PAGEANT POSTER OUT; WORK OF MISS BRANSON

cago concert, May 28, at the Art institute.

In the poster, around the central figure, is a conventionalized rainbow arch, the idea of which is taken from Navaho art and myth. The Navaho regards the rainbow as a goddess (goddesses are always represented with rectangular heads), and the rainbow is drawn by them as a woman with a vastly elongated body. They also regard the rainbow as a gate to the cloudy and luminous caves of the gods—possibly from rainbow effects in the great canyons of the southwest.

This image is taken as a symbolization of the second part of the pageant, in its relation to the first. For the rainbow, like sunshine and vegetation, is one of the great phenomena of nature. "Coronado's Vision," as the second part is called, was first thought of by Ralph Northrup, who had hoped to produce a pageant on this theme. His untimely death prevented the execution of this idea by himself. Mr. Alexander thought it fitting that the idea should be carried out in the Pageant of Lincoln, for which it had already been decided that Omaha should be the theme. It is also fitting that members of the Kosmet club, of which Mr. Northrup was a moving spirit, should present the dramatic part of this scene, which is in their hands.

The vision itself—a great illumination of the city of Omaha, seen through a rainbow arch—is the final portion of the pageant, and the part which most fully explains the title of the piece as a whole. "The Gate City" has long been an epithet of Omaha; here the Navaho symbolism of the rainbow, as an arch of promise and a gateway to the treasure of rain and green life, is taken over as befitting to the metropolis of a state which, like Nebraska, is directly dependent upon vegetation for its wealth and hopes. The Navaho symbol is again fitting in that it was from the country of the Pueblo and Navaho Indians that Coronado came on his journey of discovery to the Nebraska country.

The poster has been executed by Miss Bernice Branson, whose work is well known to Cornhusker patrons, and who painted the beautiful poster which attracted so much attention last year.

SOCIETY

CADET OFFICERS' BANQUET
The cadet officers' banquet with their sponsors will be held at the Lincoln hotel this evening at 6:30 o'clock. The regimental and national colors, and stacks of arms will be used for decorations. Colonel H. G. Hewitt, will be toastmaster, and the following will respond to toasts: "The Past of the Military Department," Dean O. V. P. Stout; "The Future of the Military Department," Chancellor Samuel Avery; "Social Life at West Point, and Afterwards," Lieutenant Samuel M. Parker; "Drill at Nebraska," Captain Willard Folsom.

SOPHOMORE HOP
The sophomore hop at Electric park Tuesday evening was well attended. John L. Champ was chairman and Howard Kelly, master of ceremonies. The chaperons were Lieutenant and Mrs. Parker and Prof. and Mrs. C. B. Lees.

VIKING PARTY
The Viking formal, which was later decided to be made informal, was held at the Lincoln hotel Tuesday evening. About thirty couples were present. Pinkerton's colored orchestra from Omaha furnished the music.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Sanborn have

A Kensington Suit Has Backbone

The back-bone of a Suit of clothes is in the fabric and the making. No matter how smart it may look at first, if it hasn't a back-bone of all-wool fabric and skillful making it cannot give you satisfactory wear.

Kensington Clothes have back-bone. They are tailored up to a standard, not down to a price. Instead of having their style pressed in, as some have, Kensingtons have it built in with careful making and the most dependable materials.

That's why they fit and stay fit. It's why they are really cheaper than clothes you'd pay less for to begin with. Won't you stop and see them—it will pay you.
