The boast of heraldy, the pomp of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth

Awaits like th' inevitable hour—
The paths of glory lead but to the grave. —Thomas Gray.

And we, too, favor early shopping.

We are old-fashioned enough to believe that the mutilation of University property and petty thieving should be dealt with by the police department.

THE UNREADABLE

We could look forward with pleasure to Christmas but for an instinctive fear that old Santa will bring four or five gift books. Some of our friends are just careless—buying a book as they would a deck of cards. No harm here. The book can be used to fill up space in the bookcase.

But spare us from those who make us the victims of their literary hobbies. To us, perhaps, Edgar Allen Poe and his writings may be a nightmare, and we may have read enough of that great poet's ravings to convince us that we do not want to read any more. However, our friend doesn't know this, or perhaps he wishes to illumine our literary darkness, consequently, we are blessed with a de luxe edition of the Raven. No harm so far. But the next week, meeting our friend, we are asked to express our opinion of Poe's literary technique. Then comes the moral problem: whether 'tis better to four-flush and please him, or tell the truth and be rated as an ungrateful barbarian.

There are other friends who take advantage of the privileges of Yuletide to do missionary work. Dr. Fred Morrow Fling is sure of receiving a well-bound volume on "German Culture." Some one right now, having Lieutenant Parker in mind, is nosing around the bookshops looking for a book denouncing Roosevelt's theory of military preparedness. And, as for the editor, he is expecting a gift book with a title something like this: "The Y. M. C. A. as the Great Protector of University Morals."

The giving of books is a harmless habit by no means to be discouraged.

FLING ON CONDUCT

in some of the other great universities. As an example of such a school he cited the University of Virginia, where such a spirit forces those of questionable morals to get out. He stated that no such things could happen there which are happening here right along—such as stealing in the Gym locker rooms, copying of notes, stealing of rides on trains on football trips, and many other similar acts. The talk was wound up with a summary of these different things and the professor showed how they all pointed back to one big thing—a false standard of life.

Doctor Fling's talk was well received by the students, many of whom wondered if Doctor Fling could not give this kind of a talk some time in the near future to the whole school.

MAXEY HAS ARTICLE ON VENEZUELAN TROUBLE

Volume Twenty of "Great Events by Famous Historians" Contains Excellent Article by Dr. Maxey

Volume XX of "Great Events by Famous Historians," published by The National Alumni, contains an article by Dr. Edwin Maxey on "The Venezuelan Arbitration." It is written in the doctor's characteristically lucid style and is a clear, and able interpretation of the meaning of this event from both the political and the legal standpoints. The doctor says in part, on page 85: "As between sanctioning a rule that would encourage irresponsibility on the part of one class of states and one that tends toward tyranny on the part of another class, it seems to us that there is a middle ground—arbitration. This would at least be an equitable as well as a practical method of determining upon the validity and the amount of the claims; and, as for the enforcing of the award, the objection that the arbitration tribunal cannot compel payment seems to us to have more theoretical than practical force, inasmuch as solvent states would not, except in very rare cases, refuse to carry out the terms of the award—and as against insolvent states, even force is impotent." He then discusses the subject of "pacific blockade," which he says "is as much a contradiction in terms as would be 'friendly hostilities.'"

K. U. Advisor Would Have Less Fussing at University

"It is not good form for the women of the University to take too much attention from the men," said Mrs. Eustace Brown, advisor of women, before the women's mass meeting in Fraser Hall a few days ago. Mrs. Brown was speaking of the criticism, which she said was just of the feminism of the women of Kansas. "But the sin of too close relationship between men and women is greater than that of feminism. The women should not allow the men to waste so much time and money on them. The young men here are too much aware of the women's charms, and it is the duty of the women to help turn the attention of the men to other things."—Daily Kansan.

WATER SUPPLY AT LAWRENCE SHORT

City Engineer Supplying Substitute—Daily Kansan Finds Fault With Quality

There has been a scarcity of water on the campus at Kansas University for the last few weeks. The city engineer of Lawrence has now succeeded in furnishing plenty of water, but there is considerable complaint concerning the quality of the supply, which the Daily Kansan describes as "looking like castor oil and tasting worse." The water has been tested, however, and found to be neither impure nor harmful.
