REDS WIN BATTLE

other, and with the arrival of the Second battalion on the Blue center, every trooper was in action. Firing was the heaviest on the enemy's right flank and center.

At the end of an hour, when the battle was declared over, the Reds were found concentrated at the Blue's flanks, with the Third battalion formed to turn the left flank. Within this time two companies of Blue troops and one company of Reds had been ruled out.

The success of the Red forces was due in great part to their speed in getting to positions, the two flank attacks led by Majors Allison and Harley, and to superior scouting on the part of the town regiment. In only one instance did the advance guard of the Red regiment fail to keep their companions informed, and that was on the enemy's left flank. Scouts had been deployed far to the east and had signaled the position of the main body of Blue forces. Soon after several Blue companies formed a skirmish line opposite the position later assumed by the Third battalion of the town regiment. This made almost impossible their return to ranks, and, with signalling out of the question, the scout squad was compelled to carefully pick their way around the enemy's flank, often in plain view, across the open country which lies to the south of the defended hills, to the Third battalion. The condition of the Blue skirmish line was reported, and the battalion was on the point of rushing the position when the entire skirmish line in front of the enemy's flank was ruled out. Had the scouts succeeded in communicating with the Third battalion immediately upon the deployment of the Blue companies to the left, the flank could probably have been turned with ease.

The problem, as presented to the colonels of the Farm and town regiments, was as follows:

General Situation: The Reds and the Blues are at war. The Red force has succeeded in capturing extensive subsistence supplies in Lincoln. The commander of the Red force has ordered these stores to be moved to Omaha by wagon road, via Belmont-Raymond-Valparaiso-Wahoo road.

Special Situation: Blue—The commander of the Blue army receives the information at 2 p. m. that the Red army is moving supplies from Lincoln to Omaha via the Belmont road. The Blue regiment, under Col. T. L. Carver, has been ordered to proceed to Belmont, take up defensive position there and prevent the movement of supply trains belonging to the Red army.

Red—The commander of the Red army has directed Col. W. K. Fowler, with the University regiment, to protect the movement of the wagon trains by proceeding to Belmont and driving off the small force believed to be holding the hills there.

Last year, in a similar problem, the Farm regiment was given the decision before many of the University companies could even open fire. The Reds made the fatal mistake of trying to cross the open country to the south of the hills. Only three companies succeeded in getting a chance to use their ammunition, the remaining companies being ruled out before reaching the skirmish line. The entire Red regiment got into action this year and practically all the ammunition was consumed.

Adjutant General P. L. Hall acted as chief umpire of yesterday's maneuvers. Major J. M. Birkner of the Nebraska National Guards, and Captain R. L. Hamilton of the U. S. Army accompanied the Red regiment as umpires of their maneuvers; Lieutenant W. C. Stoll, U. S. Army, and Captain H. F. Kramer, Nebraska National Guard, were the umpires with the Blues.

The annual assembly, parade and inspection which precedes the regular government inspection will be held on the Athletic Field this afternoon at four o'clock. Lieutenant Sam M. Parker, commandant of cadets, will act as inspecting officer. The program will consist of the regiment—including the cadet band—on parade, drill on the field, and inspection. It is particularly important that the events be well staged, for it is, in short, a rehearsal for government inspection a week from tomorrow. With the purpose in mind of inspiring every cadet to adopt his most soldierly attitude and perform to the best of his ability, co-eds are urged to fill the north stands this afternoon.

A private of the Awkward squad, Company B, First Battalion, narrowly escaped arrest yesterday when he left ranks near the Tenth street viaduct and went into a grocery store to quench his thirst with a bottle of Fremont pop. According to the cadet, the trouble was due to a misunderstanding. He had asked the clerk to give a soldier, parched and weary in fighting for the fatherland, a bottle of that particular beverage. The clerk, thinking his request a desire to purchase, opened a bottle and set it before the soldier lad. The bottle was soon emptied and the cadet started to leave, but was intercepted by the clerk, who urgently demanded payment and threatened arrest if immediate settlement were not made. The cadet, attired in uniform as he was, stuck his hands in penniless pockets and tried to argue amicably with the man, appealing first to his patriotism, and finally to his pity, giving him the while a graphic illustration of his bankrupt state by repeatedly turning his pockets inside out. The situation was robbed of a dramatic climax by the arrival of two or three other likewise deserters, likewise thirsty cadets, who by a vagary of fate, had an extra nickle in their pockets.
