COMMON SENSE

Is not the question fairly presented as our Congressman Hon. C. F. Reavis presents it, when he asks what we would do in case of war, with only three times as many trained soldiers as New York city has policemen? Is it not well to look at the sensible side of a proposition occasionally? It is not that we want war, but because we do not want to be caught napping, that we argue thus.

Are you now a member of the Girls' club? If not, why?

BE LOYAL

Are you planning on making yourself a part of the football team "send-off" parade to be held next Friday afternoon? Can you stand near at hand, and, with a clear conscience, watch the team, your team, go by escorted by your fellow classmen? Surely not. Be one of the first to show your loyalty to your team, one of the best in the university and college world.

Don't gossip. Perhaps someone is saying something just as bad about you and your associates or organization and by the time it reaches you it will have been greatly exaggerated. Think of some of the evil effects of this detestable habit. Remember that the people out in the state get the exaggerated story.

"The man who is to create for America a great religion must be a great man, and this religion must be expressed through a great people in their daily work." It is safe to say that he will not be a contortionistic whirlwind.

CYCLONES HOLD ALTRUISTIC VIEW
FORGET THEMSELVES IN ANXIETY TO ENTERTAIN NEBRASKA
FIGHT HUSKERS HARDEST
Have Habit of Putting Up Stiffest Battle of Any Conference Rival—Stiehm Putting Men Through Stiff Practices

While a goodly number of Husker fans are revivng sanguinely the decisive defeat of Ames at the hands of Minnesota early in the season and the Cyclones' indifferent battle with Missouri Saturday, students at the Iowa school are strangely silent, conveying by their attitude the impression that the whole truth is not yet out.

There are others who look at the situation in a different light than the confident Husker fan. Coach Jumbo Stiehm has no intention of letting early season defeats no under-cover victories lead to over-confidence on the part of Nebraska in the coming battle with the Aggies. And beginning with last night the Huskers are being put through the stiffest kind of preparation for the third valley game of the season.

The Altruistic Cyclones

There is something altruistic about the way the Cyclones go to any amount of trouble to make the Huskers fully aware of their existence. During the last four years Ames has had a poor team, an average team and a couple of very good ones, but in every game with Nebraska during these years the Cyclones have given her the hardest battle of any conference rival; and they have led at the end of the first half in every one of these struggles. It is a confirmed habit with them to put up by far their best fight against Nebraska, and whether they have an especially formidable eleven or not doesn't seem to make much difference. But this year, despite what the dope may indicate, Ames has the makings of an especially formidable aggregation, and they have a mentor with the reputation of winning teams behind him to make the most of the material.

Where "Dope" Falls Down

The defeat by Minnesota and the victory over Missouri fail to give any definite line on the strength of the Iowa farmers. Ames was as good as defeated when they arrived in the Twin Cities; as to the decisiveness of their defeat, a detailed account of the game will show that Ames had the punch to cross the Gopher line, and that not after the lineup was filled with substitutes. Another interesting sidelight on the Minnesota contest is the fact that it was Solon, and not so much Minnesota, that spelled defeat for the Cyclones.

Ames was obviously indifferent in her battle with Missouri Saturday, and took care that the lid was kept tightly closed on what the Cyclones can do when they have to. It is possible, too, that the rejuvenated Missouri eleven furnished stiffer opposition than Coach Mayser had prepared for.

No Illusion About Huskers

The Cyclones will have Nebraska in their own town Saturday, and they are making preparations to entertain them with all they have in the football line. The Mayser men have no illusions about what they are going up against when they meet the Huskers, and if Nebraska succeeds in safely disposing of the Cyclones, she can look more optimistically toward a fifth Missouri Valley championship.
