EDITOR'S STATEMENT
WAS MISREPRESENTED

Staff Members Pictures Will Not be Printed Unless They Work—Subscription Campaign Soon

"A misrepresentation of the facts," is the way Business Manager Poteet of the Cornhusker characterized the article in the Nebraskan yesterday relative to the statement of Editor Samuelson. Mr. Samuelson was reported to have said that through carelessness on the part of the students the Cornhusker could not possibly be issued on the date announced.

What Mr. Samuelson really said was that those members of the staff who have not been working will not have their pictures included in the Cornhusker staff photograph, and that other persons would be appointed to the staff in their places.

But loading aides are not all that Mr. Samuelson has to contend with. A number of organizations have neglected to attend to the matter of snapshots. These snapshots were intended for the pages opposite the group photographs of the fraternities or sororities. Should not enough material be turned in before this evening or early enough tomorrow morning to catch the Omaha train, the pages will be run blank. In the event that pictures or space contracted by organizations or individuals is not paid at Townsend's by Friday night at 6 o'clock the pictures will not go in the book.

While not dismissing reporters and contradicting published stories, this disgruntled pair is making plans for the subscription campaign, which begins March 4.

Boy May Graduate From College at 15
Los Angeles, Cal.—When Raymond Ray walks into the class room at Hollywood high school tomorrow morning to take his seat with the sophomore class he will attract some attention. He is 9 years of age and perhaps the youngest high school sophomore in the world.

He is not a prodigy nor a phenomenon, but if he continues to progress as regularly as he has in the past he will enter college before he is 12, and may get his degree at 15. Raymond's mother was a school teacher and his father a clergyman.
