THE SECOND INNING ALL THAT WAS NEEDED

Work of Sides for School of Commerce Team the Bright Feature of the Game

In one wild orgy of errors, two-base hits and runs the Commercial school nine won from the Aggies yesterday afternoon on Nebraska field, 7 to 0. The rout of the farmers was complete, but they put up a good exhibition of baseball in all except the single inning that marked their doom.

The Commerce nine displayed a tight brand of ball, in which the pitching of Sides was easily the feature. Sides held his opponents to three hits, but that doesn't tell all of the story. He fanned two, five went out on measly taps to Sides which were relayed to first base, and Sides also started a double play. Again, he caught Selzer napping off second in the first inning, and by a quick throw to Smith put him out.

So it was Sides' game yesterday. He was the whole story and there is little more to be said. Clemmons, of the Aggies, twirled a good game when he got in, but his efforts were too late. Selzer was the only Aggie who could hit the ball.

The day was raw and cold, and a thin and shivering crowd of spectators witnessed the contest. It was the first victory for the School of Commerce nine, and the first game of the Aggies, the forfeit of the Laws to them last week having been recalled with the reorganization of the Law team.

Why Not a Student Council?

The student body is familiar with the several editorial policies of The Nebraskan. Among them are: The abolition of unnecessary noise, the League of the Second Generation, the Student Union, and the Single Tax. We feel that the success of these policies will mean much to Nebraska. These proposed institutions should have been a part of student life long ago, and further delay is useless.

But this semester, under the best of conditions, cannot see the goal that we long for reached. We can lay the foundation for the Union; we can begin the League of the Second Generation; we can enact the Single Tax; we can abate the noise for the time being. But the present student body ceases when this semester ends. There is no institution that can assure that next year they can begin where we left off. In other words, there is no institution at Nebraska that unifies student life.

Nebraska is practically alone in this respect. There is scarcely an institution of higher learning in the United States that has not some form of student government. The Student Council is far more prevalent, and far less questioned, than either the Student Union or the Single Tax.

We propose, therefore, that a Student Council be organized at Nebraska; that it consist of about twenty or twenty-five members, chosen from the various colleges about the school; that it have general legislative, administrative and judicial powers not inconsistent with the rules of the regents and the university senate.

The first argument that we will hear in opposition to this plan is that the Student Council idea is dead at Nebraska. It will be alleged that two years ago the matter was brought before the students and little attention paid to it.

The affair two years ago was farcical from beginning to end. It was so conducted as to permit no examination into the merits of the case, nor were the students allowed the slightest chance to express their opinion. The idea is not dead at Nebraska.

If the Student Council is to be properly begun at Nebraska, it should be organized this semester, so that it can begin its work at the beginning of next year. But it cannot be successfully organized this semester unless all loyal Nebraskans get together and boost, forgetting picnics and spring fever. It will mean a proper unification of student life.

Remember the new Cornhusker motto, "For Nebraska, We Will."

DR. AVERY HEADS EDUCATIONAL BODY

National Conservation Congress Appoints Committee to Study Education for Efficiency

The executive committee of the national conservation congress has appointed Chancellor Avery of the state university chairman of the educational committee, which will study departments and teaching methods with a view to securing greater efficiency.

Other members of the committee, which is made up of educators of national and international note, are Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford university; C. P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education; Dr. H. E. Winship of Boston; Dr. Josiah Strong of New York city; Dr. H. S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie foundation, and Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Dr. Avery was chosen to head the committee because of his successful experience in a number of lines of educational activity. He is not only thoroughly familiar with education as a subject, but with public school work, agricultural educational work, and the more technical lines from first hand experience.

Prof. J. L. McBrien, now connected with the United States bureau of education and formerly state superintendent of Nebraska, is secretary of Dr. Avery's committee. The reports of this committee will deal in values and avoid as far as possible academic discussion which is now so much in vogue in meetings of educators. The entire field will be canvassed for the purpose of determining what can be done so that the public funds now devoted to education may bring larger results for the public.

Boys Will Be Professors, too

No doubt everybody has noticed the blocks of wood that are nailed on the banisters of the stairways in University hall. Set up at regular intervals these stumbling blocks have totally ruined the topography of the balastrade without adding a bit to its beauty. It has just now leaked out why these have been attached.

Some thirty years ago or so there romped among other carefree youngsters at this school three whom we will call Laurence, Howard and Harry. Being of a mechanical inclination and lazy disposition, they discovered that it saved quite a lot of time, even if it was hard on trousers, to slide down the inviting banister. Besides it filled them with a thrill that rivaled the feeling of those who shoot the shoots. So they fell into the descending habit. But one day, just after 6 o'clock, when Laurence followed his two friends down the railing, he lost control of himself and slid clear down into the basement wheer he landed in a coal bin.

The doctor finally brought him around, but when Laurence got back on the job the new wooden brakes had already rung the knell of the new sport.

Back in the registrar's office are some files where the last names of the enterprising youths were discovered. They are given below in order of their former exuberance: Laurence Fossier, Howard Walter Caldwell and Harry Kirke Wolfe. Sometimes now they are called professors.

ANNOUNCE MENU FOR BREAKFAST

Seniors Will Meet Today to Plan the Feast—Juniors Showing Interest

Doris Scroggin, who has charge of the menu for the junior-senior breakfast to be given at the state farm Saturday morning, has announced the edibles that will be dished out. Each of the lucky ones will be allowed to feast of the following: Coffee, milk, hot sandwiches, in which hamburgers will be included, oranges, bananas, apples, doughnuts.

Miss Scroggin is not the only one who has been busy preparing for the early meal. All of the seniors are going, not only because it is free, but because they remember the breakfast of last year. The seniors will meet today at 11:30 o'clock to discuss the breakfast and make plans for their end of the fun.

"JEANNE D'ARC" IS A NOTABLE PRODUCTION

MISS HOWELL AND UNI. PLAYERS PLEASE LARGE AUDIENCE

Play Excelled in Careful Attention to Details, and Artistry Under Difficulties

Miss Alice Howell's appearance in the title role of "Jeanne D'Arc" at the Oliver theatre last night, before a large audience, must be remembered as a notable event in dramatic circles of Lincoln. With a play that is not of the type to appeal to the average theatregoer, she had the remarkable success of not only keeping the audience interested during the five long acts, but of even arousing them to hearty enthusiasm.

The play was marked by that careful attention to detail which university audiences have learned to confidently expect in Miss Howell's productions. The scenery was equal to any that has been seen in Lincoln during the past season, and better than most. Both the stage setting and costumes were marked by a richness and a perfect harmony with the playtime of the action that denoted the professional rather than the amateur performance. Even the music between the scenes was such as would preserve the dramatic effect during the pauses.

In the part of "Jeanne," Miss Howell confronted the difficult task of reading long speeches, holding the stage alone for long intervals, and still maintaining the interest of those across the footlights. That she succeeded is the highest tribute to the work that she did in the part.

She was supported by a cast of university players that put themselves into the spirit of the play, and responded to the scenes with fine ability. Maurice Clark, DeWitt Foster, Don Marcellus and Lucille Becker rose to the demands of the play in splendid style. "Jeanne D'Arc" fully demonstrated the ability of the students of drama in the state university to acquit themselves with highest credit under the most difficult circumstances. When it is remembered that most of those who played leading roles have been carrying their regular university work, and have appeared in other difficult plays within the past few weeks, their success is the more to their credit.

It is still, however, a matter of

The Student Should Know—

THE PLATTSBURG CAMP

The military camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., is one of a number of such camps for students and business men that have been established for military training. The first summer military camp for students was held in the east, at Gettysburg, and in the west, at the presidio of Monterey, Cal., in 1913. In 1915, camps were established for business men at various places, the one held at Plattsburg following the students' camp, being the largest.

So much interest was shown in this institution by both the students and the business men that during the fall committees representing the students and the business men's organizations and the advisory committee of university presidents have been in conference as to the advisability of the formation of a joint organization. In January of 1916 the merger was accomplished, forming the military training camps association of the United States, which will have the advice of the university presidents' advisory committee, consisting of presidents of a number of the larger universities.

Plans for camps in different parts of the country are being worked out by the association, which has its main office at New York and branch offices Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and other points. The present membership of the association is about 4,100 men, of whom a large proportion are college men. The indications are that the enrollment for this summer will run up into many thousands.
