WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1916

Tomorrow, before the next issue of the Daily Nebraskan is in your hands, you will have in mind those of the staff candidates you will select as our successors. You have known of these candidates for some time and the choice of those most proficient lies in your hands and you alone will be to blame if you are disappointed later. Cast an intelligent ballot.

The Board of Regents meet tonight to decide whether the agreement Coach Stiehm made with the Athletic Board when he handed in his resignation shall be ratified, or whether a new agreement, possibly entailing a much large cut from his salary, will be entered into. There is little doubt but what the board will make a satisfactory settlement with the coach.

The meeting was called as a direct result of agitation, coming from downtown, protesting the payment of his salary according to terms agreed upon by Mr. Stiehm and the Athletic Board. It is claimed that he should be paid by the calendar, that since he has put in a third of the time his contract calls for, he should receive but a third of his salary.

The Nebraskan believes that if full justice is accorded Mr. Stiehm, the Board of Regents will do more than ratify the Athletic Board's agreement; they will grant the coach his full salary up to September 1, 1916. In the face of the criticism which has been thrown at him, and in consideration of the fact that his heart is in Indiana rather than with us now, the ratification of Mr. Stiehm's resignation should be made by the Board. But in making it neither precedent nor fairness justify a greater slash into his salary than he himself offered to make when he handed in his resignation. When a professor—and the Director of Athletics is also a Professor of Athletics—announces that he has agreed to go to another university upon the completion of his contract here, the authorities always grant him a leave of absence up to the time when his contract expires, but they never have as yet docked a member of the faculty's salary simply because his usefulness as far as Nebraska was concerned, was at an end. The establishment of a precedent that justifies such treatment would hardly be in keeping with the past attitude of the authorities. Why should the Professor of Athletics be made an exception?

A demand that Mr. Stiehm be paid by the calendar is in itself unfair. The coach was hired for his ability to turn out good football teams. Basketball is a minor issue. It is claimed that he should receive but a third of his salary, but the four months for which he would be paid include the time devoted to producing the best football team Nebraska has ever had. By a fair salary schedule, Coach Stiehm has earned his full pay. "Bummy" Booth, in the days of short-time coaching, received as high as $1,000 for one month's work. It costs more to get a coach now than it did then. If Nebraska should attempt to hire a man for the football season alone, it is doubtful if she could get one for much less than the salary she is paying Mr. Stiehm for the full year.

The Nebraska coach has resigned in face of the criticism he has met on almost every side ever since he jumped to Indiana. In asking to be immediately released from his contract he has offered to relinquish claim to 300 of his pay for what work he would do in the spring and summer. But why shouldn't he be accorded the same treatment as any other member of the faculty, especially since he has more than earned his money by turning out the most logical claimant of the western football championship?—I. G. B.

Change in Registration

A meeting of the Teachers' College Faculty decided that students would be registered in the Teachers' College in their Sophomore year instead of in their Junior year as heretofore. Two committees were also appointed, one of which is to investigate the requirements for teachers' certificates and diplomas in the leading universities in the country; the other is to work out a scheme for simplifying the whole course of study in the Teachers' College.

Hansen Speaks on Efficiency

Niels Hansen, '16, former member of the Board of Examiners of state pharmacy examinations, talked to the Pharmaceutical Society Monday evening on "Efficiency." He stated that a man could not expect to be 100 per cent efficient after he was out in the world, if he was only 65 per cent efficient in college.

A MAN'S house is his castle, an' his pipe's a strong defense to keep trouble an' gloom on the outside.
