STUDENTS PRONE TO USE HARMFUL DRUG, ASSERTS DR. LEACH

Representative of Association Reveals Alarming Employment of Bromo Seltzer

Students are prone to use bromo seltzer, which is in effect a habit-forming drug, according to Dr. Paul N. Leach, of the American Medical association, who lectured last night in the Harper assembly room. Dr. Leach discussed the harmful ingredients in most of the proprietary medicines now on the market and the immense profit often made by the manufacturers.

"Acetanilid is a harmful part of the bromo seltzer compound," said Dr. Leach, "and its effects are similar to opium and phenacetin, which also are used in patent medicines. Only a weak character would need the habitual bracer offered by these nostrums, anyway. Bromo quinine is another fraud and really does not cure a cold. Simple Home Remedies "Simple home remedies often are of value, but one should be sure that they are simple and also what the causes of the illness being treated. No one can diagnose his own case successfully. Even if a proprietary medicine were of value what good would it do to take it for a disease if one were not certain of the disease."—Daily Maroon.

THE POWER TO THINK

President Charles F. Thwing, of Western Reserve university, when asked what should be the chief emphasis placed upon college education, said:

"There are two things in American college life which should, at the present time, receive special emphasis. The first is the power to think, the second is the power to work hard. We are learning much in these times. The accumulations of knowledge are immense. But knowledge is not thinking, any more than it is power. Out of these acquisitions, even through the very power of making them, we ought to reach the precious power of thinking. American life demands a thinker. The man who can think in cubical relations is the man who is demanded at the present time."

Right here is where President Thwing has struck at the prime fault of college men and women. They refuse to think. They permit their professors to do all of the brain work and they sit passively in their seats and swallow predigested knowledge in regular doses.

There is no value in a college course in which the student does not think for himself. What of real worth is there in echoing lectures, textbooks, in being a carbon copy of a member of the faculty?

A professor complained the other day that his examination papers were horrible examples of attempts to memorize his lectures, and thereby receive good grades. He claimed that with but three or four exceptions there was no original thinker in his class, that his words were merely swallowed and mechanically transmitted upon examination tablets.

This is the fault of college students today. Their education is emptied into a barrel and tapped at various intervals.

It is not knowledge, but the power to think, which knowledge should create, that is valuable, that should be emphasized.—Ohio State Lantern.

AN ABUSE OF THE LIBRARY

It does not seem bold to assume that the purpose of the library is to give access to books and to provide a place where students can use them. The books the library furnishes; but one often doubts whether it provides the proper place to study them. The defect is not to be blamed to anyone but the student body itself, and to only a small fraction thereof. But the one person in each ten or twelve, who feels that he must make his sojourn at the library as sociable as possible, is enough to disturb a whole table, and often the neighboring tables as well. The impulse to chatter and laugh, to the annoyance of those who are at the same table for the purpose of working, and for whom alone the library facilities are intended, does not signify anything fundamentally malicious, but it does signify an inherent lack of consideration. It is in case in which we students show a lack of manners. By manners one means, not superficiality or a mechanical observance of some few conventions, but an innate respect for the privileges and rights of others. This abuse of the library is so customary that one English instructor gave us the subject for a theme, "The Use of the Library as a Social Center for Students." The situation, if less sad, would be laughable. The defeat of the purposes of the library by a few talkative and idle college men and women in the cold-blooded and brazen manner we see daily is enough to make one doubt the value of education for some people.—Daily Cardinal.

Are You Thinking About a New Spring Suit?

Most men are interested—many have already bought. We believe you will enjoy seeing and trying on a few of these new Kensington and Kuppenheimer models—and we invite you to do so the first time you can take a few minutes for that purpose.

In our judgment they are the very best ready-for-service garments that are being produced in America today. You already know the reputation of Kensington clothes for fitting and "staying fit." Kuppenheimer garments also will meet your requirements in every way.

The first cost of these clothes may be slightly more than some, but they're undoubtedly cheaper in the end. Our new price range brings them within easy reach of most men—

Stars Get Passports

J. A. Gillman, 1916, captain of the Harvard football team for next year, was dropped from college by the university authorities Tuesday afternoon because of deficiencies in studies. Two other football "H" men were dropped for the same reason, Boles and Enright. Boles was one of the best pitchers on the Harvard baseball squad. At the same time, E. W. Ecker, manager of the second football team, was also dismissed by the authorities.

fore an audience of 3,000, has been affected by an eleventh hour action on the part of the eligibility board of the university, when they forced from participation all ineligible. In several of the acts the leading roles had to be assumed by understudies, because of scholastic dereliction on the part of the original casts. Only one act, namely, the German, did not suffer, since the participants in this act are all children.
