NEBRASKA SCHOLAR WORKS IN WAR ZONE

Weldon F. Crossland, Rhodes Scholar From Nebraska, Works in Military Camps of England

Weldon F. Crossland, one of the Rhodes scholars from Nebraska attending the Oxford University in England, is one of the many American students who have spent their winter vacations doing Y. M. C. A. work in the military camps of England. Mr. Crossland, while on duty, was six miles from Scarborough at the time of the German bombardment. At another time he was fifteen miles from a Zeppelin attack. The Nebraskan writes that he feels no danger in England and especially since most of the Zeppelin fleet has been destroyed. However, he says of late he has ceased making frequent journeys to the eastern coast of the islands. Mr. Crossland was graduated from the Nebraska Wesleyan University in 1913 and went to England the following October. His home is at Wayne, Nebr.

The Y. M. C. A. workers serve in the British army as second lieutenants. The experience is novel, for the men, many of whom are Americans, do not compromise their neutrality by being in his majesty's service nor do they incur the slightest risk.

The unusual army service was made possible by the enterprise of the association board of control in securing at the beginning of the war permission to place in many of the larger camps rest rooms, either tents or huts, for the benefit of members, and for service as a social center to the camp as a whole. The experiment was so successful that after an inspection by several members of parliament and of the British cabinet, it was determined to make the venture a special arm of the army service to accompany the army wherever it goes.

The good work which the Y. M. C. A. is doing cannot be overestimated. Many of the men before leaving camp for the front have been profuse in their thanks for the comforts which they had enjoyed. They are exceedingly appreciative of anything and everything that is done for them. As a rule they are good, clean fellows. Many in the army medical corps are college men, who would have no place of entertainment and no social life except what the saloon offers, were it not for the Y. M. C. A. Concerts and elocution entertainments are bi-weekly events which are anticipated with much pleasure, sometimes given by an obliging traveling company, often by the soldiers themselves. The officers are frequent attendants at these affairs. It is not difficult to become intimate with the "Tommy" who derives an inordinate pleasure from mimicking the American pronunciation and the nasal twang, which one acquires with a cold, and from a frequent repetition of the most amusing expression, "I guess."

Although there are inconveniences such as wading about in the mud, being drenched by the continual rains, and sleeping between damp blankets, all the Oxford men are enthusiastic over the work. Many will spend their spring vacation with the army while some will go to France.

JUNIOR PROM TO BE DINNER DANCE

Dinner to Start Promptly at Seven—Tickets for This Event Are Nearly Gone

Plans for the Junior Prom, the last of the University formals, are practically completed. The Prom is to be held March 6 in the Rosewilde Party House, and will commence promptly at seven o'clock.

The three-course menu prepared has been accepted by the committee, and Scott's orchestra will furnish several specialties during the meal.

Chairman Temple intimated, when interviewed yesterday, that several other surprises were in store for those who attended, but refused to disclose the nature of the plans.

The programs, though very simple, are said to be the classiest ones of the present season.

Clifford B. Scott, of Kosmet fame, and his nine-piece orchestra, will furnish the music for the dance.

Chairman Temple said yesterday that the sale of tickets was going with a rush and that they expected to have every ticket sold by the first of next week. He said also that while ninety-five tickets had been validated, only about eighty-five would be sold unless the demand was too great. This number will pay for the dance and yield a slight profit, and as the chairman says, "Our motto is, smaller profits and a better time."

Tickets are to be obtained from any of the committee or the book stores, and the price is three dollars, with a guarantee of a wonderful time issued with each ticket.

CLASS CHAMPIONSHIP SETTLED TONIGHT

Each Class Out to Win—Fellows to Be Escorted by Lady Friends—Dance After Games

The momentous question of the season will be settled tonight when the four class teams play for the girls' basketball championship.

When the practice season started the odds were in favor of the Sophomores, but the other classes have been diligently recruiting players from all over the campus and are going to put up a big fight throughout.

Dick Rutherford is to referee the games and promises not to be partial to the best looking team.

Unless a man is very meek looking he had better not appear unless accompanied by a feminine chaperone to get him past Ed Hugg at the door. But at the mixer dance afterward any student who can produce the price of admission will be allowed.

During the dancing refreshments will be served in the chapel.

The program follows:

The following officers were elected for the semester from nominations by a committee which made its selections on the basis of ability and interest in the work of the club during the first semester: President, Koupal; vice-president, Loomis; secretary, Bintz; treasurer, Wilson.

Mr. Sanderson commenced his talk by comparing the situation in the average business enterprise at present to a sponge of capital dipped into the tank of business and then squeezed for a few drops of profit. He said in part: Business is now down on a solid foundation, unlike the times when barter was the custom in the exchange of goods. Value in merchandise is now demanded; continued success must be founded on honesty.

Mr. Sanderson considers the secret of success as: Drudgery, i. e., doing one thing after another long after it has ceased to be amusing. Deal courteously with all, and keep persistently at it will eventually bring success.
