MANY PRE-MEDICS MEET NEW DEAN

ABOUT SEVENTY-FIVE ON HAND FOR FIRST SMOKER

DR. CUTTER IS MAIN SPEAKER

Blue Prints of New College of Medicine Exhibited—Many Professors Present—Nebraska's High Medical Rating Commented On

Seventy-five Pre-medics attended the smoker at the Alpha Sigma Phi house Monday evening, at which the principal speaker was Dr. Irving Cutter, of Omaha, Dean of the College of Medicine, who showed the blue print plans of the new University hospital, which will be built on the Omaha campus. Dr. R. A. Lyman, advisor of the Pre-medics, L. L. Lynch, '15, Prof. Franklin D. Barker, Paul Fouts, '17, Dr. Robert Wolcott, Prof. Benton Dales, Prof. Raymond J. Pool, Carlisle Jones, '18, Prof. C. J. Frankforter, Prof. G. E. Lewis and Dr. A. E. Jonann, also spoke. Wallace Gerrie, '18, of Omaha, presided.

Dr. Cutter, the new Dean of Medicine, spoke of Nebraska's high medical rating and the exceptional advantages of the students in theoretical and practical training. Then he showed the blue print plans of the new University hospital, which will be built on the Omaha campus.

This hospital will be one of the most modern in the United States. Only five universities in America have their own hospitals in which the students can work freely. The hospital will have 114 beds. A very complete set of operating rooms will be open for the Nebraska "medics" by the spring of 1917.

The plans have been made and bids for the building will be open some time next week. The building has been so completely arranged that it will not have to be torn down and rebuilt, as has been the case with so many of the modern hospitals.

Francis Whitmore, '17, spent Sunday at her home in Valley.

SPIRITUAL LIFE IS DR. FLING'S SUBJECT

CULTURAL OPPORTUNITIES OF LIFE EMPHASIZED

CRITICISES CHEAP VAUDEVILLE

The Third in the Series of "Know the University"—Convocation Was Held in Art Hall—Text of the Speech Follows

Dr. Fred M. Fling spoke on "Cultural Opportunities" at convocation yesterday in Art hall, the third of the "Know the University" convocations.

Dr. Fling emphasized the spiritual side of life as against the physical and materialistic. He plead for the development of the finer qualities of life, for the cultivation of an aesthetic sense, for a greater generalization of the true worth of the soul. Material things soon decay, but the spirit is eternal. He demanded that the students view life in its true and logical perspective. The world is influenced and led by men with high ideals. Students who devote themselves exclusively to the materialistic side of life have very little chance of becoming such leaders.

After he had established the necessity of the cultivation of the aesthetic side of our life, Dr. Fling pointed out what numberless cultural opportunities there really are. Literature, music, painting, history, religion, the drama, art in all its varied forms—all these cultural opportunities are within easy reach of the University student.

The speaker said in part: "You may look at life from two points of view; you may look at life from the physical point, or you may look at life from the spiritual point. If there is anything that is worth anything, in the last analysis, it is the soul. The central thing of all is the spiritual life; all other things are secondary. The most important thing is the cultivation of this spirit, and vigorously and rigorously to shape our life in accordance with it. Conquest of space is only important when it enables us to accomplish something in the spiritual world.

"Life ought to be purposeful. Some people never think seriously of life until they look upon the dead face of someone who stood close to them. Religion, at bottom, is not a thing of intellect; it is a thing of emotion.

The speaker rated people who "go to a great play and who come away less satisfied than if they had gone to some cheap vaudeville. If you prefer rag-time to classical music, the trouble isn't with the music; the trouble is with you."

In conclusion, Dr. Fling impressed upon the students the necessity of "seeing life in a larger way," quoting from "The Chambered Nautilus," the well known line, "Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul . . ."

Some of the agencies for service are the Charity Organization, the Juvenile Court and the Detention Home, in connection with which it is to be remembered that in Social Service the preventive method is used just as much as the corrective.

COACH IS SILENT ON THE SUBJECT

HAS NOTHING PARTICULAR TO SAY ABOUT COMING FRAY

OLD STARS ANSWERING CALL

Flock to Lincoln to Help in Drilling Huskers—Loss of Shaw Keenly Felt—Eckersall to Referee the Game with Notre Dame

Nebraska faces her first crucial battle Saturday, when she meets Notre Dame on Nebraska field. In answer to Coach Stiehms' call, old stars are flocking back to Lincoln to assist in the work of preparing the Huskers for the coming contest, the varsity are being drilled and exhorted behind closed gates at every practice period.

Coach Stiehms is omniously silent regarding Nebraska's chances against the Catholics. The loss of Shaw makes necessary the training of a new man for one tackle position, taking up time which should be devoted toward perfecting maneuvers for the entertainment of the Catholic eleven. And although the work of the team against Washburn last Saturday showed improved form, it is not at the point of development by any means at which the Michigan Aggies found the Huskers of a year ago.

With the announcement of officials for the game Saturday comes the information that Eckersall, Windy City authority on western football, will be the chief judge of the proceedings. This will give him a chance to see both Notre Dame and Nebraska going at good speed, and will probably determine one or two berths on his mythical eleven for the year. Eckersall hasn't expressed his opinion on the probable outcome of Saturday's game yet, although he will probably deliver his dictum before he takes a train for Lincoln. Opinion among the Chicago sport writers generally seems to be on the Catholic side of the argument, although the Herald picks Nebraska as her choice.
