THE PENDING TREATY WITH COLOMBIA

Are We Trespassers in the Zone?

But the present administration, which is now urging the ratification of this treaty, does not really believe in the theory of guilty co-operation on the part of the United States, or anyone in an official position to represent the United States. For if it did, the present treaty becomes a mere subterfuge, and far from being generous, it does not right a moiety of the wrongs which the United States has inflicted upon Colombia. Under this theory, the treaty with Panama is no justification for our possession of the Canal Zone, we are without title or color of title, but by reason of the fraud are trespassers and have no right to the improvements which we have placed there. This is a well-known principle of English and American law and was recognized by the supreme court of the United States in Kutter v. Smith, 2 Wall., 491. The canal having been built on Colombian soil by a wilful trespasser belongs to Colombia and not to the United States, as those not parties to the plot had all along supposed. Though restitution would be at this stage disappointing, it would be a legal duty, if the United States conspired with Panama to oust Colombia from her rightful possession of the Isthmus.

The present administration is not, however, prepared to admit any facts which will involve the United States to such a degree or smirch a preceding administration to such an extent. And fortunately such facts do not exist. The administration appears, however, to be willing that "in order to satisfy the sense of justice of Colombia," the United States should be mulcted moderately and that a preceding administration shall be smirched gently. The offer to Colombia to arbitrate the whole controversy is not
