TO CHOOSE TRACK TEAMS SATURDAY

INTER-CLASS MEET TO PICK VARSITY AND FROSH SQUADS

Coach Reed Believes Cornhuskers Will Clean Up in Track This Year

The varsity and freshmen track teams will be chosen Saturday afternoon, when the first big outdoor track meet of the year will be held on Nebraska field. The meet will be an inter-class affair, with the dope apparently favoring the two underclasses. From the men who show the best form in the various events will be selected the university team that will represent Nebraska in her dual meets, and the freshmen who show up the best will be placed on the first year team that will have several little track sessions of its own.

Guy Reed, coach, declared yesterday afternoon that it was his firm conviction that Nebraska would have a better track team this year than for a number of years past. Last year the season was almost a failure, but the new material in sight, and the improvement in some of the old, seems to warrant the coach in the belief that the Cornhuskers will equal their football and basketball records of 1916-16, on the track and in the field.

BASEBALL SCHEDULE FOR FRATERNITIES

The inter-fraternity baseball schedule is given below. The frats have been divided into two divisions, which will play until each fraternity has played every other fraternity in its division. The one having the highest percentage will be champions of its division, and will play the champion of the other division for the inter-fraternity championship. One game must be played each week.

WOULD RAISE FRATS IN SCHOLASTIC WORK

National Inter-Fraternity Council Securing Information

Many of the local fraternities have received questionnaires from national officers, on behalf of the national inter-fraternity council, in which the proportion of fraternity men who graduate, the reasons for leaving school of those who drop out, and other similar questions are asked.

The inter-fraternity officers are making an exhaustive study of scholarship conditions in the fraternity world, with the desire of learning the reason for low standards where they are found, and discovering the means of raising them. The Nebraska fraternities are making a very good showing in the reports, it is said.

SENIORS WILL PLAY CLYDE FITCH COMEDY

Abandon "Love's Labor Lost" Because of General Dissatisfaction

Instead of Shakespeare's "Love's Labor Lost," the senior class of the university will present as its play this year Clyde Fitch's "The Girl With the Green Eyes." The change in the play was made because of the general dissatisfaction in the class over the former choice.

The try-outs will be held Saturday afternoon at the Temple theatre at 2 o'clock. The book is on the reserve desk of the library. There are twenty-two good parts in the play, and with the change, a large number are expected to try out.

GARRETT EDITED YESTERDAY'S DAILY

The editor of the Engineer's number of The Daily Nebraskan, issued yesterday, was M. M. Garrett, junior in the engineering college, and member of Sigma Tau. Garrett had collected a great deal of splendid material that could not be used, but it is hoped that space will be found before the end of Engineering Week to publish all of it.

STUDENTS PLAY WARD POLITICS

Many Glean Sheckels in Boosting for Candidates

Many university men received their first initiation into ward politics yesterday, when from 8 until 8 o'clock, during the time the polls were opened, they passed out cards for various candidates, at the rate of $2.50 or $3 a day. The year of a presidential election is always a fruitful one for the students who need a little money, and none were disappointed who wanted work Tuesday.

Some of the campaigns on the last day were managed locally by university students. Chas. E. Epperson, and William Ritchie, jr., an alumnus, helped many needy ones to a few extra "cartwheels."

European Technical Colleges

A complete discussion of the subject, "Technical Education in Europe," is not possible in a short article; and as the writer from personal observation only knows the technical colleges of Germany and the Scandinavian countries, a more detailed description will be given of these institutions than of those of other European countries.

It might be of interest first to give an outline of the early history of some of the European technical colleges.

The majority of these institutions had a very modest start as trade and building schools, nearly all of the present German colleges started as such about one hundred years ago. The oldest real technical college conducted upon the modern plan (not merely a trade school) is the Ecole Polytechnique in Paris, which was established in 1794. The next was a similar institute at Prague, Bohemia, which adopted the system of the Paris institute in 1806; then came the institute at Vienna, which made a similar change in 1815.

The technical colleges in Germany and other European countries were all founded during the nineteenth century.

A German technical college is, contrary to what is the case in this country, always separated from other colleges, where law, medicine, etc., are taught; such a college of the highest type is called Technische Hochschule, literally translated into English, Technical High School; it might also rightly be translated with the English word "University," as a similar institution in this country would be called a university, although the German word Universität only applies to an institution where other sciences, as law and medicine are taught.

In some countries, for instance Belgium, England and Russia, the universities have an engineering col-

TWENTY HOURS JOY IS IVY DAY PLAN

CITY CAMPUS AND ELECTRIC PARK TO BE USED

Usual Ceremonies, With Added Stunts—Dancing to be a Feature

Twenty hours of stunts is planned for Ivy Day, May 10, according to the announcements made at the meeting of all Ivy Day committees in Law 101 yesterday. A morning program on the city campus, and an afternoon and evening program at Electric park, will make the day the most enjoyable holiday of the present year, and of past years too, according to the plans of the committees.

It is planned to have the usual morning exercises on the campus—the crowning of the May Queen, the planting of the ivy, the singing of the song and the May Pole dance, the senior class poem, and the Ivy Day oration. Guy Chambers will have the oration, but the name of the May Queen is known only to a select circle of the Black Masques and the girl herself, and its revelation will as usual be one of the most interesting things on the program.

The afternoon stunts are to start at 1:30 at Electric park, southeast of Lincoln. The entire resort, concessions and all, has been leased for the day. There will be dancing on the ball room floor all afternoon and evening, except for the hours when other stunts are planned. From 1:30 until 2:30 there will be games, dancing and athletic contests.

At 3:30 the Innocents who will direct the activities during 1916-17, will be tapped. The Black Masques will be chosen also, and this ceremony will last until 5. Dancing will then be resumed. The band will play at 6:30, giving an open air concert while the picnickers are launching. At 8:30, in the open air theatre at the park, various organizations will present dramatic sketches, and after that dancing will complete the evening.

NEXT SUBSCRIPTION DANCE APRIL 29

Dancing at Capital Beach, With Boating in Moonlight

The second subscription dance of the year will be given April 29, at Capital Beach, with Max Miller and Joe Seacrest in charge. This will be the first of the open air parties, and the managers declare that there is already a heavy demand for tickets.

Ward's enlarged orchestra of fifteen pieces will play the seductive and blaring strains for the one-steppers. Arrangements have been made for those who like the water on a moonlight evening to secure boats, and the whole affair will be a splendid party, if Miller and Seacrest can be believed.

lege, as in this country, but both in England and Russia separate engineering colleges exist on the German plan.

It is a curious fact that up till about 20 or 30 years ago the technical colleges of Germany were by the general public and also by the universities thought of as inferior institutions as compared with the universities. The cause of this is probably that all of the leading institutions have had a very humble start as a small trade and building school and the general

LYELL RUSHTON A G. D. COOK

It is really too romantic to keep it under the hat any longer. The spectacle of Lyell Rushton peeling spuds, cracking nuts, and preparing such other edibles as sorority girls thrive upon—this domestic scene should not be hidden.

It happened this way, at the Delta Gamma house:

The girl who is wont to prepare the menus for the D. G.'s went a-visiting last week-end, and the girls were without a cook. So they allotted the different meals to different girls to prepare in couples, letting them exercise their ingenuity as to the bill of fare. The dinners and suppers and breakfasts and luncheons were really quite good, it is said.

Rushton happened out that way one afternoon, learned the condition of affairs, and promptly declared chaffing one of his strong points. He was put to work, and in the most approved fashion skinned the potatoes, and pounded the steak—that is, if delicate girls eat steaks that must be pounded, Rushton did it.

But they couldn't persuade him to stay and enjoy the meal he helped prepare.
