CO. B WINS COMPETITION

RETRIEVES HERSELF FOR LAST YEAR BY PLACING FIRST

ELLIS IS INDIVIDUAL SOLDIER

Companies G and D Place Second and Third—Wet Weather Mars the Cadets' Work—Shirt Tail Parade Last Night

Company B, S. K. Clark, Eng. '16, Council Bluffs, Ia., captain, rising from last place last year, won the annual competitive company drill yesterday afternoon on the athletic field. Cally Ellis, A. S. '17, Beaver City, Company A, won first, and Philip Warner, A. S. '17, Lincoln, Company B, won second in the individual competition.

An account of the muddy field most of the extended order work had to be cut out and finally, as the rain increased, the regimental review in charge of the newly appointed officers had to be abandoned. In the absence of the Chancellor, Dean O. V. P. Stout, a brisk shower to present the prizes. Captain Clark received the Omaha cup and the first and second individual winners received silver cups.

According to one of Nebraska's most cherished traditions, the winning company led the cadets in their annual Shirt Tail Parade last night. A large body of cadets were out and the drizzling rain only instilled more "pep" into them. They visited all of the theaters, many of the drug stores, ice cream parlors, and hotels. There was some complaint of roughness and petty "lifting," but those in charge attributed a large part of this to a number of persons who were not students that joined the line. In one drug store one man was found with a thermometer and another with a box of candy; neither of these men were students.

The following is a list of the companies in the cadet regiment in the order of their standing in competitive drill:

- Company B—S. K. Clark, captain; G. K. Petring, 1st lieutenant; Anne Wilson, sponsor.
- Company G—H. G. Hewitt, captain; R. C. L. Greer, 1st lieutenant; Sarah Thurman, sponsor.

CHI OMEGA SORORITY OFFER ANNUAL PRIZE

Twenty-Five Dollars Offered to Encourage Women in Undertaking Social Betterment Work

The Chi Omega sorority offers an annual prize of twenty-five dollars for the purpose of encouraging women students to prepare themselves for usefulness in social betterment activities. In awarding the prize consideration is given to the number of courses taken in sociology, political science, and economics, the scholarship record, and the ability displayed in the investigation of social questions. This year the prize was awarded to Miss Norma Carson, who has made an excellent record in many social science courses and has also completed two pieces of research work, one dealing with "The Enforcement of the Nebraska Mother's Pension Law" and the other with "The Welfare Activities of Police Courts." The prize was presented at a meeting of the sorority held on Thursday evening. Miss Carson explained briefly the scope of her studies and told of some of the interesting results of her original investigations.

REGENT SPOKE TO THE BANKING CLASS

Dr. P. L. Hall, President of the Central National Bank, Spoke Concerning "Practical Banking"

Dr. P. L. Hall, one of the University Regents, and the president of the Central National Bank of Lincoln, spoke Thursday morning to Mrs. England's class in Practical Banking, his subject being "Banking Practice." Doctor Hall at one time practiced medicine, but was forced to give up this profession on account of his health. He then went into the banking business, first into a country bank for fourteen years, and then into the Lincoln bank, where he has been for the past sixteen years. He was a member of the committee which recently organized the Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank.

Doctor Hall explained the various departments of a bank and the duties of the employees, emphasizing particularly the responsibility and nervous strain under which the paying teller works. This teller must immediately size up the numerous strangers who appear with checks in order to determine whether payment shall be made or identification required.

Doctor Hall spoke of the soundness of the Nebraska State Banking Law, and said that the strength developed under the National Banking System in the short period of fifty years had been the astonishment of Europe. He

Y.W.C.A. CONFERENCE

WESTERN STUDENT Y. W. C. A. CONFERENCE

DELEGATES AT ESTES PARK

Three Hundred Members Will Camp for Ten Days in the Park the Latter Part of August

The Western Student Conference of the Young Women's Christian Association will be held in Estes Park, Colorado, August 24th to September 3rd. The conference this year is exceedingly important because of the present war abroad, for during the period of reconstruction there will be many great opportunities for the Y. W. C. A. women.

The Western Student Conference is under the auspices of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association of the United States, and for ten days over three hundred students will work and plan together toward the days when these very students will be leaders in the world outside the college. The college days are full of appeals and presentations of so many kinds of work, and this is especially true this year, that college women will welcome a chance to go away for a few days and take time to think through some of these problems, that they may be able in a better way to face many of the issues that are before them today.

The Western district includes Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, Kansas, South Dakota, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas.

Many good speakers are scheduled to take part. Prof. Wm. J. Hutchins of Oberlin, Ohio, will deliver a series of addresses. Other speakers will be Bishop Theodore Payne Thurston, Miss Oolooah Burner, Miss Edith M. Dabb, and Rev. W. W. Ranney.

Students Protest

The students of the Wesleyan University at Mitchell, South Dakota, adopted resolutions protesting against saloons in that city, and state that the attendance of the institution would be greatly increased if there were no saloons. They feel that many parents object to sending their children to a wet town. It is estimated that fifteen new students would bring to Mitchell as much money as is now received from saloon licenses, and this would be new money, not simply that taken from her citizens and turned over by the saloons.

Last Issue Monday

The last issue of the Daily Nebraskan for the school year will be issued Monday. Any news or notices for that issue must be in by Saturday at two o'clock.

said that although it is too early to pass upon the success of the new Federal Reserve System, it is hoped that it will aid materially in building up in this country the strongest banking system in the world. Western bankers are strongly opposing the entire abolition of exchange charges on out-of-town checks because they feel it is a just charge for services rendered, particularly when the exchange takes place between this section of the country and the seaboard district.

The evening was spent in a review of the year's work. Each play that was presented during the year, was represented in a medley in which the different casts presented various scenes from various plays. A prize was awarded for the best presentation. This was won by the cast of "Der Neffe als Onkel" and was left with the club to be contested for in the years to come.

The installation of the new officers for next year was conducted by Professor Alexis.

A feature of the evening was a presentation by Mr. Stanley in behalf of the Seniors of the club. A beautiful Japanese bronze vase was presented to the coach, Miss Heppner, as a token of the club's appreciation and esteem.

"THE SUNKEN BELL"

GERMAN PLAY BY GERHART HAUPTMANN

GRUMMANN REVIEWED PLAY

Senior Play Friday Night—Professor Grumann Spoke of the Moral of the Play and the Character of the Hero Which is a Key to the Play

Prof. P. H. Grumann spoke at Convocation yesterday on "The Sunken Bell," by the renowned German writer, Gerhart Hauptmann, which is to be presented by the Senior class June 4.

In the first part of his address Professor Grumann reviewed and explained the scenes of the story. The latter part was confined to an interpretation of the character of Heinrich, which is in reality an interpretation of the moral of the play. This analysis will enable those who attend the play to better understand and appreciate it. Professor Grumann said in part:

"The analysis of Heinrich's character is not an easy task. Possibly the safest approach to this problem is to review the main interpretations that have been made."

The most childish interpretation is the one that attacks Heinrich on moral grounds. Remember, that the real Heinrich never forsakes Magda, for the play is the dying vision of Heinrich. Not even in his dream does Heinrich forsake Magda for another woman. He leaves her and his children to pursue his ideal, the ideal of his profession. It must be remembered that he has such an exalted view of his profession that he believes that his great work will free man and nature from the curse that rests upon them. This is in full harmony with our plainest conceptions of duty. If a man is justified in leaving his family to save his country, he would find some justification in leaving it to save all mankind.

It must also be remembered that Heinrich's relation to Rautendelein is absolutely pure. Hauptmann exhausts all of his powers in emphasizing this. The water sprite and the faun pursue Rautendelein with evil purposes. They accuse Heinrich of an improper attitude, but both Heinrich and Rautendelein resent the imputation.

This problem is as old as art itself. The really great artist as a rule is not a moral degenerate. When he studies the nude, it is with a purpose not altogether unlike that of the zoologist. The people about him frequently think that he has a base interest, but this only stamps the people and not the artist. The baseness of the water sprite and the wood sprite by contrast show the innate purity of Heinrich. Even in his dream he pursues Rautendelein only as a means toward perfection in his art.

From this interpretation many turned to the opposite mistake of making Heinrich a hero and excusing and glorifying all that he did. This is fully as bad as the other extreme and is certainly not the intention of the poet.

It is perfectly clear that Heinrich was not a great man; if he had been, he could not have had a dying vision that revealed so much weakness. There is no truer index of our character than our dreams. While it is true that we do not perpetrate all that
