Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Today is election day and the arguments for, and against the candidates will be many. If you vote, don't make your cross after the candidate's name that is the most melodious, or vote for him because you "really don't care which one gets it," but take a couple of minutes and find out which candidate has the best executive ability—find out his ideals on democracy—discover whether he has ever done anything for the school. Then if you are satisfied that he is the right man, go in and cast an "intelligent vote."

There is no man who has not been tempted to tilt his nose in the air and be a snob. When someone who has no claim to birth, breeding or brains, carries himself with an air of aloofness, and makes himself generally disagreeable, someone else's feelings are hurt. The man or woman who is broad-minded and sensible is the one who displays refinement and the element of human kindness and abandons the unkindness of an "holier than thou" attitude.

The Hughes meeting last evening was a "sign of the times."

The Nebraska state hymn which appears in this issue is a composition which will be sung when we are all gray-haired old men and old ladies.

"Thy manly wisdom—firm to rule;
 Thy womanhood in church and school
 Thy learning, culture, art and peace,
 Do make thee strong, and ne'er shall cease
 To keep thee great!"

When Marcus Poteet resigned his office as business manager of The Daily Nebraskan, the "Rag" lost one of the ablest business men it has had for years. Mr. Poteet knows the advertising game from the beginning and much of the success of the paper this semester was due to his able work on the advertising end of the paper.

CLASS ELECTIONS

Nothing can add so much to the dignity of class offices as real competition at the elections. The man who is elected as the best of several competitors is certain to command more respect than the man who needs only his own ballot to secure his election. Class officers can be, and should be, influential men. There should be more than one candidate for every office when the nominations close tonight. —Exchange.

THE MAN WHO QUILTS

The man who quits has a brain and hand

As good as the next... but he lacks the sand

That would make him stick, with a courage stout,

To whatever he tackles, and fight it out.

He starts with a rush, and a solemn vow

That he'll soon be showing the others how;

Then something new strikes his roving eye.

And his task is left for the bye and bye.

It's up to each man what becomes of him;

He must find in himself the grit and vim

That brings success; he can get the skill,

If he brings to the task a steadfast will.

No man is beaten till he gives in;

Hard luck can't stand for a cheerful grin;

The man who fails needs a better excuse

That the quitter's whining "What's the use?"

For the man who quits lets his chances slip

Just because he's too lazy to keep his grip.

The man who sticks goes ahead with a shout,

While the man who quits joins the "down and out." —Exchange.

BRIEF BITS OF NEWS

J. A. Waddell of Kansas City presented the engineering department with thirty copies of "Addresses to Engineering Students." The book is a series of articles on engineering subjects prepared by the prominent men in this work.

WOMEN AND ADVICE

It is easy enough to understand why the women's magazines print so much about marriage, for matrimony is the one subject in the world nearest and dearest to the heart of every woman, and she will read articles concerning matrimony whether or not the United States goes to war with Mexico. But why do publishers give up so much space to writers whose highest mission seems to be to warn the American business woman against lunches of dill pickles and custard pie, short skirts, thin blouses and designing employers? Regular hours, lot of hot water, common sense shoes, "immaculate shirtwaists" (of fairly thick material) and "neatly arranged hair" are regularly recommended to the business girl in almost any magazine she may pick up. It would seem that the average woman who has brains enough to carry on the routine work of an office should know enough to comb her hair and manicure her nails occasionally without having to consult a magazine.

Another curious thing is that this class of advice should be directed so exclusively to the business woman. No one ever yet read an article enjoining school teachers to beware lest their skirts be cut one-tenth of an inch too far from the ground. One might judge that school teachers live on a higher mental and moral plane, or that less in the way of outward appearance and seemly behavior is expected from the woman who works with children than from her who works with men. Of course, it must be admitted that a fluffy little girl in the schoolroom with the children and a fluffy little girl in the children's father's office are two different propositions with the woman at home.

It is to be hoped that the time is near when women's publications will discover some of the many ways in which they may be of real and valuable assistance to the woman who makes her living through office work. —University Journal.

GOOD COMPANY

(By Karle Wilson Baker, in the Poetry Review of America.)

Today I have grown taller from walking with the trees

The seven sister-poplars who go softly in a line;

And I think my heart is whiter for its parley with a star

That trembled out at nightfall and hung above the pine.

The call-note of a redbird from the cedars in the dusk

Woke his happy mate within me to an answer free and fine;

And a sudden angel beckoned from a column of blue smoke—

Lord, who am I that they should stoop—these holy folk of Thine?

THE CAMPUS AT NIGHT

A moon full round that dare a cloud to hide its face,

A breeze so summer soft, yet pregnant with the fall;

A dream scene rare as any silky, woven lace,

A campus, mellow, melting, edgeless—that was all.

The Campanile, a castle turret—olden times—

Romances that you've dreamed about yet dare not say;

And then far off a human call, and hark! the chiming—

Why, all is just a moon-tint film of yesterday.—Exchange.
