BURT MAYES, Chairman.
RICK MAYES, Secretary.

Gen. Wheeler is to succeed to Gen. Funston's command at Manila. This certainly indicates that the brigade will get very little time to rest.

Maryland's democratic candidate for governor is the president of a national bank. He is one of that list of national bank presidents which the sentiment of the Chicago 1896 convention indicated should be interred in their own vaults.

Behold how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell unitedly together! Gen. Miles thinks Secretary Root is all right, and Secretary Root thinks General Miles is the real thing, while the country thinks a great deal better of both of them for such "thinkers."

The election of John McLean, editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, who has been nominated for governor of Ohio, is out of the question. With Rough Riders Roosevelt and other republican leaders campaigning the state, it is doubtful if Mr. McLean will know that he is running.

Gen. Brooke has compiled a code of laws from the Spanish law for use in Cuba, so that the customs of the people may not be too suddenly changed. Never has Cuba had so good a government as she has today. Gen. Gomez says, "Cuba must not be in too great a hurry to govern herself."

The Iowa democrats specifically declare that "the war against Spain was right." In this they are decidedly at variance with the eastern anti-imperialists whose strong point of issue has been all along that the war against Spain was wrong. The western people are naturally expansionists. It is inbred in the westerner to believe in the ultimate greatness of the country and to think that the greatest blessing that could be given any region of the earth would be to find itself under the protecting folds of the stars and stripes.

If Victor Rosewater is as black as he is painted by the Omaha World-Herald, he is certainly a devil incarnate; if, on the other hand, he is as pure and innocent as he is represented to be by the Omaha Bee, then there are some horrible liars in Omaha. Meantime the dirty warfare between the two great dailies of the Nebraska metropolis is a most disgusting, nauseating affair, the like of which, carried on between country papers, would lead to both participants being run out of the community they sought to disgrace. The metropolitan sheets might secure a few points to their advantage on the question of how to make a fit paper to go into the homes, and on what constitutes morality and decency, from most any of their unpretentious country exchanges.

It is noted with pleasure that the two Norfolk candidates for sheriff have at last got together and formulated a plan whereby it is hoped to solve the difficult problem as to who shall be the choice of the Norfolk delegation before the republican county convention which meets at Battle Creek on Saturday, September 16. Whether the plan will be a success is as yet an open question, but following the spirit which actuates the candidates to go into an agreement for the sake of harmony, the delegates will without doubt reach a conclusion that will be satisfactory all around. The best feature of the agreement is the fact that it does away with a fight in the party, which would tend to weaken the support so that neither candidate could be elected should he be nominated. As the case now stands, the party will remain united and whichever candidate receives the nomination has a right to expect the full strength of his party to back him at the polls.

Now that Colonel Ingersoll is dead, the question arises: What, precisely, was the influence which he exerted upon the thought and feelings of his contemporaries, and what is the likelihood that the effect of his teachings, in his writings and lectures, will prove a lasting one? That is the subject to which Rev. Dr. Henry M. Field addresses himself in his article on "Ingersoll's Influence," in the September number of the North American Review. Dr. Field is singularly well qualified to deal with this topic, as he was not only an intimate personal friend of the great agnostic, but was the champion of the Christian faith in the most famous religious controversy in which Colonel Ingersoll's personal qualities, Dr. Field says:

"The more I became acquainted with Ingersoll, the more I was interested in his personality. He was not as other men are. The typical American is a bundle of nerves, which shows itself in his quick step, in the flash of his eye, and the gesture of his hand. When Thackeray was in New York, he would sometimes take his stand at the corner of a street to watch the passing crowd as a study in national character. Had he seen a man of stalwart frame walk slowly by he would have said there goes an Englishman! In all the years that I have known Ingersoll, I never saw him in a hurry. The crowd might rush by, but he never quickened his pace, but walked slowly as if in deep thought. When I met him in Broadway he was always ready to stop under an awning, or by a friendly door, and discuss the questions of the day. If all the wisdom that was exchanged between us had been preserved, possibly some might have been wiser, but alas, it has been blown away like the autumn leaves!"

"The two rods that Americans worship are time and money. Ingersoll cared for neither. Money had no attractions for him except for the use he could make of it. I am told by one who knew of his affairs, perhaps even better than Ingersoll himself, that his income from his practice at the bar and his lectures was often not less than a hundred thousand dollars a year, yet it was soon scattered. He could not deny himself the pleasure of giving it away. The tales of his generosity had gone far and wide, and every morning there was a pile of letters on his desk from poor clerks who were starving in garrets, and young women who could not find any means of support. To such appeals he responded so bountifully that they came faster and faster. His friends warned him against the impositions that were practiced upon him, and told him that he ought to have a bureau of inquiry, but he answered that he had rather be cheated a dozen times than leave one poor girl to suffer and perhaps to die!"

IOWANS TO RETURN SOON.

They Are Ordered to the Barracks at Calumet Preparatory to Starting Home.

MANILA, Sept. 7.—The Iowa regiment, the last of the volunteer organizations on duty in the island of Luzon, has been withdrawn from Calumet to barracks at Calumet preparatory to departing for home. The number who will sail is 806. Less than 300 of the regiment were left on duty at the front when the order came for their relief, 48 being on the sick list. This regiment has undergone hard outpost duty for three months, during which it has been very much exposed to the rains. Seventy-five members of the regiment have been enlisted. Although the Iowans participated in some of the fighting between Madolos and San Fernando, not one of them was killed in battle. Thirty-nine members of the regiment, however, were wounded and nine died of disease.
