TEACH YOUR FRIEND HOW TO SLIDE

tion from an evening spent at home learning Browning's "The Ring and the Book." The skating rink will be open day and night, which may attract part of the University crowd away from the moving picture shows and cause them to become hostile to the interests of the University, but authorities agree that it is better for the youths and maidens to spend the evenings out of doors refreshing themselves with good, honest health restoring exercise than to go home feeling "rheumatiky" from a two hours' show with a buzzy feeling before their eyes and a feeling of pity in their hearts for the poor hero who didn't marry the girl after all.

The encouragement of skating at Christmas time will also add a new present to the possible list, and any young lady who wishes to please her gentleman friend might present him with a brand new $15 pair of non-slipable, unfallable, infallible skates, guaranteed to fit any foot and last until the first of February with the right kind of care.

Ten cents admission will be charged in order to make it self-supporting and the pond will cover practically all of the athletic field. The promoters of this project expect some fast hockey teams to be developed soon and if it pans out well, they make skating the University sport all the year round.

Seats in the bleachers will cost nothing above the regular price and the management will not be responsible for frozen ears and teeth. A full report of the details of the new undertaking will be printed in full in a few days.
