VARSITY DEBATERS PICKED

E. C. Carr, the negative speaker, pointed out the distinction between conditions in Europe before the war and the present conditions in this country. Also of the improbability of war with Great Britain, holding graver questions had been settled without war; Germany, at present, cannot attack us and after the war they will not be able. Statements by men acquainted with the conditions in Japan, contend there is little danger from that source.

S. C. Zimmerman dwelt on possibilities of a war at the present. "What if we meet a nation that wishes to settle the question by force?" The Monroe doctrine will cause war with the first nation that thinks more of colonizing South America than they do war with the United States. He also stated that it took two months to get 17,000 volunteers together in the Spanish American war.

Guy C. Chambers dwelt on the uselessness of abandoning the old, long used doctrine of small armament. No present danger of war as there is no fit opponent. Our diplomatic prestige already recognized.

G. E. Grimes mentioned that for weeks last summer peace with Germany hung in the balance.

C. M. Frey pointed out the need of trained soldiers and how 7,000 volunteers were defending Washington when the enemy burned the capitol.

H. J. Schwab said "that the state militiaman who shoulders a gun once a month is not a trained soldier."

E. D. Kiddoo, contended that even though we were conquered that no nation could hold us. England failed when we were a great deal smaller.

A. C. Swenson showed the necessity for protection of the right of American citizens abroad; already over 100 lives have been destroyed by one nation. Force is necessary for their protection.

Robert Waring dwelt on the improbability of war, of how long periods of peace follow great wars.

C. L. Polk mentioned that our entire army would be necessary to dig seventy-five miles of trench. We have only on mine laying ship, and our whole navy is sadly lacking.

C. E. Scofield dwelt on the uselessness of the Monroe doctrine, holding that it had outlived its usefulness.

A fairly good crowd heard the try-outs, and the number that took notes is evidence that the subject is claiming much interest.

KANSAS OBJECTS TO TRIP

Considered Joy Killers in Their Action—Drake and Ames Seem Favorable

"Lawrence, Kas., Nov. 17.—S. Avery, chancellor, University of Nebraska. We should like very much to accommodate Nebraska, but feel that any exception to such rules is unwise, and that either the rule should be rescinded or completely lived up to. We feel also that no action should be taken except at a meeting of the conference after full discussion. Frank Strong, Chancellor, University of Kansas."

The above message puts Kansas in the ranks of the valley schools opposed to a Nebraska trip to Pasadena to meet some western team on New Year's day. Missouri is also opposed, while Drake and Ames have favored the plan. Washington and Kansas Agricultural schools are to be heard from.

Messages thus far received are printed on the sport page of this evening's News.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL STARTS

Seventy-Five Expect to Take Part—Freshmen Have Old High School Stars

Basketball has now taken the place of field hockey in the girls' gymnasium and seventy-five girls have announced their intentions of taking part in the sport. Practice has started with a spirit that anticipates an exciting inter-class tournament at the end of the season.

For four years inter-class basketball has absorbed most of the girls' gymnasium hours between Thanksgiving and February. The present Senior class has won two championships and the other was won by the present Junior class. Competition runs high for the title this year. Rumor has it that the Freshmen have several high school stars to contest for their team.
