The Diamonds of the Princess.

[Copyright, 1900, by Robert Bare.] "What about the diamonds of the princess?" asked Miss Baxter, her curiosity piqued by the remark of the editor. "That is rather a long story," replied

Mr. Hardwick, "and before I begin it I would like to ask you one or two questions. Can you manipulate a typewriter?"

"That depends on what make it is. The ordinary typewriter I understand very thoroughly.

"Good! Have you any knowledge of shorthand?"

"A workable knowledge. I can write about 100 words a minute. "Admirable, admirable! Your coming to this office was an inspiration. You are just the person I have been looking for.'

"You didn't seem to think so yesterday, Mr. Hardwick," said the girl, with a sly glance at him.

"Well, many things have happened since yesterday. We are now dealing with today and with Princess von Bteinheimer."

"She is a German princess, of COURSe ?"

"A German princess, but an American woman. She was a Miss Briggs of Chicago, a daughter of Briggs, the railway millionaire, worth somewhere between twenty and twenty-five millions -dollars, of course. A year or two ago she married Prince Konrad von Steinheimer. You may remember having read about it in the papers?"

"Oh, yes, the usual international match—the girl after the title, he after the money. "I suppose so; but, be that as it may, she was the only daughter of old Briggs and had spent a good deal of her time in Europe, and during her stay in Europe she had accumulated a vast stock of diamonds, some of them very notable stones. I don't know what the whole collection is worth; some say $1,000,-000, while others say double that amount. However that may be, Miss Briggs became the Princess von Steinheimer and brought to Austria with her $1,000,000 in gold and diamonds, which her father gave her as her dowry; but, of course, being an only child, she will come in for the rest of the money when the old man dies."

"Is he likely to die soon? I don't suppose the prince gave himself away for a mere million?'

"Oh, you forget the diamonds! As to the likelihood of old Briggs' death, it didn't strike me as imminent when I had a conversation with him yester-

"Yesterday? Is he here in London, then?"

"Yes; he has come over to disentangle the mystery about the diamonds." "And what is the mystery? You take dreadful long time to tell a story, Mr Hardwick."

"The story is important, and it must be told in detail; otherwise you may go on a long journey for nothing. Are you taking down what I say in shorthand? That is right, and if you are wise you will not transcribe your notes so that any one could read them; they are safer in that form. The Von Steinheimer family have two residences, a house in Vienna and an ancient castle in the Tyrol, situated on the heights above Meran, a most picturesque place, I understand, but very shortly you will know more about it than I do, because The Bugle expects you to go there as its special correspondent. Here the diamond robbery took place something like two months ago, and the affair is still as great a mystery as ever. The princess was to open the season at Meran, which is a fashionable resort, by giving a fancy dress ball in Schloss Steinheimer, to which all the Austrian and foreign notables were invited.

"It was just before the ball commenced that the diamonds were first missed. In fact, the princess was about to put them on -she represented some gorgeously decorated character from the 'Arabian Nights'-when the discovery was made that the diamonds were gone. Bhe was naturally very much upset over her loss and sent at once for the prince, her husband, insisting that the police should be notified immediately and detectives called in, as was perfectly natnral. Now, here comes a strange feature of the affair, and this is that the prince positively forbade any publicity and refused his sanction when she demanded that the police should be informed, and yet the prince knew as well as anybody the very considerable value of the stones.'

"What reason did he give for his refusal?" asked Miss Baxter, looking up from her notes. "I am not quite certain about that, but I think he said it was infra dig. for the Steinheimers to call in the police. Anyhow, it was an excuse which did not satisfy the princess, but as guests were arriving and it was desirable there should be no commotion to mar the occasion the princess temporarily yielded to the wish of her husband, and nothing was said about the robbery. The great ball was the talk of Meran for several days, and no one suspected the private trouble that was going on underneath the public event. During these several days the princess insisted that the aid of the police should be inwoked, and the prince was equally strennous that nothing should be said about the matter. Then, quite unexpectedly, the prince veered completely round and said he would engage the best detectives in Europe. Strange to say, when he annonnced this decision to his wife she had veered round also and opposed the calling in of the detectives as strenuously as he had done heretofore. "What reason did she give for her change of front?" asked Miss Jennie.

tot late; that the thieves, whoever they were, had had time to make away with their plunder, and there would merely be a fuse and worry for nothing."

"Do you know, I am inclined to agree with her," said the girl. "Are you? Then tell me what you pawned."

think of the case as far as you have "What do you think?"

"I shan't tell you at this stage, because I know of further particulars which I will give you later on. I merely want your opinion now, so that I you afterward modifies it in any way." "Well, to me the case looks decidedly dark against the prince."

"That is what Mr. Briggs thinks. He imagines his highness has the jewels." "Where did you get all these particulars?"

"From Mr. Briggs, who, of course, got them by letter from his daughter." "Then we have, as it were, a one sided statement."

"Oh, quite so, but still you must remember the princess does not in the least suspect her husband of the theft." "Well, please go on. What are the further particulars?" "The further particulars are that the prince made some quiet investigations among the servants, and he found that there was a man who, although he was a friend of his own, was much more the friend of the princess, and this man had, on the day the ball was given, the entire freedom of the castle. He is a young officer and nobleman, Lieutenant von Schaumberg, and the prince knew that this young man was being hard pressed for some debts of honor which he did not appear to be in a position to liquidate. The young man went unexpectedly to Vienna the day after the ball and on his return settled his obligations. The princess, from one of her women, got word of her husband's suspicion. She went to the prince at once and told him she had come to his own opinion with regard to the lost diamonds. She would under no circumstances have detectives about the place. Then he told her that he had changed his mind and resolved to engage detectives. So here they were at a deadlock again. She wrote to her father with great indignation about the prince's unjust suspicions, saying Von Schaumberg was a gentleman in every sense of the word. I gather that relations between herself and her husband are somewhat strained, so I imagine there is much more in this matter than the lost diamonds. "You think, then, that she is shielding the lieutenant?"

"Candidly, I do." "And you think he stole the dia-

"Yes, I do." "I don't agree with you. I think still it was the prince, and I think, besides this, that he dexterously managed to throw suspicion on the lieutenant. Have they called in the detectives yet?"

'No; they are still at a deadlock."

"Well, what am I expected to do?" "Mr. Briggs cabled to his daughter he never writes a letter—that he would come over and straighten out the tangle in 15 minutes. He is certain the prince stole the diamonds, but he did not tell his daughter so. He told her he was bringing her a present of a new typewriting machine and was bringing from Chicago a young woman who could write shorthand and would look after the princess' correspondence-act as secretary, in fact-for it seems the princess has a larger correspondence than she can reasonably attend to, and it seems she yearns for a typewriter. The old man tells me she is very careless about her letters, never being able to find anything she wants and leaving them about a good deal, so he thinks she needs some one to look after her correspondence, and it looks as if her father feared she might leave some compromising lettter about, so he wishes to ward off a divorce case."

"No; I think you are wrong there. The father basn't the slightest suspicion there could be anything wrong with his daughter. It is probable the princess has written some libelous statements about her husband, and it is quite likely the prince is a brute and that young Von Schaumberg is a most charming person." "Well, as I was saying." continued Hardwick, "the old man cables his daughter that he is bringing her a secretary and a typewriter. He engaged a female Pinkerton detective to enter the castle as secretary to the princess, and, if possible, to solve the mystery. She is a young woman who, when she left Chicago, was very anti-English, but she became acquainted on the steamer with a young Englishman who was tremendously taken with her, and so at Liverpool she quite calmly broke her engagement with the old man and fulfilled a new engagement she had made with the young man by promptly marrying him. Old Briggs has therefore a new typewriting machine on his hands, and so I was going to propose to you that you take the place of the Chicago Pinkerton person. Briggs has become so disgusted ed Smith. with all these detective women that he gave up the idea of sending a female detective with the machine and doesn't imagine that whoever is sent will be either a detective or a newspaper woman. I was introduced to him the other day by one of those lucky chances that sometimes put interesting items of news in our way, and he told me the whole story and asked me to recommend some one who wrote shorthand and understood the typewriter. I am to dine with him this evening, and I shall cordially recommend you. I may say that Brigge has gone to that celebrated London detective, Mr. Cadbury Taylor, and has engaged him to solve the diamond mystery. So, you see, you will have a clear field. If you can leave for the castle tomorrow night, you may have the pleasure of the company of Mr. Cadbury

Taylor. He isn't visiting the castle, but goes straight to Vienna; so, if you work your cards rightly, you can be in his

I know only this much about his theory, and that is, he thinks the right place to begin is in Vienna, where some, at least, of the stones are supposed to have been

"Ob, this is a delightful case, and I shall enjoy it. Has there been anything published yet about the robbery ?"

"Not a word. Nobody knows anything about it except the prince and princess, Briggs, myself and yourself and perhaps one or two of the servants may see whether what I have to tell in the castle-oh, yes, and Cadbury Taylor."

Mies Baxter was early at the station before the continental train left. She walked up and down the platform, hoping to see Mr. Cadbury Taylor, with whose face and form she was familiar. She secured a perter who spoke French and pretended to him that she knew no English.

The heavy package was a typewriter in its case. Shortly before the train left there sauntered into the station the tall. thin, well known form of the celebrated detective. He had on a light ulster that reached almost to his heels, and his keen, alert face was entirely without platform a short, stout man accosted

"I was afraid you were going to be late," said the detective's friend, "but I see you are just in time, as usual."

"A railway station," said Mr. Cadbury Taylor, "is not the most inspiring place in London for the spending of a spare half hour; besides, I had some facts to get together, which are now complete, and I'm quite ready to go, if the train is."

"I have secured a smoking compartment here, where we shall be alone." "That's right, Smith," said Cadbury Taylor. "You are always so thoughtful," and the two men entered the compartment together. Just as the guards were shouting, 'Take your seats, please!" Miss Baxter made a bolt for the compartment in which the detective and his friend sat together in opposite corners.

"I beg your pardon," said Smith; 'this is a smcking compartment."

The lady replied to him volubly in French, and next instant the porter heaved the typewriter and handbag on to blame the porter, but the man answered rapidly as he banged to the door, "The lady doesn't speak any English," and the next moment the train moved out of the station.

"There was no need," said the detective, "my dear Smith, to depend upon the porter for the information that the lady could not speak English. She is the secretary to a very rich employer in Chicago and came from that city to New York, where she sailed on the Servia alone, coming to England to transact some special business, of which I could here give you full particulars if it were worth while. She came from Liverpool to London over the Great Northern railway and is now on her way to Paris. All this, of course, is ob-we were entirely alone."

"Difficult? Oh, dear no! To tell the truth, I have solved it already; but in order to give the American a run for his money I am now on my way to Vienna. If I solved the problem offhand for him in London, he would have no more appreciation of my talent than you had a moment ago when I explained why I knew this French girl came from Chicago. My dear fellow, everything in this world is simple except one thing, and that is to find any problem that is difficult."

"Then who stole the diamonds—the lieutenant?"

School Teacher's Headache.

It's not a new variety of headache. It's the old pain consequent on conditions which result from study, confinement, and careless eating. It is, in fact, only one symptom of a derangement of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Take care of the stomach and the health will take care of itself, is an axiom. More diseases originate from a diseased condition of the stomach and its allied organs than from any other cause. If the stomach is foul every particle of food which passes through it must be fouled. But the food is the source of the blood supply and if the stomach fouls the food it must foul the blood. Then nerve and muscle, bone and brain which are nourished by blood must suffer the consequences. Sound health cannot be produced from Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, and so cures headache, heart "trouble," liver "trouble," and every other trouble which has its cause in a diseased condition of the stomach and the consequent impurity of the blood. "I was troubled with very frequent headaches, often accompanied by severe vomiting," writes Miss Mary Belle Summerton, of San Diego, Duval Co., Texas. "Bowels were irregular, and my stomach and liver seemed continually out of order. Often I could eat almost nothing, and sometimes absolutely nothing for almost nothing, and sometimes absolutely nothing for twenty-four hours at a time. I was entirely unfit for work, and my whole system seemed so run-down that I feared a severe sick spell and was very much discouraged. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and did so with such satisfactory results that before finishing the third bottle I felt perfectly able to undertake the duties attending public school life, and contracted to do so. I most heartily advise those sufferious with indirection and its attendy advise those suffering with indigestion, and its attendant evils, to give this great medicine a fair trial."
