when the Scourge's powder room was empty. The taking of this store of nowder and pearls at El Pueblo del Norte was in every way a lucky stroke. for, besides giving us the means for future battles, it put all hands in conceit with their captain and their craft. Moreover, it was something prosperous to look back upon during the profitless time that followed.

After clearing the reefs of the harbor we ran round to patrol the well used highway at the back of the island lying behind the rocky shelter of Coche, which is separated from Margherita by a strait two leagues in width and darting out when a quarry appeared. Six times in six weeks we were engaged, but the prey was after Alec's heart, not mine. We grievously annoyed the subjects of his majesty of Spain, but all that we rifled from their pockets would not have melted down into a deep sea lead.

The explanation is simple. Each craft we brought to and overhauled was westward bound, carrying a packed cargo of lank, lean dons from the old world to fill their pauper pockets from the wealth of the new. Quite one-half of each bark's sallow company was rotting with scurvy, a result of the long passage out; and as sick men who have no wealth but the ragged clothes on their backs to defend will not fight desperately for the fortunes they have yet to gain, none of these encounters cost one drop of English blood. Indeed five ships out of the six hove to at the first shot and surrendered without further resistance.

Now, though I know that It goes against an English seaman's grain to resort to extreme measures in cold blood, still prudence is a jade that needs attention as well as the more highly mettled steed chivalry, and so I and almost all the Scourge's crew with me saw fit to expostulate with our captain on his treatment of the captain. Who is it to be-yourself?"

"I can well believe that," said I. "It was only the other day he took the cross staff in those twisted fingers of his, shot the sun, clphered out his reckoning on the slate and, turning round, 'Oh, ho, oh, Master Topp!' he chuckled. 'He's a lubberly navigator who cannot find his position to a matter of three minutes.' And then when I had gone over the work afresh and found that he seemed to be right, 'Ah, ha, ha, Master Topp, you're a better scholar with cudgel than with pencil! More weight in the forearm than in the head, eh? Stick to the sea long enough and you'll blunder a stout ship ashore yet before you're hanged.' And he would have added more in the same strain, but I didn't wait to hear it."

"Ah," laughed Alec, "the old man's infirmities protect his skin from the trouncing of John Topp's fist, and the old man's wit is too sharp pointed to take a trouncing from John Topp's tongue."

"Maybe," said I silkily, "but I have no fancy to be taught by a daft man." "Why not, if he knows something which you don't? Put your pride in the powder room, Jack, along with the other touchy explosives, and remember that every man on this earth has something to teach. At least, so I have found. The mummer chap from Stratford says that there are sermons in stocks and stones and good in everything."

"Where's the good in a Spaniard?" I asked slyly.

"To till land and build towns for her majesty's lieges some time to occupy and for the present to gather gold for you to plunder."

"Right!" said I. "Then let us set about the plundering. I tell you this profitless cruise must cease or there'll be powder burning within the walls of the fortress. The men's sulks will come to a head shortly if you don't give them a sop to their greed."

Alexander Ireland got up and paced the cabin, plucking at his short red beard in irritation.

"The devil seize you all for a set of unhung robbers!" he cried passionately. "Not one of you has a spark of true patriotism in him. From this spot I have destroyed vessel after vessel of the enemy, and withour losing a single man. And why? Because their crews have nothing to fight for. But intercept a rich plate ship and in one fight we may lose half our ship's company, and then it will be 'Hurrah for England, while yet the Scourge has men enough to sail her there.' Well, so be it. As my hounds will not hunt dry scented any longer I must flesh them."

"You speak confidently," said I, half scared at his vehemence, "as though you could point out the course of a fat prize without further search." "And so I can," he answered quietly,
